Green Rejects C. I. O. Offer But Predicts Peace Parley

A. F. L. Refuses to Meet Rival's Terms, but Leader Is Hopeful.

Says Move Shows New Unity Desire

Discussion Must Be by Standing Committee, He Insists.

On the Labor Front.

Prospects for a reunion of the 7,000,000 workers in the American Federation of Labor and the Committee for Industrial Organization appeared perceptibly brighter last night.

William Green, president of the A. F. of L., said a peace conference "probably" would be held, following an exchange of telegrams between the two bodies today.

The C. I. O. indorsed a boycott of all Japanese goods, and called for a 5-day week for Government employes.—Page 5.

Reunion Prospect Bright.

By the Associated Press.

Denver, Oct. 15.—The A. F. of L. executive council turned down the latest C. I. O. peace proposal today, but offered to talk peace with the rebel unions on its own terms.

At a press conference tonight, President William Green of the A. F. of L. predicted that the exchange of telegrams "probably" would result in a peace conference.

He said he didn't see how the federation's counterproposal tonight was any different from its standing proposal, but that the C. I. O. attitude had changed.

"A change of sentiment has come over a number of organizations affiliated with the C. I. O.," he said.

Claims C. I. O. Dissatisfaction.

"In some of those organizations there is great dissatisfaction over the unyielding, adamant and uncompromising stand of the C. I. O. leaders," he said.

In a telegram to the C. I. O., the council called today's C. I. O. peace offer "a well designed attempt to mislead the public and to confuse the issue."

"We nevertheless reiterate that the A. F. of L. has a standing committee fully authorized to meet a committee of the C. I. O. for the purpose of taking up the major matters originally in dispute with the sincere desire to effect a just and reasonable settlement, and uniting labor under the banner of the A. F. of L.

"It is to be understood that such a conference is to be held without prior commitments, stipulations, or conditions by either side.

"Please advise when you are ready to meet."

Offer Enlarged Committee.

The A. F. of L. terms were that the C. I. O. send a committee of any number into a conference room with the A. F. of L.'s standing peace committee of three. If necessary, they said, the size of the A. F. of L. committee could be enlarged.

A. F. of L. leaders expressed enthusiasm about the C. I. O. proposal for ten men from each side to try arranging a peace conference, but they looked with expressed suspicion on the stipulation that the conference should be held under the same conditions that were offered in last Tuesday's rejected proposal.

Federation leaders interpreted these conditions as meaning, in plain English, the C. I. O. believed it was now top dog in the labor field and that the A. F. of L. should recognize the C. I. O. had been right all along.

The Federation's fifty-seventh annual convention came to an end early in the afternoon with only a handful of delegates left in the huge auditorium.

In the face of the new peace proposal, the Federation made two warlike gestures toward the C. I. O. during the last session:

The convention decided to continue a special assessment on all member unions to build up the war chest for the C. I. O. fight.

Green ordered the Colorado Fed-

$17,000 Lacking, Roll Call Workers Reach Final Day

Short of its goal by $17,000 as the Red Cross Roll Call drive swung toward its final day, workers were urged again last night to report new members today and carry the drive over the $75,000 quota.

Group chairmen yesterday urged thousands of workers to make reports at once.

The Red Cross all-night broadcast, brought in scores of new memberships.

Davidson Murder Suspect Held Here As Housebreaker

Washington police last night were holding a confessed housebreaker with a criminal record as a suspect in the murder of Elmer J. Davidson, Washington attorney, found dead near Widewater, Va., October 4.

Police pointed out that the man under arrest carried a list of names of soldiers and marines, similar to the list that was found in Davidson's wallet. A check was under way.

Leave Spain At Once, Note Warns Duce

Paris, London to Take Independent Action if He Refuses.

Eden, in Angry Speech, Says Dilatory Tactics Must Cease.

By the United Press.

London, Oct. 15.—British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden tonight demanded swift action to end the danger that the Spanish crisis may precipitate war in Europe.

Simultaneously Great Britain and France joined in a warning to Premier Mussolini of Italy that they will take independent measures to protect their interests unless he immediately withdraws his "volunteers" from Spain.

Eden, in a sharply-worded speech at a political rally at Llandudno, Wales, said Britain is determined not to permit any more "dilatory tactics" to delay the withdrawal of Italian and other foreign troops from Spain.

No nation, he said, could be condemned for "resuming its freedom of action" under such conditions of foreign intervention.

The London and Paris foreign offices were understood to have agreed that if the neutrality body fails again to solve the situation within two weeks, the reopening of the French frontier will be ordered.

It was reported from Rome that Mussolini—impressed, perhaps, by the Franco-British sternness—was contemplating a "symbolic withdrawal" of some of his legionnaires from Spain, providing Britain and France will grant belligerent rights to the Spanish insurgents.

Roosevelt Acclaimed.

Britain and France already have agreed that belligerent rights will be accorded to both Spanish factions as soon as Mussolini shows his "good faith" in quitting Spain.

The decision of the two powers will be communicated to Dino Grandi, Italian Ambassador to London, and nonintervention delegate at tomorrow's meeting.

France appeared to have abandoned her proposal that the British and French navies join in a "peaceful occupation" of the Spanish island of Minorca to prevent it from being taken over by the Italians. It seemed likely that the Minorca situation might be turned over to the Nyon "anti-piracy" patrol in the Mediterranean, of which Italy is a member.

Eden, who paid glowing tribute in his speech to President Roosevelt's recent denunciation of aggressor nations, was said by diplomats to have "taken courage" from the President's stand to warn Mussolini that Britain's patience is at an end and that a "showdown" is inescapable.

It was Eden's sharpest speech since the Italo-Ethiopian crisis two years ago and it appeared to indicate that—beginning with tomorrow's nonintervention meeting—Britain's tone will be firmer.

Mercury to Rise Today Following First Frost Here

Wintry weather and the season's first frost which struck the Washington area yesterday and last night will give way today to fair and slightly warmer weather, the Weather Bureau predicted.

Sweeping down from the Alleghanies, where Frostburg registered a low of 22 degrees, chill winds sent the mercury here down to 34 yesterday and 33 last night. With yesterday's low of 34 was recorded the season's first frost.

Lowest previous temperature here this fall was 40 degrees last Saturday. Yesterday's 34 was the lowest for the first half of October since 1917.

Frostburg's low mark of 22 equaled the temperature of Duluth, Minn., and placed this western Maryland mountain town on the bottom of the Nation's temperature gauge.

Frost struck most sections of the State, and in Hagerstown a quarter of an inch of ice formed on placid water during the night.

U. S. to Seek China Peace By Mediation

Roosevelt Reveals We Will Take Initiative at Brussels.

Formal Bid Is Awaited; Delegate Still to Be Selected.

Far East Mediation.

President Roosevelt said yesterday that mediation of the Sino-Japanese conflict will be the first step undertaken at the conference of Nine Power Treaty signatories.

Belgium formally announced she would invite the powers to hold the conference at Brussels late this month, as Britain had requested.

The First Step.

By the Associated Press.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Oct. 15.—President Roosevelt, interpreting for the first time his recent utterances on foreign affairs, indicated today that the United States would propose that the forthcoming nine-power treaty conference seek to mediate Japan's undeclared war on China.

This would be the initial step at the historic meeting soon to be held in Brussels, he told a press conference, in substance.

But as to what proposals may follow in event the mediation attempt failed the President would not venture any prediction. He said this was an "if" question and besides it was utter, sheer guesswork for anyone to try to say now what America's policy would be in the future.

The President gave the first clarification of his references to foreign affairs in his Tuesday night "fireside" radio chat and his Chicago speech when a reporter asked if it were safe to assume he meant mediation would be the first step of the conference of signatories to the nine power treaty guaranteeing China's territorial integrity.

The President replied that he had said as much in "so many words."

Delegate Not Chosen.

The "so many words" he evidently had in mind were these:

"The purpose of this conference will be to seek by agreement a solution of the present situation in China. In efforts to find that solution it is our purpose to co-operate with the other signatories to this treaty, including China and Japan.

"Such co-operation would be an example of one of the possible paths to follow in our search for means toward peace throughout the world."

It was too early to discuss who might represent the United States at the Brussels meeting, he said. This was in reply to a question whether America's representative would be Norman H. Davis, ambassador at large to Europe.

Bid Predicted for Oct. 30.

Brussels, Oct. 15 (AP).—The Belgian government announced today it would invite members of the nine power pact to meet in Brussels at the end of this month to discuss the Sino-Japanese conflict.

Well-informed sources said the conference probably would meet October 30.

U. S. Awaits Invitation.

The United States last night had not received an invitation to the nine power treaty conference. Officials here, however, have made it clear this country will accept the invitation when it arrives.

Windsors Will Arrive in U. S. In Time for Congress Opening

Gridiron Club Invites Duke to Frolic; Press Club Prepares Welcome.

When Congress convenes in special session November 15, the gallery spectators may include the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, it was indicated yesterday. They are scheduled to arrive in New York on the steamship Bremen a few days before that.

More evidence of the hearty welcome that awaits the royal couple came yesterday when it was learned that the famed Gridiron Club had sent a cable to Windsor, inviting him to its December banquet.

If the former British monarch accepts, he will share a night of merriment with President Roosevelt, members of the Cabinet and a host of other notables. The Duchess, however, would perforce have to be a "widow" that night, for Gridiron parties are strictly stag.

Charles O. Gridley, president of the National Press Club, also has put out the welcome mat for the Duke, who, on his visit to the club in 1919, as Prince of Wales, made a tremendous hit with the Washington correspondents.

Plans for receiving the Duke and Duchess are being made with the utmost delicacy. In a city where precedent is all important in social matters the experts find themselves without precedent for a visit like that to be made by the Duke and Duchess of Windsor.

On their visits to Paris and Berlin, the Duke and Duchess were

White House Visit Prompts Kennedy

Urges Revisions in Capital Gains and Profit Imposts.

By Robert C. Albright.

Appeals for a balanced budget and moderation of business taxes rang through the Administration yesterday.

They followed pointed indications that the President is concentrating fiscal objectives on matching outgo with income after eight successive deficit years.

Within 24 hours, Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and Chairman Joseph P. Kennedy of the Federal Maritime Commission urged modifying changes in the undistributed-profits tax and emphasized budget-balancing aims.

Kennedy, former chairman of the Securities Exchange Commission and White House adviser on stock-market developments, also called for downward "adjustment" of the capital-gains tax, following a White House conference with President Roosevelt.

Tax Change Stressed.

Kennedy said he thought both the capital gains levy and the undistributed earnings tax could be altered in a manner to bring in the same amount of revenue while removing business impediments. He said there was a "very, very good chance of balancing the budget" and that is the thing the President "wants to do most."

Jones in a speech in Houston, Texas, Thursday, hinted the Treasury will recommend changes in the undistributed profits tax to take an onerous load off business. He said business is on a sound basis, and the President is "determined" to balance the budget.

Forecasts of a balanced budget without increases in the total amount of new taxes were touched off early this week by Chairman Robert L. Doughton, of the Ways and Means Committee.

Yesterday at the Capitol, Senator Kenneth McKellar, of Tennessee, ranking Democratic member of the Senate Appropriations committee, Senate Appropriations Committee, Indiana, assistant Senate majority whip, echoed Doughton's views.

Saving Emphasized.

Chairman Fred M. Vinson, of the special House tax subcommittee, called members of his group to meet November 4, with modifications in the undistributed earnings tax and the capital gains and losses levy definitely due for consideration.

Less optimistic about 1938-39 budget-balancing hopes, Chairman Edward T. Taylor of the House Appropriations Committee said it couldn't be "guaranteed," but each of his sub-committees will attempt to trim expenditures to the bone.

Meantime, revised budget estimates for the current fiscal year—to be announced Tuesday—were awaited with interest, as emphasis was laid on departmental savings and impounding of funds. Despite sharp administrative economies, a current year deficit of around $300,000,000 appeared in prospect. This would compare with a $418,000,000 deficit estimated by the President last April. More than $200,000,000 added in unanticipated Congressional spending since that date was expected to be more than offset by departmental cuts.

Following his lengthy conference with the President yesterday at

D. C. to Hunt Out Firms Dodging Business Levy

Investigators Set to Take Field; Tax Deadline Falls Tonight.

Investigators yesterday were preparing to hunt out delinquent business privilege taxpayers as 1,500 business and professional men stormed the subdivision of the assessor's office to get under the deadline.

As they filed their returns, they commented on the tax. Some admitted they had not been "able to figure it out yet." Others, more decisive, characterized the levy as "cockeyed" or "a crime."

With more than 13,000 returns filed, Allan F. Brooks, administrator, estimated that possibly 5,000 are unreported but predicted that not more than 3,000 to 4,000 will be received before the expiration of the filing period at midnight tonight.

He disclosed, however, that he has assigned eight men to start a systematic check-up next week of business and professional men in search of tax dodgers.

"They will take a block at a time," he said, "and will visit every shop, business house, or professional office to see if it has a license to do business.

Court Action Threatened.

"If he hasn't obtained the license or filed a return, our men will demand that he do so at once. If he refuses, we will start court proceedings. Even though he files the return at once, he will be subject to the 10 per cent penalty provided in the law."

The business privilege tax section will remain open until 4 o'clock this afternoon, although the building closes at 1 p. m., so that late-

Incorporators Of Yacht Named In Tax Fraud

R. M. Cadwaladers Accused of Scheme to Withhold Sum Due.

By the Associated Press.

The Government yesterday made a formal charge of tax fraud—accomplished by a purported stock transfer—against a couple recently declared to have incorporated their $2,000,000 yacht to reduce tax payments.

John P. Wenchel, chief counsel of the Internal Revenue Bureau, made the formal charge against Emily R. Cadwalader and her husband, Richard M. Cadwalader, jr., of Fort Washington, Pa.

The Cadwaladers contested a $157,579 deficiency assessment, with a 50 per cent penalty, levied by the Revenue Bureau on their 1932 income. In reply Wenchel submitted a brief contending that the couple filed a "false and fraudulent" joint income tax return for 1932.

The bureau contended that the Cadwaladers transferred to their attorney, Thomas Campbell, 400 shares of stock in the Savarona Ship Corporation, which holds their yacht for the purpose of establishing a loss.

It added that the Cadwaladers, both "with intent to evade tax, fraudulently overstated" the amount of their net capital losses in 1932.

In the recent Congressional tax investigation, Arthur H. Kent, assistant Treasury general counsel, declared the couple incorporated their yacht in an effort to reduce tax payments.

Kent said the 410-foot vessel, reputedly the largest private yacht in the world, was built in Germany in 1931, but never brought into American waters.

New Owner of Weeping Alonzo's Coon Hound Declines to Sell It to Appease Youth's Aches

Weeping Alonzo Whitlock, who lost his coon dog by sale at the Fredericksburg dog mart, can't get back his dog even though several Washingtonians offered to pay the cost of returning it. The new owner will not sell.

Coon dogs, the new owner pointed out, are plentiful in Alonzo's Orange County, but scarce here. He recalled, also, his willingness to return the dog to Alonzo at the mart if he had been asked, as other dogs of the type he wanted were on sale there.

Among those who telephoned to offer their wallets in Alonzo's behalf, after seeing the picture of the weeping Alonzo in The Post, were F. A. Linger, of 3100 Twenty-fourth street northeast; a gentleman with an Irish accent who lives in the 1300 block of New Hampshire avenue, and many others. Linger said he would buy the dog for $12 if the owner would return it.

The new owner, K. M. Knight, of Arlington, who took a day off just to buy a dog like "Queenie," sees another side to the question. He feels Alonzo is in just the right place to get all the dogs like "Queenie" he wants.

Furthermore, Knight doesn't consider himself well off by the purchase. On Alonzo's own word, he pointed out, the hound is not "broken." There are no papers of any sort on the hound, he said, adding:

"I don't know whether I've bought a dog 8 years old or 68."

"And I don't know whether the dog will hunt. As far as paying $6 for the hound is concerned, I paid $6.50. I gave Alonzo 50 cents for the chain that wasn't worth 10 cents.

"The hound was in bad shape when I brought her home. I gave her twice the amount of food I gave my best Gordon setter and have fed her three times today—something that ordinarily shouldn't be done to a dog.

"I do want the people to get my side of the matter. I took off the day from my duties to go to Fredericksburg to buy such a dog as 'Queenie.' I don't see why I should have to lose on that score, especially since I don't know, and have no way of knowing, what I've bought," Knight said.

Some people may have suspected that Alonzo was putting on the usual dog-mart cry for benefit of the newsreel people. The truth is, some children have been requested to pose for photographers at the mart.

'Reds,' Planes Stall Japanese Drive in North

Mystery Craft Aid China's Shansi Army; Invaders Checked at Shanghai.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Saturday), Oct. 16.—Veteran campaigners of the old Chinese "Red Army"—now the Eighth Route Army—aided by squadrons of mysterious new airplanes, today appeared to have stemmed the Japa-

The Japanese military spokesman here admitted Gen. Juichi Terauchi's Shansi campaign had been "halted" and that the Japanese commanders had called for reinforcements.

The announcement came during a lull in the fierce warfare of the last two days on the Shanghai front—in which both sides claimed important gains. It appeared to neutral observers that the rival lines had hammered each other into exhaustion.

Tanks and New Guns Used.

The Japanese northern forces which split off from the columns that penetrated deep into Suiyuan and captured Kweihwa, the capital city, have encountered bitterly cold weather, which was partially blamed for their failure to advance.

The spokesmen here said, however, that they had encountered "most stubborn" Chinese resistance and needed additional men and equipment.

Chinese sources exultantly confirmed this report, declaring that the Shansi forces, using light tanks, new field guns and new airplanes, had shattered the spearhead of the Japanese drive.

The Japanese said their army had driven below Yuanping, about 60 miles north of Taiyuanfu, Shansi capital. The Eighth Route fighters were entrenched at Hsinkow, south of Yuanping.

[Japanese at Peiping declared their northern army occupied Sinhsien, 40 miles north of Taiyuanfu. They also said Japanese troops were pouring into the province through Niagtzekwan Pass, 80 miles east of Taiyuanfu on the Chengtai Railway, according to the Associated Press.—Editor's note.]

Japanese here said the sudden tightening of Chinese resistance was due to Gen. Yen Hsi-Shan storing his world-famous collection of "art treasures," reportedly worth 10,000,000 yuan (about $2,850,000), at Chuanpien, southwest of Yuanping. The general presumably ordered his men to hold out at least until he could cart off his treasures to a safer place.

Checked at Shanghai.

Japanese land and artillery forces were held in check along the 20-mile Shanghai front, while commanders took an accounting of losses from the two-day battle.

Japanese bombing planes went up again today—as they have nearly every day for the last month—in attempts to destroy railways and waterways to the rear of the Chinese lines from Chapei to Naziang. There was some fighting at Woosung Creek, but the lines remained unchanged.

The Japanese reported gains only on the south end of the Hopei section of the Peiping-Hankow Railway, where their columns were reported to have advanced to Neichu, 60 miles south of Schihchiachwang.

Shantung Cities Bombed.

Shanghai (Saturday), Oct. 16 (AP).—Japanese bombing planes today carried the threat of spreading warfare to coastal cities of Shantung, one of the five North China areas Japan is seeking to dominate.

Planes flew over Tsingtao, Shantung's chief seaport, and Chinese officials said they believed Japanese naval vessels would attempt to land troops under the cover of air bombardments.

The threat to Shantung's seacoast came as Japanese troops advancing southward toward Tsinanfu, provincial capital, were slowed by floods. Retreating Chinese opened canal dikes to put large areas of the low-lying country under water.

At Hangchow six Japanese planes, after flying over the city for 30 minutes, dropped a procession of bombs yesterday, badly damaging the main railway station and numerous nearby shops. Three persons were killed and five injured.

Diving one after the other, the planes dropped explosive incendiary bombs on the station. Each plane made a direct hit. One dropped a bomb in the park before the station, damaging all buildings within a hundred yards, including headquarters of the Provincial Relief Association, the railway hotel and the main postoffice.

British Postal Commissioner H. H. Molland narrowly escaped injury.

At Shanghai Japanese naval vessels started a new bombardment of the Pootung industrial area across the Whangpoo River from the International Settlement.

Red Mobilization Reported.

Tokyo, Oct. 15 (AP).—A correspondent at Tsitsihar, in Northern Manchukuo, reported today heavy, mechanized Soviet troop movements through Ulan Bator, capital of Outer Mongolia. The correspondent said Russia had ordered general mobilization of the Soviet Outer Mongolian forces.

Roosevelt's Monopoly Declaration May Be Meaningless Noise to Draw Focus From Rising Prices.

By Franklyn Waltman

IN his Tuesday night "fireside chat," President Roosevelt asserted that "we are already studying how to strengthen our antitrust laws in order to end monopoly—not to hurt, but to free legitimate business." He intimated that on the basis of the study of which he spoke, recommendations for legislation would be made at the special session of Congress.

WALTMAN.

This is somewhat mysterious. As far as this writer can learn there is no special study of the antitrust laws and the problem of industrial monopoly in progress, that is to say, there is no study being made of the type which Attorney General Homer S. Cummings proposed to the President last April.

The antitrust division of the Justice Department, of course, carries on a constant study of the adequacy and effect of the existing antitrust laws. The Federal Trade Commission has various studies in progress regarding monopoly in particular fields and a wealth of such material was accumulated by the NRA before its demise.

But that is not the type of study which should be undertaken if a realistic and intelligent approach to the problem of monopoly is to be made. It is not the type of study proposed by the Attorney General last April. He recommended creation of a committee which would make a thorough and comprehensive examination into the existing laws and situation, coordinate the findings of all agencies concerned with the problem and then do some hard thinking in respect to possible sotions.

Mr. Cummings' proposal envisaged the appointment of a group of outstanding authorities in this field "to study the anti-trust laws as to their adequacy, their enforcement and the desirability of amendment, extension and clarification." He would empower this committee "to enlist the aid of consultant groups both within and without the Government, as the studies will naturally cover a wide area including the relation of anti-monopoly policies to such subjects as patents, taxation, commerce, manufacturing, farming and labor."

* * *

Curbing of monopolies is much too important a matter to deal with in any casual manner. A false step in seeking a remedy may prove far worse than the evil to be corrected. The problem is beset by many and intricate ramifications reaching into every sector of American life. Its solution requires the concentration of the best industrial minds and authorities in the country. Any solution emanating from a wave of the hand would not be worth the paper on which it is written.

One cannot avoid the suspicion that at the moment President Roosevelt is more interested in saying something to shift responsibility for increasing prices and living costs away from his Administration than in seeking a sound program of anti-monopoly policy. It appears that he becomes concerned about monopoly only when rising prices arouse popular muttering, as last spring and again now.

It is tiresome to hear the monotonous complaint from many men in public life that the Federal antitrust laws are inadequate or cannot be enforced when the record shows that a determined, honest effort to enforce them never has been made. There has been too much talk about curbing monopoly and not enough action.

As Assistant Attorney General Robert H. Jackson, who appears anxious to have a try at genuine enforcement of the laws we have—and to correct their imperfections—recently said, "destruction of monopoly has been a high-sounding generality advocated by both political parties in nearly every campaign—but never with a too troublesome definiteness."

In that connection Mr. Jackson quoted Herman Finer's expressive phrase that "to be grandly vague is the shortest route to power; for a meaningless noise is that which divides us least."

There has been too much "meaningless noise" about monopoly and the anti-trust laws.

* * *

What the Roosevelt Administration does about monopoly will determine whether this country will continue to have a competitive economy or one based on collectivism, a direction in which we have been going. Mr. Jackson recognizes that alternative because in his speech already cited he points out that "American business must make up its mind whether it favors the regulation by competition contemplated by our anti-trust laws, or the only probable alternative—Government control."

Walter Lippmann, a close student of the problem and fresh from an exploration into the world-wide tendency toward collectivism, cited that alternative more pointedly when he recently declared that "the restoration of competition is the only possible alternative to socialism, and it would be useless, as well as hypocritical, for anyone to object to the collectivism of the New Deal and yet to cry out that an unmistakable economic monopoly should be tolerated by law."

Dernburg, Ousted by U.S., Dies; Defended Lusitania's Sinking

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Oct. 15.—Dr. Bernhard Dernburg, German propagandist who aroused American anger by his attempts to justify the sinking of the Lusitania in 1915, died today of heart disease after a long illness. He was 72.

Dernburg, who had been colonial minister in the German imperial government, was sent to the United States early in the World War to attempt to win American sympathy for the German cause. His mission, as head of the German propaganda service in America, backfired after the Lusitania was torpedoed. He returned to Germany in June, 1915.

Dr. Dernburg had lived in retirement since the Nazi regime came to power in 1933. He was a Jew and told anybody who cared to listen he was proud to be a Jew.

Cables Were Cut.

When the World War broke out the German authorities cut the transatlantic cables and forbade the export of German newspapers and magazines to the United States. They soon realized the mistake of thus isolating Germany from American public opinion, and sent Dernburg, who spoke excellent English, to plead Germany's cause.

Working nominally under Count von Bernstorff, the Ambassador in Washington, but actually having an independent mission, Dernburg wrote and argued the German viewpoint vigorously and doggedly.

Three days after the sinking of the Lusitania, in a speech in New York he defended Germany's act and thereby wore out his welcome in America. The best Ambassador von Bernstorff could do for him was to secure a safe conduct from the British government which permitted him to return to Germany via Norway unmolested.

Carried Munitions.

Dernburg's defense of the Lusitania sinking was that she was the first British liner that carried munitions and therefore no longer was merely a passenger vessel. He argued it was unfair of the American government to permit its nationals to travel on her in spite of warnings published in New York newspapers by the German embassy.

The Lusitania was torpedoed and sunk by a German submarine off the Irish coast May 7, 1915, and 1,198 men, women and children, many of them Americans, perished.

In 1919 Dernburg functioned as a Democratic party deputy at the Weimar national assembly, which drafted the Republican constitution. In the same year he became Reich finance minister, but resigned, as he disapproved of the Versailles Treaty.

He was a member of the Reichstag from 1920 to 1930. After the Nazi seizure of power, a street named in his honor was changed to Gustloff street in honor of a Nazi leader who was murdered in Switzerland.

Chinese Believed Importing Plane Parts at Manila

Manila, Oct. 15 (U.P.).—Disappearance of crates of airplane parts from Manila docks tonight aroused suspicion in shipping circles that the Chinese government may be importing its war equipment here and flying the planes to China.

One bill of lading, in which Manila was the port terminal, showed 40 crated bombing planes had arrived at the docks here aboard the steamer Taiying, consigned to Dr. H. H. Kung, the Chinese minister of finance.

Only three of the crates remained on the pier today.

Franco Breaks Through Outer Gijon Defenses

Two Monarchist Columns Take Arrindas; Asturias Governor in Flight.

By the United Press.

With the Rebels in Asturias, Spain, Oct. 15.—Two columns of Gen. Francisco Franco's Navarre monarchists today captured the key town of Arriondas and broke the outer ring of defenses encircling Gijon, 27 miles away.

The capture of the wealthy mining town and highway terminus capped a whirlwind advance that resulted in the downfall of 31 loyalist towns and villages in the last 24 hours and drove the Asturian enemy into panicky retreat.

[Infiesto, 20 miles southeast, and Gijon were reported attacked by insurgent bombing planes, the A. P. said. A large section of Infiesto was said to be in flames and more than 50 buildings in Gijon were reported destroyed.

[The loyalist governor of Asturias was one of a boatload of refugees arriving in France—Editor's Note.]

In northeast Spain the loyalists were reported by rebel headquarters to have lost 5,000 men in three days of futile attempts to make headway in the Fuentes de Ebro sector south of Saragozza, Franco's Aragon base.

The loyalist losses included 44 new-model Russian tanks that were captured or put out of commission.

Many of the tanks carried crews of 16 men equipped with rifles, machine guns and bayonets.

Arriondas, in the Cantabrian Mountains southeast of the Asturian seaport of Gijon, was the last outpost beyond the city's main "iron ring," which is supposed to be a semblance of the defense works smashed by the rebels in their capture of Bilbao.

Italians Arm Libya.

Cairo, Egypt, Oct. 15 (AP).—Four of Britain's highest defense officials conferred here today while heavy Italian reinforcements were pouring into nearby Libya.

As a result, British troops may be sent into the western desert next week, where garrisons now are manned by Egyptian troops.

(A Naples dispatch said 2,300 Italian infantry and artillery embarked for Libya. Other contingents had departed in the last few days.)

Febels Lose 30 Planes.

Valencia, Oct. 15 (U.P.).—Thirty rebel airplanes were destroyed today when government warplanes raided Garrapinillos airdrome at Zaragoza on the northern Aragon front.

Over 50 loyalist planes, the government said, bombed and machine-gunned the insurgent airport, dropping incendiary explosives and setting fire to the aircraft and field buildings where the rebels had 75 planes. The attacking planes returned to their base unharmed.

5 Die in Barcelona.

Barcelona, Oct. 15 (U.P.).—Eight persons were killed here tonight in a rebel air raid.

Arms Commissar Ousted, 22 More Doomed by Reds

Moscow (Saturday), Oct. 16 (AP).—Removal of M. L. Rukhimovich from his post as commissar for the defense industry was disclosed today.

His job was given to Mikhail M. Kaganovich, former vice commissar for the defense industry, who went to the United States recently to visit airplane factories.

Rukhimovich was in charge of Soviet Russia's large arms program.

Officials of Buryat, Mongolian republic, were removed from office yesterday as the wide Soviet purge of "spies and wreckers" continued.

I. Y. Veitzer, commissar in charge of retail trade in the Soviet Union, was attacked by the magazine Soviet Trade as responsible for conditions under which stores were stocked with overcoats in the summer and bathing suits in the winter.

Sentencing of 22 more persons to death for unsatisfactory agricultural conditions and wastage of grain was reported.

Spanish May Remove Capital to Barcelona

Madrid, Oct. 15 (AP).—The Valencia newspaper Adelante said today the Spanish government soon would be transferred to Barcelona for economic and military reasons.

Dr. Ludvig Hektoen, Chicagoan, Heads Federal Cancer Drive

Is Named Director of Advisory Council; Dr. Spencer to Be Aide.

Dr. Ludvig Hektoen, formerly head of the department of pathology at the University of Chicago, has been chosen for a key post in the Federal crusade against cancer.

His appointment as executive director of the National Advisory Cancer Council, which was established this year by Congress, was announced yesterday by Dr. Thomas Parran, Surgeon General of the U. S. Public Health Service. He will assume his duties immediately, with offices at the National Institute of Health.

Assisting Dr. Hektoen in administration of the most ambitious campaign against a single disease the government has ever attempted will be Dr. R. R. Spencer, now chief of public health education under Dr. Parran. He is co-developer of the vaccine to prevent Rocky Mountain spotted fever and one of the leading "germ detectives" in the service.

Construction has begun on the buildings which will house the National Cancer Institute, as well as the National Institute of Health, at Bethesda, Md. The land was donated by the late Luke I. Wilson, and Congress has appropriated $750,000 for construction.

Dr. Hektoen is 74 and a native of Wisconsin. He served as director of the John McCormick Institute for Infectious Diseases in Chicago, is the editor of the Archives of Pathology and the Journal of Infectious Diseases, and has written extensively on pathology, immunology and bacteriology.

He has been president of the Chicago Medical Society, Chicago Pathological Society, Association of American Pathologists and Bacteriologists, Society of American Bacteriologists, Society of Immunologists and the Institute of Medicine of Chicago.

British Military Ready to Quell Arab Uprisings

Moslem Grand Mufti Flees as Violence Diverts Police Attention.

By the United Press.

Jerusalem (Saturday), Oct. 16.—British authorities arranged to invoke martial law throughout the Holy Land today as reports reached here of fresh outbreaks of Arab terrorism with shooting in Safed to the north and Hebron in the south.

The grand mufti of Jerusalem, Haj Amin el Husseini, 44-year-old spiritual leader of 837,000 Moslems, was reported to have escaped from the Mosque of Omar when British authorities' surveillance was diverted from him by the series of outrages.

Bulletins proclaiming martial law where printed and held in readiness by the commanders of nearly 10,000 British troops stationed in Palestine to cope with troubles arising from the British plan to divide the Holy Land into sovereign Jewish and Arab states.

The grand mufti, who recently was deposed by British authorities as head of the Arab supreme committee, claims direct descent from Mohammed. He took refuge in the mosque, holiest Moslem sanctuary in Jerusalem, when he was threatened with arrest and deportation along with other members of the Arab supreme committee when the committee was dissolved by British authorities following the assassination of the Galilee district commissioner and a British constable.

Wives and children of police officials and constables in Hebron were being transferred to Jerusalem as a precaution against attacks by the terrorists.

The probability of martial law was strengthened when it was determined that the disbanded Arab supreme committee had been supplanted by an underground organization operating in Damascus, Syria.

Seven additional deaths, including the slaying of two more British constables, resulted from new violence in three sections of Palestine which broke out yesterday.

The disorders included the derailment of a Haifa-Ludd railroad train by a land mine explosion, the bombing of a Jewish bus on the outskirts of Jerusalem and an attack on the Jewish colony of Roshpina on the Syria-Palestine border.

Japanese Hint They'll Attend 9-Power Parley

Spokesmen Say Refusal to Attend Is By No Means Decided.

By the United Press.

Tokyo, Oct. 15.—Japanese acceptance of an invitation to sit with signatories of the Nine-Power Treaty, of which she is one, to discuss the Far Eastern situation, appeared to hinge tonight upon whether other powers would enter the discussions in what Japan would call "unprejudiced" state of mind.

The foreign office spokesmen, while reiterating that no invitation has been tendered, indicated it was by no means established that Japan would refuse an invitation.

Envoy Sees Minister.

The Japanese spokesman said Japan had received "considerable information" about the convocation of signatories at Brussels; probably on October 25. The Belgian Ambassador, Baron de Bassompiere, early this week called on the vice minister of foreign affairs, K. Hourinouchi; presumably to discuss the nine-power meeting.

The spokesman said, that if the conference opens with the assumption Japan is an aggressor, she will find it "impossible to attend."

Mongol Empire Reported.

He said Japan was not taking the American Federation of Labor's demand for a boycott of Japanese goods "very seriously".

Reports of an understanding between Soviet Russia and China, Outer Monogolia's trained aviators and soldiers, acquired additional importance due to the reported fall of Province where Prince Teh's Mongol Kweihwa: the capital of Suiyuan army intends to set up a new Government for the "inner Mongolian Empire."

'Reds,' Planes Stall Japanese Drive in North

Mystery Craft Aid China's Shansi Army; Invaders Checked at Shanghai.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Saturday), Oct. 16.—Veteran campaigners of the old Chinese "Red Army"—now the Eighth Route Army—aided by squadrons of mysterious new airplanes, today appeared to have stemmed the Japa-

The Japanese military spokesman here admitted Gen. Juichi Terauchi's Shansi campaign had been "halted" and that the Japanese commanders had called for reinforcements.

The announcement came during a lull in the fierce warfare of the last two days on the Shanghai front—in which both sides claimed important gains. It appeared to neutral observers that the rival lines had hammered each other into exhaustion.

Tanks and New Guns Used.

The Japanese northern forces which split off from the columns that penetrated deep into Suiyuan and captured Kweihwa, the capital city, have encountered bitterly cold weather, which was partially blamed for their failure to advance.

The spokesmen here said, however, that they had encountered "most stubborn" Chinese resistance and needed additional men and equipment.

Chinese sources exultantly confirmed this report, declaring that the Shansi forces, using light tanks, new field guns and new airplanes, had shattered the spearhead of the Japanese drive.

The Japanese said their army had driven below Yuanping, about 60 miles north of Taiyuanfu, Shansi capital. The Eighth Route fighters were entrenched at Hsinkow, south of Yuanping.

[Japanese at Peiping declared their northern army occupied Sinhsien, 40 miles north of Taiyuanfu. They also said Japanese troops were pouring into the province through Niagtzekwan Pass, 80 miles east of Taiyuanfu on the Chengtai Railway, according to the Associated Press.—Editor's note.]

Japanese here said the sudden tightening of Chinese resistance was due to Gen. Yen Hsi-Shan storing his world-famous collection of "art treasures," reportedly worth 10,000,000 yuan (about $2,850,000), at Chuanpien, southwest of Yuanping. The general presumably ordered his men to hold out at least until he could cart off his treasures to a safer place.

Checked at Shanghai.

Japanese land and artillery forces were held in check along the 20-mile Shanghai front, while commanders took an accounting of losses from the two-day battle.

Japanese bombing planes went up again today—as they have nearly every day for the last month—in attempts to destroy railways and waterways to the rear of the Chinese lines from Chapei to Naziang. There was some fighting at Woosung Creek, but the lines remained unchanged.

The Japanese reported gains only on the south end of the Hopei section of the Peiping-Hankow Railway, where their columns were reported to have advanced to Neichu, 60 miles south of Schihchiachwang.

Shantung Cities Bombed.

Shanghai (Saturday), Oct. 16 (AP).—Japanese bombing planes today carried the threat of spreading warfare to coastal cities of Shantung, one of the five North China areas Japan is seeking to dominate.

Planes flew over Tsingtao, Shantung's chief seaport, and Chinese officials said they believed Japanese naval vessels would attempt to land troops under the cover of air bombardments.

The threat to Shantung's seacoast came as Japanese troops advancing southward toward Tsinanfu, provincial capital, were slowed by floods. Retreating Chinese opened canal dikes to put large areas of the low-lying country under water.

At Hangchow six Japanese planes, after flying over the city for 30 minutes, dropped a procession of bombs yesterday, badly damaging the main railway station and numerous nearby shops. Three persons were killed and five injured.

Diving one after the other, the planes dropped explosive incendiary bombs on the station. Each plane made a direct hit. One dropped a bomb in the park before the station, damaging all buildings within a hundred yards, including headquarters of the Provincial Relief Association, the railway hotel and the main postoffice.

British Postal Commissioner H. H. Molland narrowly escaped injury.

At Shanghai Japanese naval vessels started a new bombardment of the Pootung industrial area across the Whangpoo River from the International Settlement.

Red Mobilization Reported.

Tokyo, Oct. 15 (AP).—A correspondent at Tsitsihar, in Northern Manchukuo, reported today heavy, mechanized Soviet troop movements through Ulan Bator, capital of Outer Mongolia. The correspondent said Russia had ordered general mobilization of the Soviet Outer Mongolian forces.

Roosevelt's Monopoly Declaration May Be Meaningless Noise to Draw Focus From Rising Prices.

By Franklyn Waltman

IN his Tuesday night "fireside chat," President Roosevelt asserted that "we are already studying how to strengthen our antitrust laws in order to end monopoly—not to hurt, but to free legitimate business." He intimated that on the basis of the study of which he spoke, recommendations for legislation would be made at the special session of Congress.

WALTMAN.

This is somewhat mysterious. As far as this writer can learn there is no special study of the antitrust laws and the problem of industrial monopoly in progress, that is to say, there is no study being made of the type which Attorney General Homer S. Cummings proposed to the President last April.

The antitrust division of the Justice Department, of course, carries on a constant study of the adequacy and effect of the existing antitrust laws. The Federal Trade Commission has various studies in progress regarding monopoly in particular fields and a wealth of such material was accumulated by the NRA before its demise.

But that is not the type of study which should be undertaken if a realistic and intelligent approach to the problem of monopoly is to be made. It is not the type of study proposed by the Attorney General last April. He recommended creation of a committee which would make a thorough and comprehensive examination into the existing laws and situation, coordinate the findings of all agencies concerned with the problem and then do some hard thinking in respect to possible solutions.

Mr. Cummings' proposal envisaged the appointment of a group of outstanding authorities in this field "to study the anti-trust laws as to their adequacy, their enforcement and the desirability of amendment, extension and clarification." He would empower this committee "to enlist the aid of consultant groups both within and without the Government, as the studies will naturally cover a wide area including the relation of anti-monopoly policies to such subjects as patents, taxation, commerce, manufacturing, farming and labor."

* * *

Curbing of monopolies is much too important a matter to deal with in any casual manner. A false step in seeking a remedy may prove far worse than the evil to be corrected. The problem is beset by many and intricate ramifications reaching into every sector of American life. Its solution requires the concentration of the best industrial minds and authorities in the country. Any solution emanating from a wave of the hand would not be worth the paper on which it is written.

One cannot avoid the suspicion that at the moment President Roosevelt is more interested in saying something to shift responsibility for increasing prices and living costs away from his Administration than in seeking a sound program of anti-monopoly policy. It appears that he becomes concerned about monopoly only when rising prices arouse popular muttering, as last spring and again now.

It is tiresome to hear the monotonous complaint from many men in public life that the Federal anti-trust laws are inadequate or cannot be enforced when the record shows that a determined, honest effort to enforce them never has been made. There has been too much talk about curbing monopoly and not enough action.

As Assistant Attorney General Robert H. Jackson, who appears anxious to have a try at genuine enforcement of the laws we have—and to correct their imperfections—recently said, "destruction of monopoly has been a high-sounding generality advocated by both political parties in nearly every campaign—but never with a too troublesome definiteness."

In that connection Mr. Jackson quoted Herman Finer's expressive phrase that "to be grandly vague is the shortest route to power; for a meaningless noise is that which divides us least."

There has been too much "meaningless noise" about monopoly and the anti-trust laws.

* * *

What the Roosevelt Administration does about monopoly will determine whether this country will continue to have a competitive economy or one based on collectivism, a direction in which we have been going. Mr. Jackson recognizes that alternative because in his speech already cited he points out that "American business must make up its mind whether it favors the regulation by competition contemplated by our anti-trust laws, or the only probable alternative—Government control."

Walter Lippmann, a close student of the problem and fresh from an exploration into the world-wide tendency toward collectivism, cited that alternative more pointedly when he recently declared that "the restoration of competition is the only possible alternative to socialism, and it would be useless, as well as hypocritical, for anyone to object to the collectivism of the New Deal and yet to cry out that an unmistakable economic monopoly should be tolerated by law."

Dernburg, Ousted by U.S., Dies; Defended Lusitania's Sinking

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Oct. 15.—Dr. Bernhard Dernburg, German propagandist who aroused American anger by his attempts to justify the sinking of the Lusitania in 1915, died today of heart disease after a long illness. He was 72.

Dernburg, who had been colonial minister in the German imperial government, was sent to the United States early in the World War to attempt to win American sympathy for the German cause. His mission, as head of the German propaganda service in America, backfired after the Lusitania was torpedoed. He returned to Germany in June, 1915.

Dr. Dernburg had lived in retirement since the Nazi regime came to power in 1933. He was a Jew and told anybody who cared to listen he was proud to be a Jew.

Cables Were Cut.

When the World War broke out the German authorities cut the transatlantic cables and forbade the export of German newspapers and magazines to the United States. They soon realized the mistake of thus isolating Germany from American public opinion, and sent Dernburg, who spoke excellent English, to plead Germany's cause.

Working nominally under Count von Bernstorff, the Ambassador in Washington, but actually having an independent mission, Dernburg wrote and argued the German viewpoint vigorously and doggedly.

Three days after the sinking of the Lusitania, in a speech in New York he defended Germany's act and thereby wore out his welcome in America. The best Ambassador von Bernstorff could do for him was to secure a safe conduct from the British government which permitted him to return to Germany via Norway unmolested.

Carried Munitions.

Dernburg's defense of the Lusitania sinking was that she was the first British liner that carried munitions and therefore no longer was merely a passenger vessel. He argued it was unfair of the American government to permit its nationals to travel on her in spite of warnings published in New York newspapers by the German embassy.

The Lusitania was torpedoed and sunk by a German submarine off the Irish coast May 7, 1915, and 1,198 men, women and children, many of them Americans, perished.

In 1919 Dernburg functioned as a Democratic party deputy at the Weimar national assembly, which drafted the Republican constitution. In the same year he became Reich finance minister, but resigned, as he disapproved of the Versailles Treaty.

He was a member of the Reichstag from 1920 to 1930. After the Nazi seizure of power, a street named in his honor was changed to Gustloff street in honor of a Nazi leader who was murdered in Switzerland.

Chinese Believed Importing Plane Parts at Manila

Manila, Oct. 15 (U.P.).—Disappearance of crates of airplane parts from Manila docks tonight aroused suspicion in shipping circles that the Chinese government may be importing its war equipment here and flying the planes to China.

One bill of lading, in which Manila was the port terminal, showed 40 crated bombing planes had arrived at the docks here aboard the steamer Taiying, consigned to Dr. H. H. Kung, the Chinese minister of finance.

Only three of the crates remained on the pier today.

Virginia Bishop Backed to Head Episcopalians

The Rt. Rev. Henry Tucker Enters Race on Eve of Balloting.

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, Oct. 15.—Virginia, cradle of Episcopalianism in the United States, was conceded tonight a strong chance of giving the Protestant Episcopal Church its first presiding bishop from that State.

While the re-election of the Right Rev. James DeWolf Perry, of Providence, R. I., was being predicted by many churchmen, the Right Rev. Henry St. George Tucker, Bishop of Virginia, entered the picture on the eve of the election as a likely possibility.

Withdrawal of Bishop Perry, who has served seven years, might make the election of Bishop Tucker almost certain, an authoritative source said. The Virginia bishop was not among the three nominated by a convention committee, but his name is expected to be offered from the floor tomorrow morning.

Under a new canon amendment, Bishop Perry could serve only three more years. The canon requires retirement of the presiding bishop on January 1 following the convention after which he reaches the age of 68.

Two Other Nominees.

The other nominees are the Right Rev. William Bertrand Stevens, Bishop of Los Angeles, and the Right Rev. William George McDowell, Bishop of Alabama.

Bishop Tucker comes from a State in which, some historians say, the first Protestant Episcopal church service was held in the United States (in Williamsburg). The State also claims the oldest Episcopal church, old St. Luke's, built near Smithfield in 1632.

The convention decided to hold the 1940 convention in Kansas City.

A canon amendment, approved today by the House of Deputies, would require couples to submit a physician's certificate, certifying freedom from venereal diseases, before they could be married by an Episcopal minister. The amendment goes to the House of Bishops for concurrence.

$300,000 for China.

The convention voted to raise $300,000 for missionary and relief activities in China.

The House of Deputies adopted and sent to the House of Bishops for concurrence a resolution indorsing campaigns against syphilis and urging church members to co-operate.

The woman's auxiliary expressed its disapproval of military training in Episcopal schools and colleges, among which is the Virginia Military Institute.

The deputies drastically amended a resolution, already approved by the bishops, which would have defined the presiding bishop as the "Father in God" of the other bishops and have said that through him the church presented the answers of Christ to present-day questions.

Upon motion of Henry A. Bull, of Buffalo, N. Y., who said the resolution gave too much discretionary power to one man, the deputies amended it to read that the presiding bishop should exercise spiritual leadership "within the limits of the canons."

Jail-Break Killer Captured; 2 Gang Aides Are Sought

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Oct. 15.—James Widmer, fugitive slayer, was captured in Philadelphia today and Federal authorities immediately spurred their search for his two desperate companions, Charles and Frank Bird.

Widmer was seized without resistance, as Motorcycle Policemen John Egan and John Foley stopped him. They found an automatic pistol and two sets of license plates in his car.

The "Bird gang" trio in a sensational escape from the tower-like county jail here last month quelled seven deputies with smuggled guns and eluded police in a bullet-punctuated chase through Cleveland streets in which their speeding auto struck and killed a woman pedestrian.

Ohio Highway Patrolman George Conn was executed in gangland fashion near Freeport, Ohio, several days after their escape last September 23.

Widmer and the Birds, the outstanding enemies of the Federal Bureau of Investigation list, along with the Gant-Hunt gang, were awaiting trial for a series of Cleveland bank robberies when they fled.

White Russian Charges Kidnaping by Soviet

Paris, Oct. 15 (AP).—The wife of white Russian Gen. Eugene Karlovitch Miller, charging he had been "kidnaped by Bolsheviks," appealed tonight to President Lebrun for an order to search the Soviet Embassy for evidence of his disappearance.

Mme. Miller charged there were "strong presumptions" of an embassy trap, asserting that the embassy is near the spot where the general went to a rendezvous shortly before he and another Russian general disappeared September 23.

Students Form New Trafficlub At McKinley

50 Pupils Pass Up Game to Join Movement for Highway Safety.

Another student "Trafficlub" was organized yesterday at McKinley Technical High School. Nearly 50 students turned out to formulate plans for their organization.

William Zeller, McKinley leader in the initial "Trafficlub" movement, was named temporary chairman. He will appoint a committee authorized to study recommendations for traffic safety in the vicinity of McKinley.

The American Automobile Association, represented by Richard Ham, local safety director, demonstrated mechanical driver testing devices. Charter members were put through a series of tests — and everyone passed.

The new "Trafficlub," operating similar to other groups throughout the city, will hold regular meetings to discuss traffic problems near the school and suggest remedies to better safeguard students.

Information and publicity for the McKinley Club will be handled by Sarah Jane Williams, a member of staff of Tech Life, school publication.

Gravedigger Hurt In 1-Mule Revolt Over Euthanasia

After digging a grave for "Charlie," former Government mule who was to be killed because of old age, Stephen Queen, colored, 23, of 513 Twenty-fourth street northeast, brought a bucket to water the animal before a veterinarian put it out of its suffering. Charlie bucked and kicked—sending Queen to Casualty Hospital, where he was treated for a possible fractured pelvis.

The execution went off according to schedule, however, and an hour later Charlie was in his grave. Also dead was Pewee, another mule bought from Government two months ago by Miss Virginia W. Sargent, 3900 Wheeler road southeast, of the Animal Protective Association. A third mule, more hardy than the rest, was spared.

Messiah to Find Auto De-Glorified

Pasadena, Calif., Oct. 15 (AP).—Father Divine's $28,000 ten-passenger "throne car" is ready at a coach shop here, but John Wuest (John the Revelator) Hunt, who ordered it, never would recognize it.

Hunt is serving a three-year prison term for transporting 17-year-old Delight Jewett from Denver to Beverly Hills, Calif., for immoral purposes.

The striking color scheme Hunt specified for the car has been toned down to a sedate dark green, and a white, star-spangled canopy, under which the colored "Messiah" was to sit, has been replaced by conventional upholstery.

Yale Head Takes Stand Against Dictatorships

New York, Oct. 15 (AP).—Charles Seymour, president of Yale University, declared here tonight that there must be no question where Yale stands on the undecided issue between democracy and dictatorship.

Yale was founded, Dr. Seymour said, on the creed that "there is no selfish interest which can be permitted to override righteousness."

$8,000 Fee Fails to Drive Imp Out of Patient; Gypsy Jailed

Witch Doctor Produced Nail in Egg but Victim Wasn't Convinced It Was His 'Evil Spirit' Because His Stomach Still Ached.

By the United Press.

New York, Oct. 15.—There was a wail and a wild waving of arms among the gypsies in the corridors of General Sessions Court today, for Anna Costello, matriarch of the tribe, had just been convicted of extorting $8,000 through illegal traffic with the evil spirits.

The district attorney contended Anna fled West after getting $8,000 from Nicholas Vetrella to drive an evil spirit out of his stomach into the body of a white rooster.

Vetrella complained of pains in the stomach and Anna ordered him to go out and buy six eggs and put one of them under his bed. He did so, and the next day Anna cracked the egg and inside of it was a nail. She told him the evil spirits were beginning to pass out of his body—and she collected $500.

For $1,000 more she drew out additional spirits. Vetrella bought a white rooster and Anna rubbed it against his shoulder. The chicken walked about three feet, writhed and fell dead. Anna opened the rooster's mouth and found five marks inside of it—each mark, she said was the mark of an evil spirit and cost $100 additional.

Other items were $20 for incense and candles; $100 for burying eggs, filled with evil spirits, in Paterson, N. J.; $350 for buying clothes for evil spirits that were buried on Long Island and for hiring two gypsies to trample the spirits back into the earth when they rose from the grave.

Then came the day when Anna told Vetrella the spirits were angry because he kept the remainder of his money in the bank. He was advised to draw out his money so Anna could buy English "gold," which she rubbed on her face and then "prayed to Allah."

The next time Vetrella came to do battle with the spirits, Anna was gone with all the rest of his money. He thought it over two days and then went to the police.

Anna will be sentenced October 26 to a prison term of from five to ten years. Vetrella says his stomach still hurts.

Indictment Spurs Hunt for Hook in Numbers Slaying

Efforts to locate Thomas Henry Hook, former District policeman, were redoubled yesterday with announcement by the Circuit Court at Upper Marlboro that he had been indicted by the Prince Georges County Grand Jury for the murder of Samuel Jeffrees, colored, of Camp Springs, Md., two weeks ago.

Hook is the third man to be indicted in the "numbers racket" slaying. The other two, Fred Schinman and Frank Guy, colored, both of Washington, are in custody. Schinman is being held by Washington police pending extradition proceedings, and Guy is in the Marlboro jail.

Jeffrees, owner of a night club at Camp Springs, was shot down in front of his establishment allegedly in a dispute over a numbers play.

Dollar Line Drops Voyage to Japan

San Francisco, Oct. 15 (U.P.).—The Asiatic voyage of the Dollar Line freighter Admiral Nulton was canceled today after sailors refused to man the ship without a $150 bonus for taking it to Japan, which the crew considered in the "war zone."

The line announced the freighter Texas had been tied up at Portland in a similar dispute.

Action for Divorce Against Ill Spanish Prince Is Dismissed

Havana, Cuba, Oct. 15 (U.P.).—The divorce suit of the Count of Covadonga and his second wife, the former Marta Rocafort, of Havana, was dismissed today when the count, ill in Miami with a recurrence of hemophilia, failed to appear.

Judge Eduardo Lens, in first instance court, ordered annulment of the proceedings, filed September 3 by the countess and ratified ten days later by both parties. A new suit may be filed if desired.

British Colony Rioters Block Commissioner

Georgetown, British Guiana, Oct. 15 (U.P.).—Unrest among civil service employes and labor groups in this British colony flared into violence today when a crowd of colored in the Golden Grove district forcibly prevented British District Commissioner Malcolm Buchanan Laing from entering his office.

Two colored councilors of the district were beaten. Police reinforcements were called, but the rioters only jeered and refused to move.

Leibowitz Sues Mrs. McLean for Hauptmann Fee

New York Lawyer Claims $15,000 Is Due Him in Lindbergh Case.

Samuel S. Leibowitz, noted New York attorney, yesterday in District Court filed suit against Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean for $15,000 for services he alleged he had rendered in connection with the appeal of Bruno Richard Hauptmann in the Lindbergh kidnaping case.

In his suit, filed by attorneys, C. H. Doherty and Robert L. Jeffery, Leibowitz contended Mrs. McLean retained him in his professional capacity on behalf "of one Richard Hauptmann then under sentence of death" on February 6, 1936. The suit alleged she agreed to pay the reasonable value of his services and the expenses "incident and necessary in the furtherance of his employment."

According to the suit, Leibowitz made numerous trips from New York to Washington to see Mrs. McLean and her agents and attorney, and it was his understanding, according to the papers filed, that he was to endeavor to get a rehearing for Hauptmann before the board of pardons of New Jersey. Numerous conferences with Lieut. Robert Hicks, "defendant's agent;" Nugent Dodds, "defendant's attorney;" Lloyd Fischer, representing Hauptmann; Gov. Harold Hoffman of New Jersey, Col. Mark O. Kimberling, warden of the New Jersey State Prison at Trenton, and Mr. and Mrs. Hauptmann were cited in the complaint.

It was charged that although Mrs. McLean often had been requested to pay for Leibowitz's services, she had refused.

Nelson T. Hartson, of the law firm of Hogan, Donovan, Jones, Hartson & Guider, issued a statement, following the filing of the suit, in which he denied Mrs. McLean owed Leibowitz any money and had not retained him. Hartson described himself as attorney for Mrs. McLean.

New Delay Faced On Health Center

Health Officer George C. Ruhland's health center proposals will have to be approved by Congress again before ground is broken for the first one, it developed yesterday.

Although an appropriation of $165,000 was carried in the current supply act for construction of the initial center, the project was blocked by occupation of the site by 300 colored school children. School officials insisted they had no place to transfer them.

The center was to be erected at First and L street, where the old Jones elementary school stands.

With plans completed for the center, the Commissioners were forced to order an indefinite postponement as an alternative to the ejection of the 300 pupils.

Italy to Follow Nazi Lead in Belgian Pact

Milan, Italy, Saturday, Oct. 16 (U.P.).—A hint that Italy soon will formally recognize the inviolability of Belgian territory and guarantee that country's neutrality was contained in an article appearing today in Mussolini's newspaper, Il Popolo D'Italia.

"Italy's guarantee of Belgian neutrality, which has been virtually assured since March 3, 1937, may be confirmed definitely soon through an official act," the newspaper said.

Germany this week made a similar guarantee, as have France and Great Britain.

200 Americans, British Found Dead in Spain

Perpignan, France, Oct. 15 (AP).—The bodies of nearly 200 American and British volunteers were found by agents of the Non-intervention Committee along the Franco-Spanish frontier in the summer, Col. C. D. O. Lunn, a Danish officer, said today.

Col. Lunn, commander of the International Border Guard, which has been idle since France cancelled the non-intervention control of the frontier, said that most of those found dead apparently became lost in the mountains and wandered until they collapsed from exhaustion.

Mrs. Brooke, of D. C., Chosen National Girl Scout President

Mrs. Frederick H. Brooke, newly elected president of the Girl Scouts, being congratulated by Mrs. Herbert Hoover, retiring president.

Leader in Hospital, Philanthropic and Children's Work Succeeds Mrs. Herbert Hoover as Head of Half-Million.

Mrs. Frederick H. Brooke, of Washington, yesterday was elected national president of the Girl Scouts, to succeed Mrs. Herbert Hoover. She was chosen unanimously at the annual convention of the organization's council in Savannah. The Girl Scouts have a membership of 440,000.

A popular and attractive hostess, who long has interested herself in civic and philanthropic activities, Mrs. Brooke has been in Girl Scout work since 1917.

For the past four years she has been national chairman of the field division. Previously she held many local and regional positions and was a member of the national board.

To Washington generally she is probably best known for the outstanding work she did in introducing the garden subsistence program in 1932 as a "depression measure which should be made permanent," and for her efforts in behalf of the last President's Ball, of which she was vice chairman.

The wife of an architect, Mrs. Brooke follows her own advice about gardening and is so fond of gardens she has two—the one she is reconstructing at the old home of Senator Tydings in Georgetown, where she moved recently, and a seashore garden at a summer place near New Bedford, Mass.

She travels almost entirely by plane, is an enthusiastic swimmer, and the mother of two sons and a daughter.

Among the many congratulations reaching her in Savannah was one from the Children's Hospital of Washington, where she has been a member of the board for 15 years and is president of the board of lady visitors.

Scientific Astrologers' Leader Hotly Denounces 'Charlatans'

Chairman of New D. C. Society Says Mathematics of Stars Decide Our Destinies; but he Doesn't Use Them on Stock Market.

If someone else had been born at the same time and the same place as you, he would talk, act, think and even look like you—which would be very confusing.

Scientific astrology will prove that and lots of other things, according to Ernest A. Grant, temporary chairman of the newly founded Washington Astrological Society, which held its first meeting at the Hotel Raleigh Friday night.

Stressing the scientific aspect of his avocation, Grant, in an interview before the meeting, bitterly denounced the "charlatans and quacks," who infest the field.

Grant became interested in astrology when he was studying Egyptology, he said. In the past few years, he has taught 300 Washingtonians the principles of scientific astrology, including doctors, lawyers, Government employes, nurses, a business executive or two and even a psychiatrist.

Of the audience, consisting chiefly of women, 45 persons joined the society, Grant stated. A committee on organization was appointed to draw up a constitution and by-laws, as well as a code of ethics to maintain the society on a strictly scientific plan. Its members are: William E. Covey, accountant, and Swan A. Erickson and Mrs. Bessie S. Anderson, Government employes.

Grant, who during business hours is a research worker with the SEC, doesn't try his astrology on the stock market. "There isn't exact enough information," he said; and added, with a wistful look, "but it could be done."

Judge Orders Witness To Reply in Fraud Case

New York, Oct. 15 (AP).—Mrs. Marie Barrows Porter, of Park avenue, was ordered by Federal Judge Samuel Mandelbaum today to answer questions put to her before the grand jury concerning Philip H. Philbin, jr., who is awaiting trial on mail fraud charges growing out of the sale of Atlas Tack stock.

First Wife, 47, Slays Second, 33, and Herself

Woman Killer Was Recently Divorced by Waiter, 35 Years Old.

San Francisco, Oct. 15 (AP).—Fred J. Reynolds', 47-year-old divorced wife and his 33-year-old bride of two weeks met and died today in a burst of pistol fire.

Police said the divorcee, Mrs. Nell Reynolds, 47, planned the meeting and fired the fatal shots.

The bride was Mrs. Neoma Nelson Reynolds, 33, Dallas, Tex., who divorced Clarence Nelson in Reno, May 25, but who received word less than three months later that he died fighting for the Spanish loyalists. She then married Reynolds.

Reynolds, a 35-year-old waiter, said that the tragedy probably was caused by jealousy. He said his bride came here about a week ago and presumably was looking for work.

Reynolds divorced his first wife in Reno six days prior to his second marriage.

Notes found by police indicated Mrs. Nell Reynolds, angered by the loss of her husband, stalked the bride for several days.

The police inspector said Mrs. Nell Reynolds drew an automatic pistol, fired at the other woman and then turned the weapon upon herself. The bride was dead when officers arrived. Mrs. Nell Reynolds died later in a hospital.

Pigs Again Cause Row on Peaceful Canadian Border

Bellingham, Wash., Oct. 15 (AP).—For the second time in 81 years a pig was blamed today for trouble on the peaceful international boundary line between the United States and Canada.

Back in 1856 a British porker rooted up the crops of Yankee Settler Lyman E. Cutlar on San Juan Island and nearly precipitated a war—the "54-40 or fight" incident.

Today Mrs. Zella Minnick, Canadian, charged her American neighbor, John Scheres, struck her. Scheres said Mrs. Minnick's pigs crossed the line and rooted up his crops. But this matter was left to a United States justice of the peace.

Control Is Sought On Court Building

Action will be sought at the next session of Congress to transfer jurisdiction of the as yet uncompleted Police Court Building to the Department of Justice, it was learned last night following the disclosure that Joseph B. Keenan, Assistant to the Attorney General, and United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett had been in conference.

Col. Garnett requested space in the new building for a grand jury room. He pointed out that the present quarters are inadequate.

The District Commissioners, who were given jurisdiction over the building at the last session of Congress, recently decided against the proposal to turn over quarters to the grand jury. They preferred, it was stated, to place improperly housed District departments in whatever space is available in the new building when it is completed shortly.

U. S. Surveying Effect of Rules On Stock Slump

Seeks to Determine if Need Exists for Change in Regulation.

By the Associated Press.

Government financial agencies reported yesterday they are making a thorough survey to determine whether the persistent downward trend in security prices necessitates readjustment of Federal controls over the stock market.

Officials expressed the view no action is imminent. They added, however, that the Federal Reserve Board, the Treasury and the Securities Commission will continue to scrutinize existing policies until some decision is reached or a reversal occurs in price trends.

The Federal Reserve Board discussed the market situation in a day-long session. Their protracted discussion followed by a day an address in which Winthrop W. Aldrich, chairman of the board of the Chase National Bank of New York, urged modification of Federal regulations.

Short Selling Control Foreseen.

Officials were close-mouthed regarding the meeting, but indicated no conclusions were reached.

"You can no more guess what the board may do than you could predict a Supreme Court decision," one spokesman remarked.

Rumors the board might seek to impose margin controls over short selling were described by authorities as "only speculation."

The board does not now employ such controls, but officials said the consensus among Federal Reserve attorneys is that the board could impose them under the law. These regulations might require a short seller to put up a substantial percentage of the value of a security in cash, thus tending to discourage short sales.

Margin Cut Is Possible.

Another step open to the board is reduction of the present requirement that securities buyers put up 55 per cent of the purchase price in cash. A reduction in this ratio presumably would tend to increase buying.

The Treasury was reported studying effects of the market decline on collections under the capital gains levy.

Several business spokesmen recently have contended the tax discourages trading, and that its relaxation would increase confidence in the market.

Any Treasury recommendations for modifying this levy would be contained in a forthcoming tax revision report to Congress.

Many Study Situation.

New York, Oct. 15 (AP).—Search for concrete data to throw light on causes of the severe decline in the stock market since mid-August proceeded today in separate inquiries by the Federal Securities and Exchange Commission and the New York Stock Exchange.

David Saperstein, chief of the SEC trading and exchange division, conferred with bankers and brokers as he gathered information for a report to the Commission.

The stock exchange accumulated a mass of data on recent transactions in a few pivotal stocks, including United States Steel, with the object of finding out where the selling had come from and what role short selling had played in the decline.

Walkout Is Voted By Longshoremen At Ports in South

Jacksonville, Fla., Oct. 15 (AP).—V. E. Townsend, representative of the International Longshoremen's Association, announced today coastwise longshoremen had voted to strike at midnight in South Atlantic ports.

Some 1,200 workers walked out at Tampa, on the Gulf Coast, this morning.

Townsend said the strike call affected more than 8,000 longshoremen, clerks and checkers.

Longshoremen asked a wage increase, an eight-hour day, and time and one-half for overtime.

Self-Help Project Sounds Plea for Skilled Workers

The Washington Self-Help Exchange, 2529 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, new community unemployment project, has some jobs open—for experts who are willing to work for scrip.

Carpenters, cabinet makers, shoemakers, seamstresses, mechanics, stenographers, a beauty shop operator, a cook and a storekeeper are among the "experts" needed.

Mrs. David Cushman Coyle, secretary of the exchange board, pointed out yesterday that it takes experienced workers to run any business. She said unskilled workers have been turned away fro mthe exchange because there were not enough skilled persons there to keep the projects going.

"We cannot just put a room full of unskilled persons to work on shoes, for instance. We have found, however, that one skilled person can keep many other going and serve as a leader.

"We thought there must be several persons with limited incomes and small pensions would be glad to work for us. We pay only in script, which can be used only to purchase things made in our shops," she said.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

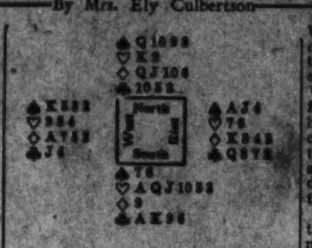
By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

Underleading Aces.

The out-and-out beginner at bridge is irresistibly led to laying down Aces as fast as he can draw them from his hand. When he gets out of the freshman class he is quite apt to swing to the other extreme, viz., to underlead Aces, with joyful abandon. It goes without saying that neither philosophy is correct.

Let us, for the nonce, take up the matter of underleading an Ace against a suit contract. The primary object for underleading an Ace is deception. When such a lead is well chosen, the leader has reason to believe that the dummy will come down with the King of that suit, possibly the King and Jack; otherwise, there is no point to the lead. Obviously, the only grounds the leader could have for figuring this state of affairs would be that dummy had done some strong bidding. If the closed hand has done almost all the bidding, there is absolutely no justification for the underlead of an Ace. Perhaps I can make this point clearer by analyzing the following hand:

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

West, who had just graduated from the Ace-leading grade, decided to lead the deuce of diamonds. Dummy played the ten, and East, quite correctly, ducked! Having avoided the certain diamond loser, declarer had no trouble in fulfilling his contract, finally conceding one club and two spade tricks.

I have said that East was correct in ducking to the first lead and I shall prove it. Dummy had shown no signs of strength; he had, in effect, merely kept the bidding open. South had shown a very big hand. Why should West, if he held the diamond Ace, decide that a deceptive lead through dummy was necessary? From East's point of view, West's diamond deuce was the fourth-highest of a suit probably headed by the nine spot. In that case East would be a plain half-wit to put up the King only to see it smothered by a singleton Ace in declarer's hand, and two diamond tricks established in the dummy.

The point is that East knew that the bidding had been such as to make the underlead of an Ace on West's part ridiculous. In a sense, therefore, his failure to put up the King was a compliment to West—a statement that he could not dream that his partner was making such a silly opening lead.

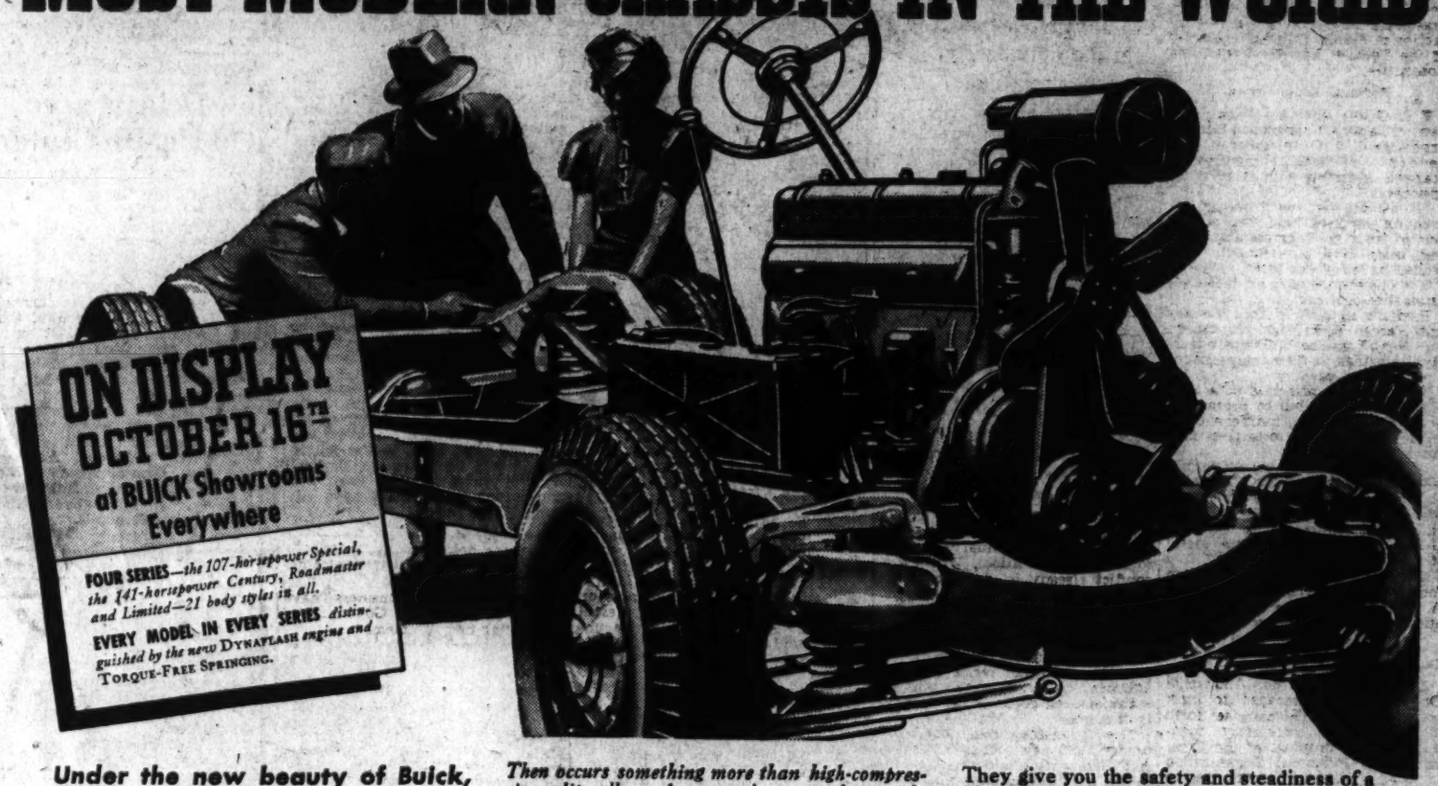
GENTLEMEN WE GIVE YOU THE MOST MODERN CHASSIS IN THE WORLD



ON DISPLAY OCTOBER 16TH at BUICK Showrooms Everywhere

FOUR SERIES—the 107-horsepower Special, the 141-horsepower Century, Roadmaster and Limited—21 body styles in all.

EVERY MODEL IN EVERY SERIES distinguished by the new DYNAFLASH engine and TORQUE-FREE SPRINGING.

Under the new beauty of Buick, modern engineering makes history, co-starring the DYNAFLASH ENGINE and TORQUE-FREE SPRINGING

WHAT HAPPENS inside the 1938 Buick engine happens nowhere else in the world.

That is not advertising language, it is cold-steel engineering fact.

Right now there is no other engine anywhere on earth that has the same source of brilliant behavior or which extracts usable power from gasoline in the same way as the new Buick DYNAFLASH valve-in-head Straight-Eight.

★ ★ ★

WHAT happens in this engine begins with the fuel mixture.

Speeding through the raceways of the intake manifold, this explosive vapor hurricanes into the cylinders at speeds around 250 miles an hour.

As it sweeps past streamline valve contours it smacks into sudden obstruction.

A scientifically designed Turbulator, built into the profile of the piston face, flings the hurtling mixture into air-swirls of terrific turbulence.

Then occurs something more than high-compression—literally cyclompression—as that writhing charge is compacted about the spark plug.

And the spark that leaps through that compact storm-center sets off a flashing cyclone of power, exploding with tornadic force!

★ ★ ★

EVERY five inches your new Buick travels, one of these fist-size hurricanes lets go.

Every down power-push of the piston gains in drive from an even tinier rationing of gas.

You are thrillingly aware of power that's livelier and more brilliant because gasoline is giving up to you more performance than it ever gave up to motorists before!

★ ★ ★

TO MATCH this incomparable stride, Buick engineers have provided an equally incomparable ride.

They give you the safety and steadiness of a kind of springing you will likewise find on no other car in the world.

Poised on jarless coils of easy-flexing steel, Buick floats free of bobble, jar, chatter, jounce

No matter how wheels dip and curtsy the body rides true as an arrow in flight.

Comfort is so serene you could serve tea at sixty and never clink china.

The car will not over-steer or under-steer—skidding, even on icy highways, is blessedly reduced.

Rear tires no longer scuff half their life away through power-wasting wheel-slip.

And through winter and summer, without need of grease and without "seize" from rust, dirt, water or ice, springs keep their gentle, even cushioning for the life of the car.

★ ★ ★

YES, IT IS a great story, the story of these twin engineering triumphs in the 1938 Buick.

It is so great a story that it obscures half a score of other advances, themselves enough to make any car a wonderful buy.

From the great DYNAFLASH engine, the white-hot heart of its merit, to the final, perfect touch of its styling, Buick is a car so magnificently filled with new satisfactions you cannot afford to miss it.

We invite you to see it this week at Buick showrooms everywhere.

NEW AUTOMATIC TRANSMISSION

THIS CAR SHIFTS FOR ITSELF!

Buick SPECIAL, Series 40 models can be obtained on special order with the new Buick Self-Shifting Transmission, built-in at the factory, at extra cost. In all ordinary driving, gear shifts are made up or down automatically, without attention to clutch or gas treadle and without taking your hand from the wheel. 90% of all travel is in a new quiet "fourth" speed which saves 10% or more on gas and up to 50% on oil. Front seat floor is cleared by removal of gear shift lever.

Japan Boycott Is Indorsed by C. I. O. Meeting

U. S. Workers' 5-Day Week Asked; Parley Here Oct. 25 Offered A. F. L.

By the Associated Press.

Atlantic City, N. J., Oct. 15.—The C. I. O. indorsed a boycott of all Japanese goods today.

John L. Lewis, chairman, and his leaders also condemned all aggressor nations, Japan in particular.

Other resolutions recommended legislation to establish a five-day week for Government employes, a "decent" minimum wage and extension of the civil service, an expanded Federal arts program, and a workers' educational program.

The C. I. O. proposed that Congress investigate the Federal Communications Commission because of its "anti-labor policies" and its "star chamber sessions."

Would Organize States.

Earlier, the delegates asked the American Federation of Labor to send a committee to Washington October 25 to discuss, with ten C. I. O. officials arrangements for a round-table discussion of possible means of obtaining peace in the Nation's labor movement.

They went ahead, however, with plans for perfecting their own organization by authorizing the C. I. O. executive council to call a convention of the 4,000,000 members at any time to discuss a permanent setup.

Lewis announced the C. I. O. had decided to create a department store organizing committee under the direction of Sidney Hillman, chairman of the Textile Workers Organizing Committee.

Political Units Urged.

E. L. Oliver, executive vice president of Labor's Nonpartisan League, urged the C. I. O. delegates to help develop political organizations "capable of coping with a lot of our opponents."

"If we do that, we'll see an increasing congressional representation of labor in Congress and more and more city governments controlled by labor," he said.

The conference adopted these additional resolutions:

Pledging support to Tom Mooney and Warren K. Billings, imprisoned for San Francisco's Preparedness Day bombings, in their campaign for unconditional pardons.

Indorsing the principle of a Federal antilynching bill to protect all persons against the "indifference of local public officials to lawless mob action."

Condemning practices of certain steel companies which preceded shootings during a steel strike at Massillon, Ohio, and Gov. Davey's summoning of the Ohio National Guard to break the "little steel" strikes of last summer.

The leaders sent their suggestion for a Washington meeting with an A. F. of L. committee to the federation's convention in Denver.

Committee Named.

The telegram said in part:

"The Committee for Industrial Organization is prepared to meet in conference on the basis set forth in its telegram heretofore mentioned. The proposal of the Committee for Industrial Organization included a suggested committee of 100 from each organization in order to meet the accepted practice of democratic labor organizations and to afford full representation for the unions involved.

"However, the conference of the Committee for Industrial Organization has delegated a committee of ten to meet with a committee from the American Federation of Labor to determine the number of representatives for each organization to attend the proposed conference and to fix a mutual satisfactory time and place for such proposed conference. It is suggested that this preliminary meeting be held in Washington during the week of October 25, 1937."

The conference named these C. I. O. officials to represent it at the proposed conference: Philip Murray, steel workers organizer; Sidney Hillman, textile workers organizer; David Dubinsky, of the International Ladies Garment Workers; Harvey Fremming, of the Oil Workers Union; James Carey, president of the United Electrical and Radio Workers; J. S. Dalrymple, of the United Rubbers Workers; Homer Martin, president of the United Automobile Workers; Michael Quill, of the Transport Workers of New York City; Joseph Curran, president of the National Maritime Union, and Abraham Flaxler, of State, County and Municipal Workers.

Criticizes Administration.

Criticizing the Administration for not reducing unemployment and Congress for failing to enact a wage and hour bill, Lewis concluded five days of policy-making decisions.

Shouting that labor must organize to improve its "economic situation," Lewis declared:

"We must do this because of some disquieting signs betokening trouble for the future of the United States of America. Economically, we are not out of the woods yet. There are certain economic conditions which need attention from the people and Congress."

Congress should be criticized, he said, for rejecting "that poor, halting" wage and hour bill at its last session. He charged that the Administration had done "nothing" about improving the condition of the "undernourished and underfed" persons as President Roosevelt proposed.

More than 150 leaders of 32 C. I. O. affiliated unions gave Lewis an ovation, and then re-elected the organization's executive officers, headed by Lewis.

U. S. May Act Soon On Seaway Treaty

By the Associated Press.

Members of the National Seaway Council expressed belief yesterday that negotiations for completion of the St. Lawrence waterway will be resumed shortly by the United States and Canada.

John C. Beukema, chairman of the council's executive committee, said he believed Secretary Hull may confer with Canadian officials concerning a treaty when he visits Canada next week.

Business Tax Returns Swamp Assessors Office

comers will have an opportunity to escape the fine. Any returns sent by mail that carry a postmark before midnight tonight also will be acceptable.

Brooke said he intends to make a drive against businesses, especially automobile dealers, located just over the District line. These dealers, he said, are required under the tax law to take out licenses and to pay the gross receipts tax on sales made in Washington.

Cab Drivers File Reports.

Taxicab drivers yesterday turned in hundreds of returns although most of them reported gross receipts of less than $2,000, but hundreds of them come under the exemption.

Managers of several taxicab companies said last night that all their drivers were filing returns under the law, but indicated that operators of only one cab would not be likely to take in $2,000 in a year.

District officials, however, anticipate taxable returns from many cab drivers as their operating costs are high enough to require gross receipts of at least $2,000 a year if they are to stay in business.

The manager of one taxi firm said the tax had taken many drivers by surprise. "Next year, of course, our men will be required to keep accurate daily accounts of their receipts."

Fishermen Uncertain.

Otis Evans, master of the Virgie Garrison, which is registered at Crisfield, Md., is uncertain whether receipts from sea food sold at the District wharves come under the provisions of the tax law. Harbor police have advised the skippers of fishing boats which sell their catch at the city docks to file their returns, but Evans said last night the manager of the Municipal Fish Market had stated these boats were exempt from the law.

Frances da Costa, 1536 Ogden street northwest, who holds a concession as public stenographer from the Shoreham Hotel, said yesterday she would file a statement of her returns but did not believe her gross recipts would reach $2,000.

"This tax is a crime," said Frederick E. Frain, apartment house operator, as he waited in line. "The law never would have passed if people here had the vote," he added, pointing to his statement of returns, marked "paid under protest."

Stamp Dealer Protests.

Milton H. Cullen, a stamp dealer at 929 Ninth street northwest, thinks the business privilege tax is fair except for its retroactive effect, which he termed unconstitutional. "Otherwise the tax is all right," he continued. "Any legitimate dealer is willing to pay for the privilege of doing business."

The license fee is reasonable but the gross receipts tax is a severe penalty, especially for recently established firms, in the opinion of Herbert M. Pasewalk, real estate dealer. Pasewalk predicted the tax would be unfair to the consumer who eventually would pay the two-fifths of 1 per cent, "probably multiplied three or four times."

R. J. Haines, of Fairfax, Va., who sells farm produce at the Northeast Market, said the tax "is not such a hot idea."

eration of Labor to expel all C. I. O. unions.

The convention's declaration against international wars, drafted by Vice President Matthew Woll and adopted without dissent, said, in part:

"The American Federation of Labor is gravely concerned and shocked that the Chinese nation and civilization are threatened by ruthless warfare that attacks civilian population as well as armed forces.

Boycotts Continued.

"We are disturbed by the increasing lawlessness in the international field as evidenced by treaty violations. Democratic institutions in many countries have been replaced by the rule of force and the subordination of individual well being to state regimentation. With armed conflict already in progress in Europe and the Far East, the menace of another World War overshadows the civilized world."

The convention unanimously voted to continue its boycott on German goods and services and reaffirmed its boycott on Japanese manufactured goods adopted earlier in the week.

The delegates unanmiously endorsed the new Wagner Housing Act, calling its adoption comparable to the provision of free public education. They directed A. F. of L. officers, however, to work for adopting of amendments that would broaden the act's scope.

They also endorsed the principle of the 30-hour week.

Ford Rejects Plea Of City Manager To Reopen Plant

Detroit, Oct. 15 (U.P.).—Harry Bennett, personnel director of the Ford Motor Co., tonight rejected a plea by City Manager H. F. McElroy, of Kansas City, to reopen the company's assembly plant there.

The Kansas City factory was closed during a controversy with the United Automobile Workers Union and Bennett indicated that it would be abandoned permanently, throwing 3,000 men out of work.

"We do not blame the police," Bennett said. "Their normal duty would lead them to give law-abiding working men full protection. But in Kansas City police were stopped from doing their normal duty, and you, as city manager, should know all there is to know about that."

Permanent closing of the Kansas City plant, it was estimated, would affect 20,000 persons, including families of the workers, and would cut off an annual pay roll of approximately $3,000,000.

Rohrer Again Heads Ministerial Council

Re-election of the Rev. Freeley Rohrer, Presbyterian representative, as president of the Ministerial Council of Central Union Mission was announced yesterday. "The mission of the churches" also made public the appointment of the Rev. Howard Stone Anderson to membership on the council. Other officers for 1937-38 are the Rev. Gove G. Johnson, vice president, and the Rev. George M. Cummings, secretary.

Women's Row Over Man In Murder and Suicide

San Francisco, Oct. 15 (AP).—Two women were shot to death here today in what police described as murder and suicide that followed a quarrel over the affections of a Reno bartender.

The victims were Mrs. Naomi Nelson Reynolds, formerly of Dallas, and Mrs. Gladys Williams.

New Deal Aides Ask Tax Relief For Business, Balanced Budget

Kennedy Sees Roosevelt, Then Proposes Revision of Capital Gains Levy and Undistributed Earnings Taxes.

Hyde Park, Kennedy told reporters the President's chief aim in domestic affairs is a balanced budget, according to the Associated Press. He said he discussed fiscal affairs along with merchant marine problems with the President.

"That really is the thing he wants to do most—balance the budget," he said. "I think he has a very, very good chance of doing it."

Declining to discuss recent stock market developments, or to say whether he talked with the President about it, Kennedy, nevertheless, made clear that he still is opposed to the taxes on capital gains and undistributed profits in their present form.

He was asked if he discussed the two levies with the President, and he said, "I'm on record on that."

Saying budgetary considerations should be kept in mind in any tax revision, he added that both taxes could be adjusted without impairing revenue. He said it was for the Treasury to say how it could be done.

"There is a way to get the income and still make it less onerous on business than under the present method," Kennedy said of the undistributed earnings tax. He said the capital-gains tax "never got us much revenue anyway," and it probably could be changed to bring in even more revenue by encouraging business to invest more money.

Disagrees With Aldrich.

Kennedy said he had read the speech by Winthrop W. Aldrich, president of the Chase National Bank, criticizing the effect of unwise regulation on the stock market and business, but did not find "anything particularly new." According to dispatches, he disagreed with Aldrich that margin requirements for market trading were unreasonable.

Jones, in his Houston speech, assured listeners that Government finances will be put in order, and repeated his stand for modifications in the undivided-profits tax.

"We hear more criticism of the undistributed-surplus tax and the capital-gains tax than almost any other Federal tax," the RFC chairman said. "I do not know to what extent these are under consideration by the Treasury or the Congressional committees that report on tax matters, but certainly the Treasury and these committees will have ample information of the objections to them by those most affected.

"Personally I am inclined to the opinion that the principle of the undistributed surplus tax is right, in that it prevents undue accumulations which naturally tend to monopolies. Certainly provsiions should be made for corporations in debt, otherwise a great many can never get out of debt, especially those who suffered most during the depression, and the little corporations.

Investing Discouraged.

"Some allowance should also be made for plant expansion and replacement, including equipment, modernization, etc., and corporations should be allowed to set aside some part of their net earnings as a reserve against contingencies without too much extra tax upon this reserve.

"I doubt if there will be any serious objection to some such adjustments, but it may be necessary to add something to the normal tax. This business can stand.

"I have no fear that Government will tax business to the extent that there will not be a fair profit left. Undoubtedly the high brackets discourage initiative and investment by those best able to invest and take a risk.

"This phase of the tax situation should also be given consideration in whatever tax changes are undertaken, not for the purpose of lightening taxes on the rich, but to restore and preserve the incentive for initiative and investment. The hope of reward in every field of endeavor is our most effective spur."

Jones Asks Patience.

Jones said he had been unable to find any good reason for the slump in the stock market. He said the Securities and Exchange Commission "may be too restrictive in some respects," but he thought it one of the best laws on the books.

He said the Administration is not intentionally "unfriendly" to business, and asked that business "have a little patience with Government" in meeting new problems.

"I am aware," Jones said, "that some in business feel that all of the co-operating is required of business, and none of it by the Government, but when business leadership shows a real willingness to recognize the principles of social security and to undertake the burden of financing it, the Government will, in my opinion, meet it more than halfway."

He said he knew "beyond question of doubt" that the President is determined to balance the Federal budget.

At the Capitol, Senator McKellar added his voice to those who predict a balanced budget "without increased taxes." He said much of the responsibility rests on Government departments, but recommended House and Senate committees work together to reduce expenditures. "I can't see the need of raising taxes at all," he added.

Committee Sits Nov. 4.

Senator Minton saw a "good chance" of balancing the budget without new taxes. He predicted large savings in relief outlays if business improves.

Said Chairman Taylor, of the House Appropriations Committee:

"We will try to balance the budget in a common sense way, but the country isn't going to the bow wows if we don't. There are a lot of people in Congress who cry for a balanced budget and reduced taxes, and at the same time demand increased outlays in their districts. We will have that to contend with."

The House tax subcommittee will start to work November 4 with the avowed purpose of remedying tax "inequities," but of not raising the total of taxes.

Besides revision of the undistributed earnings tax and the capital gains tax, items slated for consideration will include:

Improved income tax collection methods, and possible withholding of such taxes by employers.

More revenue from the eight States with community property tax laws.

Possible lowering of the income tax exemption bases.

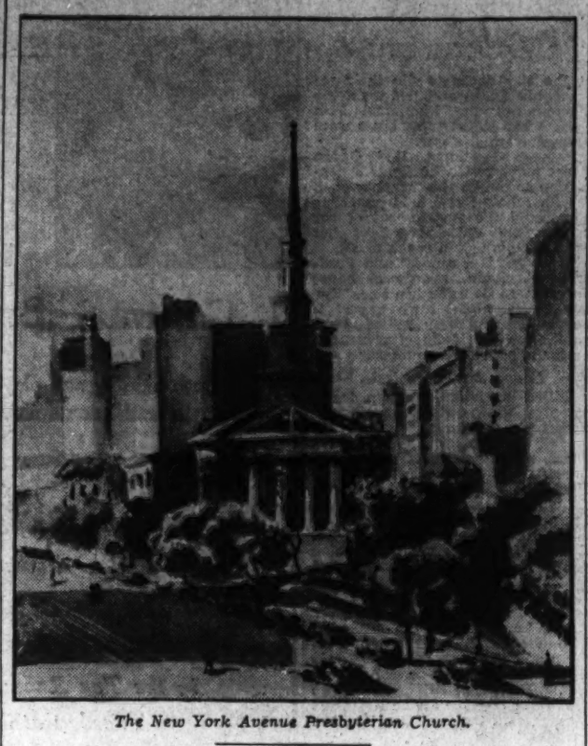
Washington's Historic Churches

New York Ave. Church Host To Nation's Great Since 1803



The New York Avenue Presbyterian Church.

Before Present Structure Was Built in 1861, Congregation Worshipped in First Treasury Building, Later at Site of Willard Hotel.

For colorful history few Washington churches can rival the famous New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, at New York avenue and H street. Known primarily as "Lincoln's Church," the parish has been associated with the Nation's great ever since its organization in 1803.

Before building the present structure in 1861 the congregation worshipped first in a section of the original Treasury and later in a church on the site now occupied by the Willard Hotel. Originally called the Associated Reformed Church, it was founded by Scotch-Irish dissenters and claims to be the oldest Protestant group in the city.

One of the earliest memorable events associated with the church is the farewell to Lafayette, delivered from its pulpit in 1825 by John Quincy Adams, who was a member of the congregation. During the storm of controversy aroused by Andrew Jackson's protege, Peggy O'Neale Eaton, Jackson and other members of the Eaton faction withdrew from the church and the pastor resigned.

President Pierce was one of the most faithful members of the church. During his administration he attended Sunday school and two services there each Sunday. On one occasion he entertained his Sunday school class at the White House. Other presidents who worshipped there include William Henry Harrison, Buchanan, Johnson and Cleveland.

The pew used by Abraham Lincoln is left as it was when he last occupied it. The side room in which he habitually sat alone during prayer meetings, now is a reception room and a chapel, used for weddings and christenings. Dr. Phineas D. Gurley, pastor of the church at the time, officiated at Lincoln's funeral.

In 1903, the hundredth anniversary of the organization of the church, the Robert Todd Lincoln family presented it with a set of chimes cast in the foundry once operated by the family of Nancy Hanks, Lincoln's mother.

Architecturally, the red brick building is distinguished by its graceful tower, its Corinthian portico and other details characteristic of the classic revival. In its 133 years' existence the New York Avenue Church has had but eight pastors. The present occupant of the pulpit is the Rev. Peter Marshall, who assumed his duties this month.

Dr. Noble C. Powell Evensong Speaker

The Very Rev. Noble C. Powell, D. D., dean of Washington, will preach at the People's Evensong in Washington Cathedral tomorrow at 4 p. m. Other services in the cathedral tomorrow will include Holy Communion and sermon at 11 a. m., with the Rev. Edward S. Dunlap as preacher, and celebration of the Holy Communion at 7:30 a. m. in the Bethlehem Chapel.

Dean Powell announced yesterday that beginning this week at the daily Evensongs in the Great Choir of the Cathedral at 4 p. m., short sermons will be delivered on Tuesdays and Thursdays by men who are attending conferences at the College of Preachers. The members of the conference are from all parts of the country, and this practice will enable residents of Washington and pilgrims from other cities to hear representative preachers. On Tuesday of this week, the special preacher will be the Rev. Albert J. Chafe, rector of Grace Church, North Attleboro, Mass., and on Thursday the Rev. Frederick M. Morris, rector of Grace Church, Salem, Mass., will deliver the sermon.

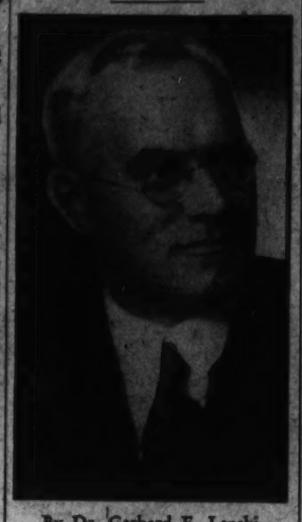
Today's Sermon



By Dr. Gerhard E. Lenski,
Pastor, Grace Lutheran Church.

The great tragedy in Solomon's colorful life was not that he was vicious, predatory or bloodthirsty, but rather that he took so much and then gave so little.

Solomon might have been a kind of Christ, healing the sick, reclaiming the prodigal, instilling hope in the discouraged, ushering in the kingdom. He might have been the sunrise for a darkened world. He was none of these. He was too busy—chasing this pretty face and that, holding pompous court, doing the things that advertised his greatness. We smile at his follies, but they are the follies for which angels weep and by which the Christ of God is crucified afresh in our sorrowful world.

Not every selfish life is necessarily vile and vicious. Some selfish lives are glamorous and attractive. But their fault is still the same—that of taking much and giving little, of showing self a fine time while other are allowed to suffer on in silence and despair.

Our world's great humanitarians, of whom Solomon was not one, have one common quality. Whether they took much or little, they always gave much. Lincoln, Pasteur, Edison, Luther, Paul—how little did they ask or take—but how much they gave, and how gladly! In the light of their lives, might this not be our prayer: "O Master of my life, may I give much even as I have received much from Thee!"

Dr. McCabe to Lead Retreat on October 22

Dr. Martin McCabe, O. M. Cap. a professor of theology at Capuchin College, Catholic University, will be retreat master at a week-end retreat for the Third Order of St. Francis beginning October 22 at 4000 Harewood road northeast. In addition to Tertiaries, many friends of the Franciscan order are expected to attend. Arrangements are in charge of Mrs. Robert J. Werner, of the Washington Retreat League.

Am I My Brother's Keeper?

"and it came to pass when they went into the field, that Cain rose up against Abel his brother, and slew him. And the Lord said unto Cain, 'Where is thy brother Abel?' And he said, 'I know not. Am I my brother's keeper?'"—

★ Mankind's Public Enemy Number One . . . Civilization's premiere killer . . . Humanity's champion Alibi-Artist . . . that was Brother Cain!

★ And yet we are less concerned today with Man's brutality toward his brother, than with his calloused indifference, toward the unfortunate.

★ Modern Society demands that there be no dodging of responsibility.

★ To a greater or less degree, we are all "our brother's keepers."

★ State and Federal agencies are doing their part to equalize the burden . . . but the individual responsibility remains. It's inescapable.

★ The sixty-nine institutions and welfare agencies which receive support through your Community Chest are asking YOU to lend your help in the coming appeal for funds.

★ You will be asked to contribute . . . to give in full proportion to the dictates of your conscience, and your pocketbook.

★ This is Humanity's call . . . Society's appeal . . . for you to stretch forth a hand toward those less fortunate.

★ There can be only one answer.

★ "YOU ARE YOUR BROTHER'S KEEPER."

The FCC's Self-Examination.

Several attempts to bring about an investigation of the Federal Communications Commission failed in the last session of Congress, yet they now appear to be bearing fruit. The commission, under the chairmanship of Frank McNinch, has concluded some exploring in its own back yard and decided to set its own house in order.

Criticism of the FCC has centered upon its control over radio. The entire commission is theoretically responsible for the policies adopted to regulate broadcasting. Actually, however, most of its decisions in this field have been made by two or three members. The other four members had been assigned to the telegraph and telephone divisions, and the chairman attempted to divide his time between the three groups.

Such an arrangement could scarcely be expected to work out satisfactorily when virtually all of the more difficult problems were arising within the radio division. Since the entire group is responsible for the policy followed, all of its members ought to have an active voice in shaping such policy. That seems to be the simple rule on which the commission has now effected its reorganization.

However, this redistribution of functions is only a first step toward the type of broadcasting control which the public has a right to expect. Mr. McNinch is now devoting himself to a revision of FCC rules and regulations, subject to approval of the commission. When that has been accomplished a direct attack upon alleged abuses in the control of broadcasting will be in order.

A number of speeches in the last session of Congress suggested the dissatisfaction that has grown out of the FFC's regulation of radio. In a thoughtful appeal for an inquiry into broadcasting control, Senator White declared that "the air is full of rsports" that political pressure has been determinative in many cases decided by the commission. To this he added: "There is, I believe, a public impression that applicants before the commission should and must seek political aid."

Trafficking in broadcasting licenses has also been charged. The FCC itself will begin hearings next week on charges that two attorneys have attempted to secure licenses through dummy corporations. A careful re-examination of the policies and practices by which the country's great network of broadcasting facilities is controlled seems obviously desirable. And the commission is doubtless in a better position to do the job than a Congressional committee would be.

It is gratifying to note, therefore, that the FCC has acquired a new sense of its responsibility.

Plague Predictions.

Science has done wonders during recent decades in reducing the incidence of epidemics, both in time of war and in time of peace. Those great plagues which swept nations in the past have had no counterpart in our days. The principal plague which the world has not yet succeeded in wiping out is war itself. And the ravages of that visitation tend steadily to increase rather than diminish.

Since the end of the World War great progress has been made internationally to prevent the spread of communicable diseases from one country to another. Primary credit for this belongs to the Health Organization of the League of Nations, with which the public health authorities of practically all nations, including our own, cooperate. The outbreak of any epidemic in Asia or elsewhere is immediately reported to all interested governments, which are thus placed in a position to keep the disaster away from their own doors.

This is a reassuring state of affairs. Nonetheless no epidemic of large-scale proportions, even if occurring at a remote distance, can be regarded with equanimity. That is why the League's health committee is now viewing with real alarm the possible effects of the war in China on world health.

Cholera is spreading because of the movements of refugees and troops and while the situation is not yet desperate it may become so should the war last and the quarantine services be further destroyed or impaired. Already a survey presented to a League committee stresses the possibility in 1938 of epidemics of typhus, smallpox, meningitis and pneumonic plague in China with "repercussions which might become serious internationally as well as nationally."

The threat is one which concerns all nations. Never too soon has the League begun to consider ways and means of combating it by sending antiepidemic expeditions to the Far East. There are many who still hold to the illusory belief that we can successfully ignore the political and economic effect of war in lands remote from our shores. But even they will agree that international efforts to quarantine plagues are imperative, and should be undertaken both speedily and energetically.

The Cumulative Effect.

In his careful analytical address to the Rochester Chamber of Commerce Winthrop W. Aldrich, chairman of the board of the Chase National Bank, laid squarely upon the Administration the major blame for the recent break in the stock market. He attributed the severity of the declines to the acute thinness of the market. And that in turn is, in his opinion, due to the cumulative effect of governmental policies, some directly concerned with stock exchange activities, and others, designed for different purposes, which nonetheless severely restrict trading activities.

Mr. Aldrich admits that the foreign news may have induced a substantial volume of domestic selling of securities, while waning confidence in the political future may likewise have been a stimulus to sales. But the drastic character of the decline he ascribes to the impaired efficiency of the stock market machinery.

It may be doubted whether all the blame should be attributed to the causes listed by Mr. Aldrich. Inquisitorial activities of S. E. C. agents, and some other factors cited as contributing to the decline, were present when security values were rising. However, it is increasingly recognized that the capital gains and high income taxes, which head Mr. Aldrich's list, are major causes of the so-called "thin" market.

Holders of stocks who might be disposed to sell on a rising market, and buy when quotations are declining, are prevented from doing so by the tax on capital gains. A tax which takes a high percentage of profits from men of means, while limiting deductions for losses to amounts just offsetting gains, naturally interferes with the normal functioning of the market. When the intrinsic factors are favorable, the tax causes exaggerated rises. When conditions become even slightly unfavorable and any considerable number of people are inclined to sell there is only a small purchasing activity for which sellers compete at constantly declining levels.

The extent and the abruptness of recent declines in the stock market have been disturbing to many people who are not primarily interested in the price of shares. Business is always watching market trends. Hence when stock market prices are declining, businessmen are inclined to become more cautious in making future commitments. They fear that the stock market declines may be a precursor of a general business recession.

It is probably fair to say that the recent drop in shares is excessive by contrast with the declines that have actually occurred in business activity. However, the unfavorable operating outlook rather than the "thinness" of the market accounts largely for the extraordinarily severe declines in railway shares and junior bond issues.

The failure of the Government to deal comprehensively with railroad rate and labor questions is clearly responsible for a cost of operation that threatens the stability of a great industry. The power of the roads to maintain operations in a state of high efficiency is impaired by the undermining of the financial structure and the inability to raise money. That means less employment of labor for maintenance and repair work and practically eliminates expenditures for improvement of equipment and terminals.

Government supervision of security issues is highly approved by the Nation at large and reasonable regulation of speculation to suppress abuses is also desirable. But it should be kept in mind that the capitalistic system is based upon pursuit of profits. If the opportunity to make profits is destroyed by excessive taxation or by oppressive forms of regulation, the capitalistic system simply will not work. It is well to keep that fact in mind.

A Matter Of Nourishment.

Opening of the Children's Theater today coincides with announcement that free hot lunches for undernourished District school children will be resumed, at least in part, on Monday. The two developments are perhaps more closely related than appears. For while food is the more fundamental, nutrition for the imagination of childhood is of no less social importance. And a special feature of Clare Tree Major's undertaking this season is the effort to build a "pleasure fund" for those who would not otherwise be able to enjoy the repertoire.

Wisely enough, since children are all conservatives, the current program is strongly classical in bent. "Hansel and Gretel," "Snow White" and the beloved "Nuremberg Stove" are three of the excellent selections made from perennial favorites. Stories of this character are never old and never wearisome. And, since they have become part of the folk lore, they provide that meeting place for adult and childish minds which is so often sought and so rarely achieved.

It is a part of the magic of the footlights to bring the eager mind of childhood on, and the sated mind of maturity back, to at least a temporary kinship. And just because this mutual understanding is important, for all classes in the community, it is hoped that the "pleasure fund" of this year's Children's Theater will do all its sponsors anticipate in opening the door of appreciation for children who could not otherwise attend. They, and their parents, will be better citizens if the plan succeeds.

The tastes aroused may be less easy to satisfy than those which are met by free hot lunches. But they are not for that reason less to be desired in a society which aims to achieve a higher level than the breadline.

Why The Rush?

Congress failed to pass general farm legislation in its last session because the subject had not been thoroughly explored and there was no agreement as to what, if anything, should be done to supplement the present soil-conservation program. Legislators rebelled at the idea of trying to jam through another undigested bill that might give rise to acute regrets a few years hence.

That fact seems to have been completely ignored by Chairman O'Connor of the House Rules Committee when he predicted that the House will dispose of farm legislation within the first seven days of the forthcoming special session, and then pass the wages-and-hours bill in its second week. Perhaps Mr. O'Connor was merely trying to be optimistic to offset the general resentment of Congressmen in being called back to Washington so soon. But that does not minimize the dangers of another hasty and haphazard attack upon the dilemma of agricultural surpluses.

There is no indication that the basic disagreements which stood in the way of enacting a farm bill last August have been eliminated. Nor is it likely that these differences will be resolved by the hearings now in progress.

No doubt one reason for assigning this complicated problem to a short special session was a hope that both houses would be inclined to call the roll, as Mr. Farley says, with little discussion. But members of Congress will have good reason to resist such tactics. Once before that body accepted a ready-made farm bill which proved to be a mistake from both the constitutional and economic viewpoints. Surely it should now take time to examine the proposals to be submitted on November 15 in the light of that experience.

The AAA's crop-control program was leading rapidly toward compulsory regulation of all agricultural output when it was found to be unconstitutional by the Supreme Court. The tendency of regulations of this sort to become more and more drastic is recognized in the current proposal to apply compulsory marketing quotas should voluntary control again prove ineffective. Congress will be asked to decide, then, whether the farmer shall become a mere cog in a vast agricultural machine to be operated by the Federal Government.

That single question calls for the most intensive scrutiny. Yet it includes only one phase of the issue posed by the suggested legislation. Congress cannot establish permanent, rigid control over the planting or marketing of crops without changing the basic American concept of government and its responsibilities. This is the gravest sort of issue that can be raised in a democratic country, even if it should be assumed that further adverse opinions from the Supreme Court can be avoided.

Congress will be doing well if it makes a good start toward consideration of the vital issues involved in the crop-control and wages-and-hours bills before its special session merges into the regular session in January. Leaders who have already demonstrated their distrust of "railroading" in the legislative process should resist it to the full extent of their strength in the new test case which the President is forcing upon them.

"If Planted Now."

It isn't merely that the "morns are meeker than they were" or that the trees are tipped with gold. It isn't simply that the nights are cooler and earlier or that there's a scrunch of leaves underfoot. It isn't just a matter of hearing children's voices schoolward bound or of predicting football scores. And it isn't just the fact that summer clothes have been discarded. Fall is much more than all that.

Fall is the season of ripening and harvests. It's the "back end of the year" when tousle-headed chrysanthemums replace the neater garden types. It's a time of new theatrical ventures, new books, new friendships begun at college, and new horizons for children entering their first grade at school. October's "bright blue weather" is ideal for hikes through tawny woods, for marshmallow toasts and wiener roasts. Halloween will soon be riding in on a broomstick, only to fade next month into the more sobering implications of Thanksgiving. Clotheslines are straining under their burdens of woolens put out in the breeze to eliminate that moth-ball odor. There's a tang and a zest in the air—it "feels like" fall.

But, alas, just as we are beginning to relax and enjoy fall, our attention is caught by a headline: "Jaunty Crocus Heralds Spring if Planted Now." The future treads heavily on the heels of the present. And even in the tranquil realm of flowers a large part of "now" is always under mortgage.

A Sheaf Of Timely Comment

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In stating that "America hates war. America hopes for peace. Therefore, America actively engages in the search for peace," President Roosevelt gave voice to the aspiration of many millions, not Americans only. The problem is, of course, how to make that desire bear fruit—and it is a bigger problem than perhaps many of us realize.

Most of us are today, I think, trying to expand our horizon a bit. It is very well for us to condemn the aggressor nations and to be horrified at the barbarous warfare being waged in China and in Spain, but common sense tells us (when we stop to think) that nations, like people, do not run amuck without cause. The claim of the "have-nots" against the "haves" is founded in post-war history; the needs of the three aggressor nations for raw materials, freer exchange and room for expansion are too well founded to brook denial. Up until the present day, the only way such demands have ever been met is through warfare. Is the world ready yet to attempt adjustments by other methods?

Every day it becomes more apparent that the problems of peace are more difficult than those of war. The human race is a contrary one; the road to failure lies beckoningly at hand, the path to peace is a tortuous one involving sacrifices, time, patience and courage. Because nations are composed of human beings, we find the upward path very difficult to take.

Yet the problems of peace are not unsolvable; the very fact that men can perceive them carries with it the corollary that they can solve them if they will. But not by blindness; not by selfishness; not by grandiose speeches, or by trickery, or by bluffing. Our time is too far spent for that.

The ray of light shining steadily through the gloom lies in those theses which are the heart of the Christian faith—the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man. Neglected, forgotten or derided by a large part of mankind, they are still the rock upon which an enduring civilization rests. If we continue in selfishness or degenerate into that mass murder which is called war, what excuse will we, with two thousand years of Christian teaching behind us, have to offer? Why, in all conscience, should we expect to survive?

GLADYS PAVLAT.
Colmar Manor, Md., Oct. 14.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Thanks for your editorial on the President's Chicago speech. I wish it might have a Nation-wide broadcast as a further aid to prompt translation of his words into appropriate action, long overdue.

W. N. CAMPBELL.
Washington, Oct. 6.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It was not until this morning that I was able to secure a copy of your magnificent editorial, "America Finds Her Voice," which was published on the first page of The Post on October 6.

It has been a long time since any national event did as much good for my morale as the President's speech at Chicago. Pray Heaven that he meant it. The tide has been going out for so long that I had fatalistically resigned myself to its continued ebb.

I am sure your editorial expresses the conviction of millions of citizens, and it is consoling to know that The Post will continue to do everything in its power to encourage the President to hew to the line he has drawn.

FRANCIS P. MILLER.
Washington, Oct. 12.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In an editorial concerning the timeliness of the President's somewhat smug and platitudinous speech, delivered in Chicago, you have allowed an unfoundedly offensive statement to be printed in your issue of October 6. The statement referred to is as follows: "The forces now fighting intolerable aggression, whether in the case of the Chinese at Shanghai or the Spaniards defending Madrid, are neither cowards nor weaklings. They are prepared to carry on the fight for human decency unaided."

We admit the truth of the statement in reference to the Sino-Japanese situation, but deny its verity in relation to the so-called Popular Front government in Spain, which did not receive a majority in the elections, but managed to establish itself in power by some chicanery.

You have overlooked the most obvious historical facts: You did not take into consideration the fact that the troops of the Popular Front have murdered in cold blood helpless, harmless, and profoundly good priests and nuns, as well as citizens, who were guilty of no crime, but that of belonging to a proscribed religion.

Are we Americans to openly condone such a brutal negation of the rights of freedom of religious belief, of speech, and of the press?—the very rights upon which our Republic is based, and which the members of the so-called Popular Front are so flagrantly violating? We can not conceive in any wise that the members of this party are, as you say, fighting "for human decency," but rather, if the truth were admitted, for the continuation of tyranny and oppression.

MEMBERS OF THE SODALITY OF GEORGETOWN.

HARRY AMMSON,

Washington, Oct. 13.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The childish controversy between the various religious sects in America defending both the loyalists and rebels is an indication of the precarious position of Christian religion in an age when dictators either move forward to definite atheism, or backward to pagan gods of the past. The issue between the religious is childish because they will never do more than squabble among themselves until they get it in the neck from one side or the other, earning the contempt rather than the respect of humanity.

As a matter of accuracy it is impossible to offer any defense for Gen. Franco and his hired mercenaries, those cold-blooded, materialistic pirates from Italy and Germany. There is no evidence that Spanish Catholics are in favor of Fascism or support Franco—on the contrary, there is evidence that the Spanish Catholics love their country, and above all else the forms of democratic government, best represented by the duly elected loyalists.

I am in receipt of letters from personal friends in Spain who are much closer to the issues involved than those who speak under orders of Mussolini and the Italian government, and I know that it is a crime against humanity, it is a crime against liberty and democracy to make even a verbal defense of Gen. Franco and his motley crew. The Catholic and non1Catholic citizens of Spain do not want Franco and Fascism—they want Spain, land, bread, work, peace, democracy and education for the masses.

THOMAS PAINE.
Alexandria, Va., Oct. 15.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your paper has recently carried several editorials concerning the propriety and legality of picketing of foreign embassies.

In your editorial of October 11, you state correctly that Congress failed to pass a resolution banning the picketing of embassies. You further state, and this time erroneously, that "the fact remains that the police of the District have full authority to suppress picketing and all other kinds of unfriendly demonstrations directed at the representatives of foreign nations." The implication is inescapable that Congress had been wasting time in debating a bill whose only purpose was to give powers to the police that the police already possessed. Or is it your position that the police power is not confined to the task of enforcing the observance of existing laws, but that when the occasion arises, the police officer or official may, in the exercise of his own discretion, pass his own law and proceed to enforce it?

On at least two recent occasions, the police have acted under the impression that they were a law unto themselves. After being notified of the intention of our organization to peacefully and orderly picket the Japanese Embassy, a cordon of police prevented our pickets from approaching the embassy and threatened us with arrest and imprisonment.

To encourage such actions by the police is tantamount to cloaking the police uniform with the judicial robe. The right to picket has been recsognized by the United States Supreme Court as a constitutional right of free speech and assemblage.

We know that the Fascist powers have exerted pressure on our State Department to restrain any activity on our part. We put it mildly when we say that it ill-becomes these Fascist powers, who are engaged in campaigns of aggression and destruction, and who have deprived their own peoples of the last vestige of human and civil liberty, to maintain that our acts of protest are annoying and disrespectful to them.

Orderly picketing is a peaceful method of manifesting grievances. Not only is the intention to notify a Fascist or imperialist government that there is disapproval of its conduct or of certain of its acts, but picketing is a means of publicizing these acts within the country to crystallize and consolidate public opinion against an aggressor so that peaceful methods to end the aggression may be facilitated. You take issue with us concerning the propriety of picketing of embassies, and you suggest that it is our purpose to embarrass and annoy foreign ambassadors who are our guests. We state emphatically that we have no quarrel with any foreign minister as an individual; however, we must recognize that he, as the representative of his government, is the proper recipient of any protest leveled at the activities or policies of his government.

The right to openly assemble and protest has long been recognized to be as important to a free people as the right to publish without censorship is to a free press. The American League Against War and Fascism utilizes the former method to disseminate its point of view just as you avail yourself of the latter method. The attempt to suppress or censor either form of activity is repugnant to the ideals of democracy and Americanism.

AMERICAN LEAGUE AGAINST WAR AND FASCISM.
ELIZABETH URANSON,
Secretary.
Washington, Oct. 12.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is amusing reading the papers daily, noting the so-called ignorance of the press in regard to its editorials on Spain. You are not completely ignorant, but biased. Franco, with three-fourths of the Spanish people with him, with help of Italy and Germany, which the press constantly reminds us of daily; Italy and Germany in Spain with your reference as "Italo-German puppet regime of Gen. Franco"; France threatening to throw open her frontier, etc. Has it ever been closed? What about the loyalists, Mr. Editor, from whom do they receive their help? You know. Why not print it once in a while.

The war in Spain is, beyond the doubt of all, religion against communism. The ill-gotten government is Communist. The majority of the people is behind Franco. Italy and Germany are in Spain because of the great influx of outside help to the loyalists before they gave their assistance to Franco, to protect themselves from the menace of communism.

Addiction And Antidote.

IT used to be that the Civil War was a tedious series of lessons you hated in the sixth grade and jumped over very sketchily at college. You knew that Lee lost to Grant after four years of warfare—and that slavery wasn't the real cause. The rest was vaguely blurred, as interesting as the agricultural reports of 1893—in spite of the fact that you grew up around a cluster of battlefields and your home State is buried under markers of the "Lost Cause."

That was my limited knowledge and interest until I married a Civil War addict. Then the trouble began. Many hours I spent in complete and sullen silence while the war was fought all over again. The addicts never agree on what would have happened if . . . Manassas, Shiloh, Sharpsburg, Fredericksburg, The Wilderness, Gettysburg—they fight them all. Of these, two afforded distinct recollections—the old country store outside of Manassas and a fat black servant hanging a whipping line of diapers in Aunt Sarah's back yard in Fredericksburg. By conversational argument the streets were now filled with thunder and hungry, marching men.

• • • •

In self-defense, then, I "took up" the war, calling it a hobby to justify to myself this ignoble surrender. Now, the first procedure in adopting this hobby is to dig up your old grammar school history books and get a general outline of what went on. Then, getting down to business at last, select one of the major battles (apt to crop up in conversation) and study it in detail. Read all you can find to read about your pet battle, study the maps and pictures—and if you are especially vindictive and energetic, look up the official war records in the Library of Congress. By now you are prepared.

• • • •

The next time you find yourself sitting on the edge of a conversational battlefield, by all means look while the fighting goes on. This will gradually include you in the group. By a little maneuvering, shift the scene to your own battle. At first, not to drop any bombshells, insert a mild remark or so. Then, inwardly whooping at the raised eyebrows, serenely get to arguing the technical points, the strategy. This will go on for some time, until your information is exhausted—and perhaps confused.

The next step is less difficult. When the debaters stop to light cigarettes, remark that a point frequently overlooked is the fun the soldiers had during the war. This is pure and simple stealing of Russell Smith's thunder, but never mind, you claim it for your very own. Drag out a volume of "Photographic History of the Civil War" (Vol. 9, p. 185—you have already carefully marked the place) and prove your point by showing Mr. Brady's picture of "imposing officers and foreign attaches unbending between battles." Bottles are wielded by the gay (and perhaps tipsy) officers in hand-to-hand melee. You can see their laughter, even through the dense bushes of goatees and mustaches. This funthey-had argument is good for the rest of the evening. And by now you are something of an "authority."

But that is not all. You must live up to your new and hard-earned reputation. After muddling through the first volume of Freeman's "R. E. Lee," the rest is not only interesting, but as exciting in spots as any adventure story. By now (you are still not a true addict, being a little calculating) you begin to see the possibilities.

• • • •

However, I am not arguing that the way to treat addiction in others is by becoming an addict yourself. You may know that it is almost impsible to sit around a crowd of people drinking whisky sours and Manhattans and not fall into the cups yourself. And it is sometimes easy to like the cups we fall into, life being like that.

Stop right at this point. The Civil War cup will hold you in its clutches as long as you live—and the insidious influence may already be at work. The rest is a warning.

Ma'am, your pleasant household may be disrupted. No matter if the whole world talks of little things like wholesale slaughter, Chinese women and children, and the Ku Klux Klan, you will have the Civil War for lunch, dinner, and rehashed for breakfast.

And, suh, beware lest you be so entrapped you dream of writing your own Definitive Biography of colorful old Gen. Thus-and-Such, who is so greatly misunderstood.

But the time you have read Joseph E. Johnston's very biased writings, Thomason's "Jeb Stuart" and a few others, you are in pretty bad shape. And when you pass up Joan Crawford for an evening with Henderson's "Stonewall Jackson," all is lost. You are an addict yourself.

Your mother may wonder why on earth you don't write; your friends may think you have left town. Never mind. The only thing to do is round up all the friends and acquaintances you have left (similarly afflicted, of course), throw in both Yankees and Rebels, mix well together, stir vigorously the rest of the evening, and set aside to cool.

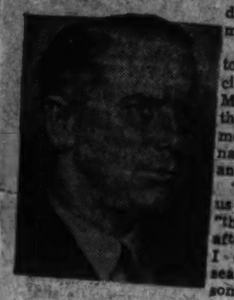
Blaming the Piano Player

WRITING OF the family party at the White House the night before Mr. Roosevelt delivered the latest of his fireside chats, Mrs. Roosevelt, in her newspaper column for Tuesday, revealed that there had been dancing and singing to the music of an unnamed guest.



It would be unmannerly to intrude in this private circle but for the fact that Mrs. Roosevelt herself, in the course of her employment as a professional journalist, has opened the door and bade us all in.

"It suddenly occurred to us at dinner," she wrote, "that we would like to dance afterward. My brother and I decided that we would search the household for someone who could play the piano. At first we could find no one. Then it occurred to us that there was a gentleman coming in to do work who was musical and might be diverted into playing. We corralled him and he not only played dance music for us, but later the entire party gathered around the piano and sang. My husband had as good a time as anyone and amused us all enormously by singing one or two old college songs."

"This gay evening meant work afterward for several of the party. When I went in to see my husband this morning he looked at me disgustedly and said, 'It was 3 o'clock this morning before I went to sleep.'"

• • •

HAVING NAMED other guests and having rather pointedly omitted the name of the gentleman come to do some work who played so attractively while the rest of them danced and sang, and the President amused them all enormously with one or two old college songs, Mrs. Roosevelt challenges us all to a guessing game.

Don't tell us. Let us guess.

Charlie Mike? No, not old Charlie. Did you ever see him?

Marvin McIntyre? Not the type. Very apathetic, goes to bed early so as to be up at dawn for six rounds with his trainer, an old middleweight fighter.

Stanley High? Stanley doesn't live there any more.

Then who is it that comes in at the White House to do some work and plays not only the piano but the accordion and the guitar, knows all the old college songs by heart, collaborates with Mr. Roosevelt on his fireside chats and, most important clew to all, has a studied habit of keeping men up to all hours of the night?

• • •

COULD IT BE Tommy Corcoran, White House Tommy, as they call him in Washington, Tommy the Cork to the President, the most active spook among the mysterious legion of literary and political wraiths who clank their chains through the corridors of the government and press the cold finger of terror on well-fed clubmen in their sleep?

We seem to be getting hot, for this was the night before the chat that the gentleman came in to do some work, and what work would have been more urgent than the chat just then? And who else fits the description of Tommy Corcoran written by Alva Johnston wherein he said that Tommy plays Mr. Roosevelt's favorite tunes, that he knows no hours, and that he often goes to the White House to do some work, especially on Presidential speeches to the country?

All these clews point to White House Tommy as the man behind the mike while all of us sat and listened Tuesday night, but the tipoff seems to lie in the line where Mrs. Roosevelt reveals that the President looked at her disconsolately and said, "It was 3 o'clock this morning before I went to sleep," for Mr. Johnston puts stress on White House Tommy's practice of eating sugar pills to keep alert after midnight.

If this deduction be correct, it is proposed that next time, after the gentleman who plays the piano has come in to do some work, the billing for the fireside chat be changed to read as follows:—

"Thomas Corcoran will address his subjects on the state of the nation tonight through the courtesy of the broadcasting companies and the President of the United States."

Financial Advice.

Q. I am a big loser in the stock market. I thought the SEC had fixed everything so the small investor couldn't be ruined any more. Although I bought only the best securities, put up 50 per cent margin, got only accurate statements of the companies' financial status and was presumably protected at all times, I find I am stuck again. Please advise. WILLIS.

A. Don't worry. Isn't the knowledge that you were at all times given protection comforting? Suppose you hadn't been?

Q. I was a lamb in the market of 1929. I lost my savings and was told I was a victim of Wall Street exploiters, unprincipled brokers, crooked bankers, unethical insiders and vicious pools. I am in the market of 1937 surrounded by accurate figures, honest brokers, ethical bankers, thoroughly intimidated financiers, etc. Pools are now illegal. But I woke up today to discover I am still a lamb. How do you explain this? GUS.

A. All we know is what we read in the contradictory newspaper reports. Don't sell the SEC short.

Everything is splendid—Business is just great—
I know it, for stock prices
Are off from 6 to 8.

There is no need to worry—
The outlook's very fine—
So good in fact the market
May have a fresh decline.

All prospects are delightful—
They're better than you know—
If they get any better
All gone will be my dough!

They Called Her "Beauty."

(The Story of a Village Scarred by War.)

They said of her that she is beautiful;
If such life could create then life is good;
A wing of sunnyness all knew could pull
A string of laughter whence no others could
She stood beneath the sun, a thing of charm;
The day's bright glow could never outshine her;
Her eyes most black, swift smile that could disarm
The hardest of the men whom love could stir.
"Most glorious Ruzga!" hearts would cry with joy;
"Three garlands for our Beauty!" throats would roar;
And then some rumor—news that did not buoy—
It seemed their sunlit country went to war.
A shot rang out and, as the people cried,
The good thing life has made bled white, and died.

China's Destinies

Observer Sees Beleaguered Nation Facing Alternatives Of Accepting Japanese Rule Or Becoming Second Spain.

By Mark J. Ginsbourg.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Shanghai.

MONOPOLIZING the world headlines, three foreign ambassadors in recent weeks once again proved the moss-covered maxim that China is the battleground of great powers.

Sir Hughe Knatchbull-Hugessen, the British Ambassador who came here from Teheran with the reputation of a "strong" diplomat, was shot by Japanese planes as he was driving from Nanking to Shanghai in a car carrying a huge Union Jack.

With Tokyo exhibiting an incredible lack of good manners, London backed out of the incident as gracefully—or as disgracefully—as it could under the circumstances. John Bull "lost face" in the Orient, but managed to extricate himself out of an unpleasant incident, which would have weakened his position in the current argument with Italy. Sir Hughe received for his pains £5,000.

Next came the turn of Mr. Nelson T. Johnson, United States Ambassador, who, ever-mindful of the mishap with his British colleague, dashed to the safety of a gunboat almost as soon as the Japanese gave notice of their intention to bomb "military establishments" in Nanking.

After a look at the next morning's foreign and Chinese newspapers, he just as hastily returned to his bomb-proof dugout in the American Embassy, unscathed, but probably blushing for his undignified and seemingly unwarranted exit.

With his secret departure from Nanking for Moscow by air, Mr. Dmitrii Bogomoloff, the Soviet Ambassador, three days ago caused locally a bombshell rivaling in effect and newsworthiness the shooting of the British envoy.

Bogomoloff's flight was taken here as an indication of Moscow's intention to assume a stronger stand toward the Sino-Japanese dispute, whose solution, one way or another, will vitally affect Russia's destinies.

Public Was Impressed By Russia's Proximity.

BUT THERE WAS another reason for the general surprise. Until the announcement that the envoy expected to be in Moscow four days after he left his luxurious bombproof dugout in the embassy in Nanking, the general public did not realize that China and Russia are next-door neighbors.

The immediate conclusion was that if a passenger plane bearing Bogomoloff could reach Moscow within 96 hours, Soviet military planes could reach China from their bases somewhere in the Soviet Turkestan within half of that time.

China, which looked so defenseless in the face of continuous and devastating Japanese air raids, suddenly acquired in the eyes of foreign observers here a capacity for bitter and protracted resistance to the Japanese military machine. The envoy's flight showed that it lies within the power of Soviet Russia to nullify the effects of the airtight blockade of the entire China coast by Japanese men-of-war.

The Japanese, never hesitant to point out evidences of perfidious Communist influence upon the Nanking government, immediately produced the texts of various Sino-Soviet secret treaties, providing for the exchange of Soviet munitions for "concessions" in North China and recognition of Moscow's dominance in Outer Mongolia and the Chinese Turkestan. Soviet officers were brought by the Japanese to Nanking to coach the Chinese troops and Marshal Vasilii Bluecher, commander in chief of the Soviet forces in the Far East and once the leader of the Chinese revolutionary northern expedition, was made the villain of the piece.

Although Japanese spokesmen steadfastly declined to accept responsibility for these reports, I have excellent reasons to believe that they emanated from the Japanese military authorities here. Their publication was undoubtedly designed to justify Japan's conquest of China "to save civilization from communism" and possibly to prepare the ground for intervention by Japan's newly acquired Fascist friends in Europe.

Bogomoloff's flight gave weight to my contention that China is destined to become another Spain, where the Fascist powers and their Communist and democratic rivals will stage another miniature world war.

There are already numerous demonstrations of the touching friendship uniting Japan with Fascist allies. Germany, "for obvious reasons," declined to join a committee of the League of Nations called to discuss Japan's latest venture in China. Some of the Japanese army bombers daily roaring over Shanghai, I was informed by a very reliable source, are exact replicas of the latest German aircraft. The heavy artillery shelling Chinese positions near Shanghai was also alleged to have been produced by Krupp.

Italy Also Discerned Giving Aid to Japanese.

ITALY, anxious to embarrass Great Britain in the Orient, is also actively helping Japan. During the battle for the possession of Tientsin, July 30-31, the Italian authorities gave permission to the Japanese army to build a pontoon bridge off their concession, after the French had prohibited the passage of Japanese troops through the French town. At night, according to a leading Tokyo daily, the Italian bluejackets touchingly treated Japanese soldiers to candy, beer and cigarettes.

Both nations thus far have been actively helping China to build up her military machine—German instructors teaching the infantry, the Italians training the pilots of China's young air force. But both will probably be ready to sacrifice their political and economic interests here, if larger political considerations demand it.

Meanwhile, the general attention here is centered on Japan's next step, after she succeeds in dislodging the Chinese from their strongholds in the vicinity of Shanghai.

In North China the procedure was simple. Aged and often impecunious statesmen were picked out from the crowd of office seekers thronging the reception rooms of the Japanese army's omnipotent and omniscient special service section in Tientsin and placed at the head of so-called Peace Maintenance commissions.

At first such bodies—with Japanese officers as their advisers—functioned only in Peiping and Tientsin. Later, as the Japanese juggernaut battered its way through the Chinese defenses in the neighboring provinces, similar bodies were created in Kalgan, capital of Chahar, and Tatung, a trading center in northern Shansi. The Japanese Kwantung Army, which holds its sway in Inner Mongolia, also made a try at a provincial peace maintenance commission in Chahar.

One of the first actions of the Japanese army here was to establish a similar commission in Paoshan, about 20 miles east of Shanghai. With the inspiration and blessings of Japanese officers the town's richest inhabitants still remaining within its walls formed a committee and issued an ardent appeal for Sino-Japanese co-operation and undying amity.

China Seen Forced Soon To Retreat Farther Inland.

THERE IS little doubt that the Chinese will have to withdraw farther inland from their present positions, dominated by the heavy guns of Japanese warships. This will leave under Japanese control some of China's richest and most densely populated territory. That the example of Paoshan will be emulated by other small towns in this area is certain. But would the Japanese dare to set up a puppet regime in Shanghai, in which the combined foreign interests are much greater than those of the Japanese?

Some British observers here believe that "sky alone is the limit" to what the Japanese military can and will do in the Shanghai area. Pointing out that the collection of customs dues on Japanese goods has already been taken over by a newly formed Japanese committee, and that the Japanese had already successfully snubbed their fingers in the faces of foreign powers by taking and holding a part of the Shanghai International Settlement, these observers think that the army would not hesitate to set up a puppet Chinese government in Shanghai.

With the vast revenues of the Shanghai area and the customs administration and adequate protection from the Japanese army and navy, the puppet regime would have everything it would need for successful existence, save popular love.

China's destinies today are molded not only in Nanking, but in London and Moscow as well. This is what endowed Bogomoloff's journey with special significance.

Dim Prospect

By Barnet Nover

Japanese Hopes, Chinese Realities.

In statement after statement Japanese spokesmen have declared that all Japan is after in China is, in the words of Foreign Minister Koki Hirota, "the stabilization of eastern Asia through conciliation and co-operation between Japan, Manchukuo and China for their common prosperity and well-being." And almost invariably such honeyed words are accompanied by a denial that Japan has any territorial designs whatever on China.

Such assertions appear in Western eyes to be sheer hypocrisy. A large part of the world is convinced, and certainly with good reason, that what Japan is after in China is nothing less than the complete destruction of China's independence and the establishment of Japanese hegemony over its large and populous neighbor.

In other words, the present undeclared war on China is but the continuation of those territory-grabbing tactics manifested by Japan since 1895, when it acquired Formosa and sought, though at the time unsuccessfully, to secure a foothold in Manchuria.

• • • •

THE CURIOUS fact is, however, that both the Japanese and their critics are right. Japan is seeking hegemony over China. But the only way that goal can really be achieved, and the Japanese know it, is with the willing or forced consent of China itself.

The Japanese militarists now running amok on the mainland of Asia may be simple-minded fellows. But they are not simple-minded enough to believe that the military occupation of all or a large part of China is within Japan's present or future capacity.

If Japan is ever to rule China, they realize full well, it will have to be through the Chinese in the same manner that Great Britain has ruled India, that France has ruled its North African colonies, that Holland has ruled the Dutch East Indies, and that the Japanese themselves now rule Manchuria.

Rule through natives all these powers have discovered is not only easier but also cheaper than rule by direct absorption. And at various times since 1915 Japan has sought to secure from China that measure of co-operation which, from the Japanese point of view, certainly would achieve that "stabilization of eastern Asia, Mr. Hirota talks about.

Japan tried in in 1915 by means of the notorious 21 Demands. They tried it again in 1918 by means of the wholesale bribery of Chinese war lords. They have sought to achieve the same objective through peaceful negotiation and placatory gestures. And since 1931 their method has been a mixture of force and threat of force.

• • • •

THE FACT THAT today they find themselves engaged on Chinese soil in their most considerable and expensive military venture since the Russo-Japanese war of 1904-05 shows that thus far their hopes have been unrealized. Can they realize them now?

The answer to this question, most people will be inclined to say, rests with the Chinese and Japanese armies now locked in a death struggle at Shanghai and in the north.

If China holds out it is obvious that Japan's ambitious program will end in disaster. Indeed, a victory for Nanking or even a stalemate would mean the permanent eclipse of Japan and could easily be followed by revolution in the land of the Mikado. But if the Japanese armies triumph, as is more likely, what then? Will Japan then be able to impose its will on China and make that nation into another Manchukuo?

For a time, possibly, it may succeed in doing just that. But by and large the triumph of Japan's arms on Chinese territory is very unlikely to result in anything resembling a constructive solution, in Japan's sense, of the China problem. For the China of today is not the India of the eighteenth century nor the North Africa of the nineteenth.

• • • •

THE FACT is that for all its clever imitation of the policies pursued by the great colonial powers of the past, the program now being pursued by the Japanese militarists is an anachronism and is certain to go to smash, sooner or later, on the rock of Chinese realities.

For the tide of nationalism which has been sweeping over Europe since the days of the French Revolution has spilled over into Africa and Asia and cannot easily be turned back. And in China's case twentieth century nationalism has merely intensified that consciousness of identity among Chinese which has characterized that people for millenia. Yet in order to achieve their objective of ruling through acquiescent Chinese the Japanese would have to smash the nationalist movement root and branch and destroy the effects this movement has had on the Chinese people.

Success for the Japanese under such circumstances would seem to be remote. Even in Manchuria where they have found willing puppets and where their troops have been garrisoned for 32 years the recurrent reports of unrest and mutiny indicate that the system which the islanders hope to extend to all of China is by no means an unadulterated success. Japan today finds it necessary to keep a larger garrison in Manchuria than ever before. And China is a far more difficult nut to crack than was Manchuria.

The odds against Chinese "co-operation" with Japan except under persistent military pressure would seem to be considerable. And the maintenance on Chinese soil of a military force proportionally as large as that which Japan is now forced to maintain in Manchuria would certainly bankrupt Japan. But in the pursuit of its basically impossible objective Japan may not only ruin itself but also ruin China and make a shambles of world peace.

Blue And Gray Together.

From San Francisco Chronicle.

A wave of gratification must follow the decision of the Grand Army of the Republic to hold a reunion with the Confederate veterans at Gettysburg next summer. This is not all sentiment, though the sentimental appeal is admittedly strong. Nor is it that such a gesture is needed to close finally the rift that once divided the States. That rift has happily been closed so many years that even its scars are no longer visible.

But this reunion will set a final seal on the notice America has long held before the world that its people can fight, and bitterly, even to the extent of civil war, to the limit of their strength, and accepting the result come together again in a united front.

When the surviving combatants of the bitterest dispute this Nation has had can meet as friends and comrades in joint commemoration of their battles and suffering and on the very field that was the scene of their bloodiest contest, then there should never be a lesser quarrel that cannot be composed by Americans.

This public demonstration of the great American example may have some special value at this time. We see bitterness arising of kinds that have never assailed this Nation before. They cut deeply, yet cannot cut more deeply than the division this people fought over in the sixties and closed successfully. America then went to the brink of the abyss and came back still America. After that, we should be untrue to both the Blue and the Gray if we cannot meet these lesser tests.

We rejoice that the old soldiers have decided to meet in this joint reunion. They are very few now, the strength of these is failing fast. If it were not done this time it might never be possible to do it at all. We shall see them on the field of Gettysburg, where they met in mortal combat 75 years before, now clasping hands in friendship and mutual respect. That American spectacle should be good for all of us.

Tom McCarthy

Attends A Wrestling Match!

IT APPEARED that the fat man was named Billy. His opponent wasn't so well known to the crowd, so they just yelled for Billy. The sweet-faced young woman in the row behind me was particularly insistent.

TOM McCARTHY.

"Kick him, Billy!" she screamed. "Kick him in the teeth!"

After she had advised Billy what to do, she sat back, gazed soulfully into the eyes of her escort and munched a peanut. By that time, the rest of the crowd was advising Billy to "kick him . . . kick him in the teeth."

Personally, I rather favored the unidentified opponent in the green shorts. He had sort of rare whimsy. While Billy was trying to kick him, he wound a couple of the ring ropes around Billy's neck and proceeded to choke him.

It was the spirit of the thing that was so catching. There was Billy—all 240 pounds of him—with his neck caught between the ring ropes. And there was his light-hearted opponent swinging on the ropes on the other side of the ring. He swung with the abandon of a schoolboy, just getting out for noon recess.

All the time, the referee was trying to get Billy's neck untangled, while the man in the green pants was jumping up and down on the ropes to tighten them up.

"Awk!" said Billy.

"Stop that!" said the referee, so the man in the green pants got off the ropes apologetically.

Then the referee went back to Billy. Just as they seemed to be making some headway, the man in green pants made another dive for the ring ropes. He swung back and forth, having the time of his life.

Finally, they did get the ropes from around Billy's neck, and Billy just stood there while everybody laughed.

• • • •

BILLY STOOD there a while holding onto his neck, as the man in the green pants came toward him. But "green pants" never quite got there; because a motherly looking woman in the row next to the ring got up and shook her fist at him.

The man in the green pants looked sort of sheepish, and blushed all over his chest. He looked sort of ashamed for jumping up and down on the ropes and squeezing Billy's neck like that. And while he looked down at the floor and the motherly looking lady lectured him, he hunted around in his shorts for some pockets to hide his hands.

All the time, everybody was laughing fit to kill; and Billy, who was no slouch for knowing a good thing when he saw it, realized that he'd better act quick. So he came over while the man in the green pants wasn't looking, and hit him a very resounding blow on the neck.

When the man in the green pants went down, Billy jumped on him and began to chew his ear. And then, because the other man's shoulders were touching the mat, the referee gave the match to Billy.

Everybody was very happy about that because Billy wasn't much of a wrestler, admittedly, was a little fat and had been the underdog. He had been the man whose neck had been squeezed between the ropes.

IT WASN'T until the evening was almost over that I realized that the night at Uncle Joe Turner's arena had been as carefully mapped out as a Hollywood scenario. I'd never seen professional wrestling bouts before and had fancied that maybe they were sporting events, just like boxing bouts or football games.

But then along toward the end of the evening, I began to figure out the appeal. It was sort of like watching a play.

In the first act, you had the fat man versus mean-tempered youth. And, of course, everybody loves to see a fat man beat a trained athlete. There was a real punch to that act.

In the next bout, Mr. Turner's card offered the historical motif. One combatant came from Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and the other came from Memphis, Tenn. The wrestling wasn't so good, but the feeling became downright sectional when the man from Memphis kept rubbing his taped wrist in the other fellow's eyes. There was sure-fire drama in that situation. Particularly, when the man from Iowa hit the man from Memphis when he wasn't looking.

The big bout of the evening, with one Mr. Joe Cox, was handled with real deftness. It seems that everyone hates Mr. Cox, because he is reputed to be a very surly sort of person. It has been reported that he antagonizes his opponents by sticking his fingers in their eyes. Which, as everyone knows, is not the nicest thing to do.

Well, it took a little figuring to carry that bout through and keep the audience happy. It would have been too bad for Mr. Cox to lose, because he is looked on as being very close to getting into very "big time." And yet everybody wanted to see Mr. Cox beaten up.

Mr. Cox realizes the value of all this, so I don't think he was greatly disturbed when one of the ringsiders threatened to take a punch at him. It seemed that the man's wife did not like Mr. Cox. In fact, she had told him so. And he had replied in kind. Therefore, the man wanted to defend his wife's honor. The audience was all against Mr. Cox.

Well, as I said, it was a pretty tough situation for anybody to figure out, but it was deftly done. Mr. Cox's opponent was a fine looking young man called "Handsome." At least, all the ladies kept yelling, "Break his leg, Handsome! Put his eyes, out, Handsome!"

Well, "Handsome" didn't do so well for a while, what with Mr. Cox kicking him in the face and using other mean means, which constantly threatened to destroy his earthly beauty.

But, just when the going was very rough, "Handsome" became inspired. He drove the audience wild with his evident intent of cracking Mr. Cox's skull open on a ring post. He would grab Mr. Cox by the hair, drag him across the mat and throw him at the ring posts.

All the ladies and gentlemen in the audience just settled back in the warm glow of accomplishment as it became apparent that Mr. Cox would shortly be in need of medical attention.

However, as I say, it would have been very hard luck if Mr. Cox had lost the match, considering his big-time match next week. So, after the audience had enjoyed seeing him almost beaten to a pulp, he made a quick swing at "Handsome." "Handsome" went down. Mr. Cox jumped on him, pinned his shoulders, and the match was over.

Everyone went home very happy, because, while the villain still walked abroad, they'd nearly got him that time. And they'd get another crack at him, next week, come Thursday night.

Radio Series For Americas Opened by Hull

Secretary Urges a 'Shock-Proof' System for Hemisphere.

Secretary Hull last night commended to the 21 American republics an "international system so firmly grounded in mutual understanding that it will be proof against any shocks to which it may be subjected."

Inaugurating a series of regular broadcasts to Latin-America under auspices of the Pan-American Union, the Secretary of State characterized radio communication as an important factor in the achievement of such an objective.

"As yet," he asserted, "we have hardly begun to fathom the possibilities of radio communication as a factor in the development of international good will and understanding.

"Through the new series of programs which the Pan-American Union is inaugurating today, we are taking an important step in the fulfilment of the resolutions of the Montevideo and Buenos Aires conferences."

(He referred to the Pan-American Conference at Montevideo in 1933 and to the inter-American Peace Conference at Buenos Aires last December, both of which he attended.

Hull spoke as chairman of the Pan-American Union's governing board.

"This new instrumentality," he said, "possesses a special significance for the American republics. In our democracies, in which we seek to have public opinion guide both domestic and foreign policy, it is of vital importance that there should be an enlightened public opinion that is kept in touch with the trend of national thought and with the outstanding developments of the national life of other peoples.

"Only in this way can we hope to build up an international system so firmly grounded in mutual understanding that it will be proof against any shocks to which it may be subjected."

$566,843,868 Paid In War Pensions

By the Associated Press.

Former service men and their dependents cost Uncle Sam $566,843,868 in the year which ended June 30, but this was $22,720,458 less than they received in fiscal 1936, the Veterans Administration reported yesterday.

An additional $12,489,052 was paid in the last year to veterans or dependents outside contineatal United States.

About 380,0000 World War veterans accounted for more than one-fourth the total disbursement, receiving $183,315,296. Their dependents received $36,153,508.

Two dependents of War of 1812 veterans, Mrs. Carolina King of Cheektowaga, N. Y., and Mrs. Esther A. H. Morgan of Independence, Ore., drew $600 and $240 respectively.

Spanish-American War veterans, 173,361 in number, drew $96,618,465. Dependents' pensions totaled $18,305,669.

Only 7,031 Union Veterans of the Civil War were drawing pensions in June, but families of their 76,131 dead comrades received $37,628,439.

Mexican War dependents got $132,776; and from the Indian wars, 3,119 living veterans drew $1,811,537, and dependents $1,681,906.

The Federal Diary

Reg. U. S. Pat. Office.

By Scott Hart.

Accounting

Of course, you knew the disagreeable subject of money would somewhere be injected in the accounting of stewardship that Jacob Baker, U. F. W. A. head arranged for the C. I. O., the U. F. W. A.'s parent, in convention assembled.

It formed a very cozy paragraph, seemed almost appended to the lengthy report which dealt principally with aims and accomplishments to date.

"As to financial status," it reads, "we have drawn from the C. I. O., funds to the amount of $20,000, and it appears it will be between four and six months before we reach the 20,000 membership necessary to carry the organization upon a self-supporting basis."

"We hope this time may come sooner. We should like to carry our own burdens unaided and to be able to lend a hand to our common task with the C. I. O. We believe the organized Federal worker has a contribution to make to the progressive labor movement, and we believe that contribution to be worth the effort we and you are putting into organizing him."

This indicates that the C. I. O. has made another donation into the U. F. W. A. kitty since the organization was begun on June 22, last. The provisional president announced shortly thereafter that $5,000 was the initial offering.

• • • •

The organization, you will recall, started off in life with some seven locals that were ousted from the American Federation of Government Employes after a memorable row concerning the holding of a mass meeting and the extent of action to be taken against Government economy as this would affect employes. Of the later growth, the report to the C. I. O. states:

"During the month of July, 12 such locals came in, with a dues-paying membership of 1,300. We now have 50 affiliated locals, representing 6,500 members—22 locals covering the major departments in Washington, and 28 locals in the field. These locals are in marine hospitals, arsenals, the custom service, veterans' facilities and other agencies in California, Louisiana, Montana, Colorado, Illinois, Missouri, New York, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, North Carolina, West Virginia, Ohio and Maryland. Locals have formed at the rate of two a week since our organization. More recently, this rate has accelerated."

The handicap of competing with 25-cent and 50-cent unions that preceded the U. F. W. A. into the Government field was a problem, the report indicates "Government workers because they have paid dues amounting to less than 50 cents a month for ineffective unions are today reluctant to pay 75 cents. But our continuing achievements are rapidly correcting this problem."

The U. F. W. A. indicated that it wants to lean heavily on its parent organization. "You have experience and ideas that we must draw from you," the report stated. "Our legislative program requires your assistance. Consideration should be given the knotty problem of bringing the postal workers into the progressive labor movement. The task of molding public opinion to which the Government worker is peculiarly sensitive, is one we cannot neglect. These are the problems that require your attention as well as our own."

As far as we could read in the report there was no direct reference to strikes and picketing. The very omission must have startled those old past masters in the art, the C. I. O. brethren.

Outing

The annual autumn outing of Labor Department Lodge, No. 228, A. F. G. E., will be held this week-end at the Oaks, Galesville, Md., West River Yacht Club. The attractions include chicken and oyster roast, music, dancing, fishing, cards and other games. Regarding transportation, you should contact Gail T. Judd; about other arrangements see one or another of the following: Ethel Buckingham, Alice Letourneau, Dorothy Freeman, Willard Maynie, Mae McElligott, Eddie Dimond, Benjamin Harp, V. S. Baril, Alice Derrow, Alice W. Smothers, Milbia Williams, Mary Nesbit.

The Massachusetts Democratic Club of Washington will hold its first fall meeting on Monday night in Room D, Washington Hotel. James J. McEntee, first assistant director, CCC, will speak on: "The Civilian Conservation Corps, its Purpose and Accomplishments." There will be movies of CCC work, with emphasis on Massachusetts activity. The club will discuss its 1937 program and outline a plan for next year. Robert Fechner, of the CCC, is a member of the Massachusetts organization. M. Leo Looney, jr., is the president; John McCormack is the director of membership.

Now comes the Interior Department Recreation Association—always at bat—to announce a Hallowe'en frolic. This will be held on Friday evening, October 29, in the Activity Space of the new building.

Buffalo, Elk, Deer Offered for Sale by Government Body

If you have no buffalo, elk or mule deer in your home and wish to correct the deficiency, Uncle Sam thinks he has the very pet you want.

The Federal Government, through its Bureau of Biological Survey, yesterday announced it is placing on sale 260 buffalo (or bison), 223 elk and 100 mule deer. They are surplus stock on game preserves in Montana, Oklahoma, Nebraska and North Dakota.

Each specimen will bear a price tag—there's to be no auction—and the buyer has his choice of hauling his purchase from the preserve, having it shipped or, if he has a taste for gamey meat, letting the Government butcher, dress and ship the product.

Preference will be given buyers who plan to use the buffalo, deer and elk for propagation or exhibition purposes, it was said at the Biological Survey, which administers the preserves. In fact, zoos are on the free list, being charged only for capture, crating and transportation.

The Government expects to dispose of them all by the first of the year.

Hilarious Fun Sets the Pace In Keith Film

'Breakfast for Two' Has Lively Story and Able Stars and Cast.

"BREAKFAST FOR TWO." RKO-Radio picturization of a story by David Garth, adapted to the screen by Charles Kaufman, Paul Yawitz and Viola Brothers Shore, costarring Barbara Stanwyck and Herbert Marshall, with Glenda Farrell, Eric Blore, Etienne Girardot, Donald Meek, Frank M. Thomas and Pierre Watkins. Directed by Alfred Santell. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Mary Harris. At RKO-Keith's Theater.

When a ranch girl from the West meets a playboy from the East, there's bound to be quite a rodeo.

So when breezy Barbara Stanwyck encounters Manhattanish Herbert Marshall, they go in for a large session of what the English call "pub-crawling" and we term night-clubbing. The evening winds up as "Breakfast for Two," under the horrified chaperonage of Eric Blore.

To such a running start does this laugh-crammed comedy get away. And from there on, it actually gets faster and funnier. The general idea is that Barbara wants to "make a man" out of Herbert and then to marry him. She starts off by using her millions to push him into bankruptcy and take away the steamship line that has been in his family for generations.

Just One Scrap After Another.

Herbert, oddly, does not appreciate this effort to uplift him. He and Babs have verbal fights, box fights and finaly a pastry fight which culminates magnificently when Miss Stanwyck does a standing-sliding sit-down very hard into the wreckage of a cake she has just tossed at her boy friend. In desperation, Herbert twice tries to marry a blonde showgirl, Glenda Farrell, but each time the wedding ceremonies are broken up, first by a group of long-bearded window cleaners, who drive the bride into hysterics; secondly by a strange man who asserts that the near-bride is "the mother of my chillen."

Finally, Eric Blore rushes in with a marriage certificate purporting to show that Herbert and Barbara were married on that famous first night they met. It's a fake, of course, but Herbert wouldn't know that.

All of this crossing up at the cross-roads is the work of sweet Barbara, who doesn't propose to lose her Herbert to any blonde. Nor does she. But why tell all of one of the most hilarious yarns yet brought to the screen?

"Well, Blore Me Down!"

Aside from the high-caliber loving and fighting of Miss Stanwyck and Mr. Marshall, the picture belongs particularly to that unique person, Eric Blore. Again a butler, again confronted with all sorts of horrifically embarrassing situations. Eric contrives to be amazingly funny at every turn. Laugh honors also accrue to Donald Meek as the quaint little clergyman who presides at the almost-weddings. A star actor, too, is Peewee, a huge great dane, spotted like a Holstein cow and just about as large. Peewee knows all his tricks, does them with amiable dignity and photographs like a million.

The news-reel features an impressive part of the President's last fireside chat. Also there is a dude ranch short, with plenty of cowboy singing and cowgirl dancing, and "Hollywood Screen Test" which will give all the girls ideas about poise, diction and beautification.

Metropolitan

"THIS WAY, PLEASE." Paramount picturization of a story by Maxwell Shane and Bill Thomas, adapted to the screen by Grant Garrett, Seena Owen and Howard J. Green, featuring Charles "Buddy" Rogers and Betty Grable, with Ned Sparks, Jim and Marian Jordan, Porter Hall, Lee Bowman, Cecil Cunningham, Rufe Davis, Wally Vernon, Jerry Bergen and Mary Livingstone. Directed by Robert Florey. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Sally Stroud. At the Metropolitan Theater.

One of the featured songs in "This Way, Please," is entitled "Is It Love or Infatuation?" and any person in the audience liking this alleged musical comedy would have to feel a shading of schoolboy or schoolgirl infatuation for "Buddy" Rogers or Betty Grable to sit through it without squirming a little now and then.

There is really no excuse for its being so mediocre as it is. Ned Sparks, Porter Hall and divers other usually reliable supporting players are present, but their lines are no less wooden and adolescent than those given to the stars. The stars are Miss Grable, who is blonde, and wears too much lipstick and sings and dances, and Mr. Rogers, the boy grown older, but still with his white-toothed smile and clarinet. Mary Livingstone debuts, and would be better with lines having some of the snap of her familiar radio routines.

Bright spots are made by the brief appearances of Fibber McGee and Molly in some homely laugh-swapping bits, and Rufe Davis, who sings a song about how he is the sound-effects man. Miss Grable dances. Who doesn't? Three assorted stooges, one fat piano player, one dumb-panned usher and one dwarfed projector operator (all of the theater wherein the action transpires) sing a daffy song about how what the world needs is Voom! and do it very well. Which is all the roses we can distribute to the cast.

An Oft-Told Tale.

The story has been told and acted many times before, and sometimes more deftly. All about a girl who wants to sing and dance, who gets entangled with a handsome young man already safe with a theatrical reputation. Their troubles are magnified, each goes into his specialty and the fadeout features a romantic merging.

The Three Stooges, Larry, Curly and Moe, romp gruntingly through one of their riotous comedies. This one is about how they blast their way into a Treasury vault and is accompanied by the usual amount of wheezing, head-whacking and delirious howls from the audience.

And the horrors of war-in-the-East as shown in the newsreel is a shocking change. Filmed by a Universal cameraman, who seemingly feared neither shock nor shell, some of the shots are unforgettable. Mme. Chiang Kai-shek is seen in several places, notably at a hospital dedication, when falling Japanese bombs almost canceled the ceremonies.

Glamor.

Ernst Lubitsch says that one of the secrets of Marlene Dietrich's success is the fact that she retains her glamor in real life. He has just directed her in "Angel," with Herbert Marshall and Melvyn Douglas.

Melodrama and Music Fill Capitol Silver Sheet; 'Zola' Comes to Earle Screen at Popular Prices

Jerome Kern Music Lends Lilt to Story of Oil Field Struggle.

"HIGH, WIDE AND HANDSOME." Paramount picturization of a story by Oscar Hammerstein 2d, adapted to the screen by the author, costarring Irene Dunne and Randolph Scott, with Raymond Walburn, Dorothy Lamour, Charles Bickford, Elizabeth Patterson, William Frawley, Akim Tamiroff, Ben Blue, Alan Hale, Helen Lowell, Lucien Littlefield and Irving Pichel. Musical score by Jerome Kern. Directed by Rouben Mamoulian. Previewed Tuesday, October 12. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

Executed with a pretentiousness of scene and distinction of cast hardly justified by the caliber of the story, "High, Wide and Handsome" combines music and melodrama in a manner that sometimes is anti-climactic and therefore less dramatically sound than it should be.

BELL.

Initiating the action with the accidental meeting between a singer with a traveling medicine show and a young Pennsylvania farmer intent on perfecting an automatic drill to plumb for oil on his land, the authors then have undertaken to keep two parallel stories running simultaneously. One is of the love that springs up when Sally Watterson and Randolph Scott are thrown together in his grandmother's house, after "Doctor" Watterson's medicine wagon has burned down to the wheels; the other of the bitter fight waged between the local farmers and the railroad interests for control of the oil fields the natives have brought in. Either would have been sufficient basis for a complete and logical story. Combined they rather get in each other's way.

Thrills Abound.

Following the romantic introduction of the fable, there ensue developments that are prolific in thrilling situations that suggest, but do not effectively simulate, those that contributed so much to "Cimarron," Irene Dunne's first great success on the screen, with its scenes laid in another section of the country also rich in "black gold." The coming in of the first gusher is a realistic bit of man's triumph over nature, but somehow lacks the thrill it was intended to induce. There is suspense and violent action in the running of the pipe line over uncounted miles of countryside, to defeat the sinister schemes of the rival money interests, and the play's climax is a turbulent carnival of physical conflict that it would be difficult to excel in sheer movement.

"High, Wide and Handsome," as a matter of fact, abounds in physical frenzies and defeated love. Intermingled with these periods of tempestuous violence are the five songs composed by Jerome Kern, with lyrics by Oscar Hammerstein 2d, sung effectively by Miss Dunne and Dorothy Lamour. Ben Blue supplies a typically bizarre vein of rustic comedy that efficiently assuages the brutal impact of certain scenes that would be a little too grim without such whimsical relief.

And among the cast are several who turn in character portrayals that are well above the average in merit. These include that versatile character comedian, Raymond Walburn, as "Doc" Watterson, the pompous and voluble medicine man; Elizabeth Patterson, "Grandma" Cortlandt, with more than a bit of the old fighting spirit in her heart; Alan Hale, the railroad tycoon, and Charles Bickford, as a tough marauder whose ominous activities never quite come to a head. Dorothy Lamour fills a place of importance as the shanty boat singer, and Irving Pichel, long absent from the screen, exercises a reformer's usual pernicious prerogatives. The medicine show introduction to the play's later ramifications paves the way for the participation of a complete circus outfit's taking part in the picture's serio-comic climax—a climax that surrenders something of its dramatic integrity to extravagant grotesquery.

Stars Never Falter.

Irene Dunne and Randolph Scott offer performances that swing from romantic charm to melodramatic intensity without ever losing the thread of the story's most important course and purpose.

The Capitol's stage bill constitutes an exhibit of about the best that is left in vaudeville. Dorothy Stone and Charles Collins—she the daughter of the revered Fred Stone, and he the agile star of the Technicolor production of "The Dancing Pirate"—headline the program in a particularly graceful and decorous interval of song and dance, and George Beatty, "half singer and half wit," ambles through the proceedings as a sort of impromptu master of ceremonies who finally delivers himself of a crisp monologue and a couple of tricky songs. Texas Jim Lewis and his Lone Star Cowboys, fortified with guitars, violin, banjo, accordion and bass viol, wow the customers with their humorous chanteys, and the Five Elgins juggle Mexican hats and Indian clubs with watch-like precision to open the bill.

The Fox Movietone News, with new horrors in China, and Phil Lampkin's Orchestra further augment a screen feature through which it can be guaranteed no one will doze.

Columbia

"Dead End," Samuel Goldwyn's remarkably faithful picturization of the stage play of the same name by Sidney Kingsley, yesterday inaugurated its third week on F street as chief screeen feature of the bill at Loew's Columbia Theater.

This excellently made and acted picture serves a double purpose. It affords vivid and thrilling entertainment and at the same time offer a study of the problem of underprivileged youngsters in our large cities that is as keenly alive in humor and drama as it is sociologically sound.

The scene is a slum settlement on New York's East River at a point where it abuts against a fashionable apartment house occupied by the over-rich. In this metropolitan melting pot is brewed a mixture of idealism and vicious criminality that has as its principal ingredients a tenement dreamer who has made something fine of his life, a girl who attempts to guide the footsteps of her incorrigible younger brother, a gang of his associates on the docks, "Baby Face" Martin, the country's Public Enemy No. 1, and that rich family across the way. From all this is evolved one of the current theater's best melodramas.

The pivotal roles are played by Joel McCrea, Sylvia Sidney, Humphrey Bogart, Allen Jenkins, Wendy Barrie, Claire Trevor and that precious gang of young hoodlums who lent so much realistic "punch" to Norman Bel Geddes' original stage production.

The single setting in which the play is disclosed—with various camera angles giving it new perspectives—never grows monotonous. The action is too strident for that.

In its most recent downtown showing, "Dead End" is supplemented by the usual list of screen short subjects, including a new issue of the pictured "Events of the Day," and is an exhibit that is well worth seeing even a second time.

Palace

Joan Crawford, Franchot Tone and Robert Young all seem like nice people and it's really too bad to make them say some of the terribly overwritten lines handed them in "The Bride Wore Red," now in its second week at the Palace.

Miss Crawford is Anni, a singer in the lowest and most decrepit dive in all Trieste. A rich and insufferable "gentleman" chooses her as the subject of a great experiment. He wants to find out the difference between a lady and Anni, so he sends her off to a fashionable Tyrolean resort for two whole weeks. That ends the experiment and the gentleman never reappears.

Once in the Tyrol, Anni is kept busy with two romances, one real and one ambitious. The casting director ended all suspense about which romance would jell by casting Robert Young as the rich laddie. Mr. Young just automatically becomes the odd angle of any screen triangle these days. We don't know why, because surely he would make some heroine a nice husband.

Joan Crawford does a good job, a very good one considering the handicaps, and really works on the role of Anni. Her little wish-fulfillment speech in the postman's home is especially well played. The feminine verdict is divided on the haircut but not even our beloved Garbo could get away with that final black cape!

Franchot Tone makes the postman quite real, which is something of a minor miracle considering how picturesque the poor character has to be, and Mary Phillips is excellent as Anni's friend. Billie Burke, Lynne Carver and Reginald Owen lend elegant support.

Interesting subsidiaries complete the bill.

Stanwyck, Doug Return to Studio

Barbara Stanwyck, who has been on vacation in New York, and Douglas Fairbanks, jr., recently signed in London to play opposite Ginger Rogers in "Having Wonderful Time," have arrived in Hollywood ready for their new assignments.

Miss Stanwyck's next picture will be "Behold the Bridegroom."

Dances to Favor at the Capitol

The daughter of the veteran Fred Stone, popular dancing star of an earlier day in the theater, Dorothy Stone, in partnership with Charles Collins—her husband in private life—this week catches the fancy of discriminating audiences in the headline spot on the vaudeville bill at Loew's Capitol. A unique portrait study of Miss Stone appears above.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Oct. 15.—Idol Chatter: One of their bosom pals will bet you 10 to 1 that Bob Taylor and Barbara Stanwyck are married before Christmas — and the guy has never been known to make a reckless wager. Dave Apollon's Russian accent is insured for $100,000 — according to his press agent. That fabled Fountain of Youth must be in Janet Gaynor's back yard—she's been a star for 11 years and seems as young as ever. Miscasting famous pictures: How about Mary Pickford for the Garbo role in "Camille?"

BARBARA STANWYCK.

This week's best off-screen comedy: Frederic March's dead-pan monologue on the reasoning power of a goldfish. The news that Bing Crosby keeps a pet bullfrog cases my curiosity—now I know where he learned that chesty "Boop." With all the other studios hanging out the "No Visitor" signs, Paramount is so overrun that even C. B. DeMille, who thrives on an audience, is squawking. Claire Windsor is out for a screen comeback, and if sheer beauty can turn the trick, she is a cinch. Look alikes: George Bancroft and Bill Spaulding, the noted football coach.

The official hangout of Hollywood's newspaper scribes seems to be Richard Arlen's swimming pool. Hollywood Oddities: There is a veteran gateman at the United Artists Studio who has never seen a movie —his religion taboos the theater. The Marx Brothers must be dollar marks—they are demanding $250,000 a picture. Luli Deste is the daughter of an Austrian baron and the former wife of an Austrian baron.

To hear Carole Lombard—hardly a cooing dove in even her most subdued moments—swapping barbed insults with her director, Mitchell Leisen, you would judge them venomous enemies. And you would be 100 per cent wrong, for they are the most devoted friends in Hollywood. Several years ago, when Carole was a struggling second-rater and Mitch was an assistant to C. B. DeMille, with mighty slim chances of ever being anything more, they swore an alliance. Whatever breaks came to the one were to be shared with the other. Mitch's number came up on the Hollywood wheel of fortune first—and he celebrated by demanding Carole as his star. Ask her today for "the secret of her success" and she will point to Mitch.

"I wouldn't amount to a damn without that man," she will tell you with Lombard vigor. Ask Mitch the same question and he will say, "Well, I've been lucky enough to have the best trouper in the business as my star," and then they start insulting each other with renewed enthusiasm.

The great pother about casting "Gone With the Wind" goes merrily on—with Douglass Montgomery so eager to play the part of Ashley Wilkes when (and if) the picture is finally made that he fairly drools at thought of it. When he first read the book he dashed to a telegraph office and shot a wire to David Selznick, the producer . . . "Would like to play Ashley Wilkes in 'Gone With the Wind.'" Selznick sent a wire in reply, saying, "Thanks for the suggestion—it's a thought." Doug rushed to the telegraph office and dashed off another wire. It read: "You're wrong. It's not a thought —it's an ambition!"

From a man who worked on her set I picked up a Garbo story today that is a little belated but too good to keep. Seems that she formed a dislike for the associate producer of "Madame Walewska" and sizzled inwardly every time he came on the set—which was often. Finally, in the middle of a scene, she suddenly stopped, calmly announced that she was going to her dressing room and would not return until all "visitors" were off the stage. All superfluous watchers fled—all excepting the associate producer. Garbo then looked at him directly and said, in her iciest voice: "I meant all visitors!" The producer gasped, started to protest—and left. Garbo returned triumphantly to work.

Paul Muni and Star Cast Score Again in Drama of French Writer.

"THE LIFE OF EMILE ZOLA." Warner Brothers picturization of a story by Heinz Herald and Geza Herczeg, adapted to the screen by Norman Reilly Raine and the authors, starring Paul Muni, with Joseph Schildkraut, Gale Sondergaard, Donald Crisp, Gloria Holden, Erin O'Brien Moore, Morris Carnovsky, Ralph Morgan, Charles Richman, Montagu Love, Louis Calhern, Robert Barrat, Robert Warwick, Grant Mitchell, Lumsden Hare, Gilbert Emery, John Litel, Walter Kingsford and scores more. Directed by William Dieterle. Reviewed Friday afternoon at the Earle Theater.

Moving with directness and cumulative power from the early struggle for recognition of a young writer in a dingy Paris garret to the dramatic climax of his "I Accuse" and subsequent trial before the high tribunal for having dared to flout the sacrosanct traditions of the French high command, "The Life of Emile Zola" came yesterday to the screen at the Earle Theater with Paul Muni executing one of his most distinguished characterizations in the title role.

"The Life of Emile Zola," seen late in the summer as a "road show" attraction at the National Theater, is more than a vivid melodrama based on the Dreyfus scandal that rocked France and riveted the attention of all the world within the memory of those still living. It is a tremendously forceful and vital plea for justice and a drama of deep and poignant human fortitude and courage. It traces as corollary elements of its heroic story Capt. Dreyfus' tortured persecution as a criminally condemned prisoner on Devil's Island and Zola's impassioned crusade in his defense, at the risk of his own fortune, reputation and citizenship in his beloved homeland.

A Tense Human Study.

Here are welded with rare insight and dramatic vigor the pathetic spectacle of hopeless human misery and the inspiring revelation of a supreme humanitarianism in which a towering figure of his time is willing to face any personal sacrifice for the establishment and preservation of honor, truth and justice; a Gentile sounding the bedrock of human relationships on behalf of a Jew he never has met or seen. This is drama in its highest and purest form.

This basis of gripping narrative is embellished with innumerable touches of illuminating and authentic byplay, humor and deft bits of character analysis and delineation. The central figure always is Zola—except for those fleeting scenes in which Dreyfus discloses the depth of his agony and proportionate exaltation of spirit in his consciousness of innocence.

So much has already been written and said of Paul Muni's studious portrayal of the character of Emile Zola, from early manhood to his death by asphyxiation, that nothing remains now but to repeat that here is a biographical study of the first water impressively executed by one of the theater's most competent living actors. Deserving of mention in the same paragraph is the uncommonly able performance contributed to the picture by Joseph Schildkraut, in the role of Dreyfus. Schildkraut not only acts, but looks and apparently live the part.

Support is Distinguished.

So many have places of importance in the supporting ensemble that only a few at this time may be singled out for individual acclaim. These few, by every right, should include Donald Crisp, Charles Richman, Erin O'Brien Moore, as the Nana immortalized by Zola in print; Gloria Holden, Robert Barrat, Robert Warwick and Morris Marcovsky, who, as Anatole France, delivers the eulogy over the bier of his dead friend.

In direction and settings, "Zola" takes rank with the most finished and most distinguished films that have been brought to the screen.

The stage bill at the Earle this week is largely in keeping with the dignity and importance of the major screen feature. The two outstanding intervals of artistry are offered by Rosa Ponselle, mezzo soprano, who sings "Just a Little Love, a Little Kiss," the cigarette song from Bizet's "Carmen" and a popular medley that verges closely upon "swing," and Mayris Chaney and Edward Fox, "artists of the dance," who, in the grace and intricacy of their routines are precisely that. Roy Smeck repeats his habitual popular hit with his banjo and steel guitar numbers and the Olympic Trio open the bill with roller skating feats on an elevated platter that seems too small for the stunts they execute upon it.

The Paramount News and orchestral interludes complete an entertainment that offers one of the great amusement bargains of this or any other season.

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, Oct. 15.

TURMOIL: Mrs. Marion H. Pierce, ex-wife of Conky Whitehead, again will appear in the law courts soon—this time as plaintiff in an unusual suit. . . . Her attorney has written a letter to a New York photographer, who took a picture of Mrs. Pierce walking through Central Park with some pigs on leash. . . . Mrs. Pierce doesn't object to the pictures, nor to the pigs. But she does resent the fact that, in the published photo, there was no mention of the all-important fact that these were HER pigs!

• • • •

SWANK: H. R. H. Princess Brinda of Kapurthala arrived from India a few weeks ago. Her highness is descended from a long line of royal blood, and so New York society has been doing its best to provide only dignified entertainment, in keeping with her birthright. . . . Monday evening the Princess sneaked off with Michael Bartlett, the screen star. They went to a night club, where Bartlett asked her: "What would you like to do?" . . . "Just one thing," confessed the regal lady, "just one thing I'm crazy about—The Big Apple."

• • • •

ENTERPRISE: Ever since the primary results, in which Senator Copeland was defeated, Al Smith has not participated in the New York political campaign. . . . Joseph D. McGoldrick, Fusion candidate for Controller, is having his publicity work done by Joe Israels 2d. Mr. Israels is the public relations counsel—for Al Smith.

• • • •

DEFEAT: The owners of La Conga decided to enlarge the bar last week and decorate it with a new mural of celebrities. In making the alterations the manager uncovered a celebrity mural which had been displayed there when the place was known as Le Boeuf Sur Le Toit. . . . The manager, overjoyed at the prospective saving, called Vernon MacFarlane, his decorator—who rushed to inspect the find. "No good," the decorator declared. For among the celebrities whose caricatures appeared in that panel were Lilyan Tashman, Marilyn Miller, Irving Thalberg and Jean Harlow.

MISTAKE: The backers of the Mayfair Casino in Cleveland, then about to be built, came to New York to get some ideas for the new enterprise. The night club which appealed to them most was the French Casino . . . and so they studied it carefully, made their plans and returned to Cleveland to erect their club. . . . Incongruously enough, a Sandwich Shop and Grill is part of the new place. For in aping the French Casino here the visitors also had taken in the Brass Rail Grill, which adjoins the French Casino—but is an entirely separate institution.

BEAUTY: Sam Goldwyn was informed that a number of show girls had responded to the call to appear in the "Goldwyn Follies." The producer summoned an assistant and delegated to him the task of selecting three of the most beautiful from that group. "I'll look at them later and see if your selections are okay," he stated. . . . The assistant selected the trio, and then turned to the producer for approval. "Well, the first two are okay," Goldwyn declared, "but that third one—she's only voluptuous."

CHATTER: Mrs. Roosevelt's brother has been retained as a consultant by the Commercial Investment Trust, concerning their difficulties in the Midwest Federal courts. . . . The ownership of Carnegie Hall soon will be in the hands of a new group who want more income and less swanky atmosphere. . . . Although Lowell Thomas has made two down payments on the million-dollar Fred F. French estate at Pawling, he'll drop the deal—because he was unable to get 20 members to chip in $25,000 each for an exclusive country club. . . . Mrs. Martin Johnson, when she returns from Africa, will assist Vincent Lopez in his N. Y. U. lectures, furnishing the African background for the origin of jazz. . . . Sinclair Lewis will attack Ernest Hemingway in News-Week, concluding with the advice for him "to stop saving Spain and start saving Hemingway."

SUCCESS: Last week the Modern Age Library released 50,000 copies of "Men Who Lead Labor"—which immediately were sold. Yesterday copies of that book couldn't be found in any bookshop, except one—the Worker's Bookshop on Thirteenth street.

Trans-Lux

Pictures coming out of the China-Jap conflict are touching the high spots in realism and horror and the cameramen are surely risking their necks to record the fantastic conflict that seems to grow more grotesque each day. Trans-Lux this week has a dizzying sequence of shots that present the bombing of Nanking. Here is grim, terrifying war in the raw, arriving with the stark simplicity of a Hemingway novel, freed of all Hollywood fanfare, but nonetheless a fearsome experience to those who are caught in the net.

The news of national scope is led off by President Roosevelt, preaching peace, and American Legionnaires in Paris and Rome, celebrating the last conflict and honoring the lone dead.

Winter has arrived at Mount Washington, New Hampshire. That is snow; the mercury is skidding; the last train of the season has a powdered coat. Down South, cotton is getting picked by machines, while jumping back to Paris, Gen. Pershing sees a statue of himself unveiled. "Spot" news centers in the scenes showing the big day at Bangor, Me., when G-men end the career of the latest No. 1 public enemy, the late Mr. Brady, and a 68-year-old woman gets beauty treatment that deducts 15 years from her appearance.

Clyde Beatty's circus provides the most interesting big-top short in many moons, depicting the unloading process, which is always more interesting than the performance. And, speaking of color and charm and natural wonders, "Long Bright Land" presents a travelogue on New Zealand that is far above the usual run of such subjects.

Lucille Ball Gets Reward for Work

Because of Lucille Ball's splendid work in "Stage Door," recently completed feature starring Katharine Hepburn, Ginger Rogers and Adolphe Menjou, S. J. Briskin has torn up the blonde actress' old contract and has given her a new one with a generous salary increase.

Miss Ball is currently supporting Miss Rogers in the flame-haired star's new solo feature, "Having Wonderful Time."

Firemen Duel With Hoses as House Blazes

Governor's Car Stalled While Bus Passengers Rescue Woman.

Paul Bouic, about 40, of Kensington, Md., was sought last night on a warrant charging disorderly conduct after a Montgomery County blaze enlivened by the escape of a woman and two children, a battle with fire hose and temporary stalling of Gov. Harry W. Nice and his police escort.

The affidavit accompanying the warrant, sworn to by Fire Chief Charles Deffenbaugh, charges Bouic with interfering with firemen in performance of their duty, using profanity on a public highway and attacking the chief. The warrant was issued by Justice of the Peace Charles Webb at Rockville.

In the blaze, which destroyed a 10-room frame house occupied by Mr. and Mrs. William T. Partridge and their two sons, Edward, 10 months old, and William T. 3d, 2 years, Mrs. Partridge and the children escaped before they were greatly endangered. Mr. Partridge was at work in Washington.

Trouble started among the firefighters, according to Chief Deffenbaugh, when his Silver Spring volunteer company arrived at the scene, near Wheaton on Seventh street road. The Kensington department, he said, already was there, laying a long hose line back to Kensington.

The Silver Spring company went immediately into action. Bouic, the chief said, was in front of the flaming building, attempting to reach it with water ejected from an insect sprayer. Upon the arrival of the Silver Spring force, Chief Diffenbaugh said Bouic greeted them with disparaging comments and, when he was answered, turned the stream from the sprayer on them. About that time water reached the nozzle of the fire hose and was directed on Bouic, sweeping him round a corner of the house.

After the Silver Spring company had returned to its quarters, its chief charged, Bouic entered the firehouse and attacked him, tearing his shirt.

During the fire, Gov. Nice, behind an escort of motorcycles, rolled up on his way to make an address at the University of Maryland. The party was delayed ten minutes while perplexed State police endeavored to find some way out of the dilemma. Finally firemen raised the hose and the Governor's party sped on.

Passersby, attracted by the smoke and flames before the fire had made great headway, rushed in and assisted Mrs. Partridge and removed most of the furniture. Among these were passengers from a Baltimore bus.

The house, according to local legend, was built before the Civil War and contained a beam made of wood from each State in the Union. Loss was estimated by firemen at $5,000.

Windsors in Time To See Congress

given every official and unofficial courtesy, and it is apparent that this also will be true in Washington.

Meantime the State Department and other departments of the Government are looking to the British Embassy for guidance.

"We know that his visit is private," said an attache. "We know that he is a member of the royal family and will be treated as such. We have made no arrangements for a visit to Washington. We have not been asked to make any."

From Berlin came word that the Duke, in order to emphasize the privacy of his visit, had agreed to let Thomas J. Watson, president of the International Chamber of Commerce, make all the arrangements.

And it was further reported yesterday that Windsor may come here as "a friend who happened along" with Charles E. Bedeaux, New York industrial engineer. It was in Bedeaux's French castle that the former King Edward VIII and the former Wallace Warfield were married.

The plan, it is said, is for interviews to be arranged for Bedeaux and for the Duke to go along.

Essen, Germany, Oct. 15 (AP).—The Duke of Windsor came up blackened by an hour and a half in the coal pits at Duisburg today and then came to Essen for an inspection of the huge Krupp works.

"I've never been so black in my life," the duke said.

He tramped untiringly through the giant Krupp plant. Only the section where war materials are manufactured was omitted from the tour. Because of a long-standing rule against women in the plant, the duke left the duchess at the gate.

2 Girls Killed en Route To See Brother in Game

Clarion, Pa., Oct. 15 (AP).—Two girls traveling to see their brother play in a high school football game were killed today, the parents seriously injured, and two other brothers less seriously hurt as their auto crashed into a truck loaded with steel pipe.

Dead were Shirley Waterson, 12, and Jean, 8, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Waterson, of Rimersburg.

Selfridge Flies to N. Y. After Visit in Chicago

Chicago, Oct. 15 (AP).—H. Gordon Selfridge, the Wisconsin native who made a fortune with American merchandising methods in England, left by plane for New York today after a brief visit with relatives and friends here. Traveling with him was his daughter, Countess Violette de Sibour.

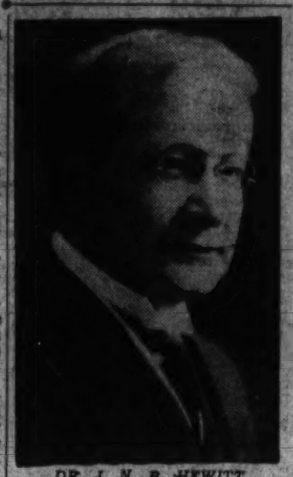
Capital Resident Leads Safety Council Section

Kansas City, Oct. 15 (AP).—Chairmen of the 23 major sections of the National Safety Council for 1937-38 were announced by W. H. Cameron, managing director of the council, at closing sessions of the twenty-sixth National Safety Congress today.

W. A. Snow, of Washington, D. C., was made chairman of the construction section.

Dr. J. N. B. Hewitt, Dying at 77, Prepares His Own Obituary

World-Famed Expert on Indian Lore Lived in D. C. 51 Years.



DR. J. N. B. HEWITT.

Dr. John Napoleon Brinton Hewitt, ethnologist of the Smithsonian Institution and world authority on Indian lore, penned his own obituary with instructions it be released just prior to his funeral.

Dr. Hewitt, 77, died late Thursday after a long illness. Yesterday, his widow, Mrs. Carrie Louise Hurlbut Hewitt, brought the brief biographical sketch to The Post. He had been a resident of Washington since 1888, coming here from his home in Lewiston, Niagara County, N. Y.

His life was spent studying Indian customs and languages and Smithsonian officials valued highly his counsel on Indian questions. He was the author of researches and studies which have appeared in publications of the Bureau of American Ethnology. More than 80 of his articles were published in the Handbook of American Indians.

A large portion of these papers were direct translations from six Iroquoian languages, Chippewa, Cree and Delaware, of the Algonquin stock, and Maya, Seri and the Waicuru, Polynesian Luteramian, Shahaptian and Wailatpuan dialects.

Dr. Hewitt was a member of the Museum of Natural History, New York City; the Anthropological Society of Washington, the American Anthropological Society and the executive committee of the United States Board of Geographic Names. He was twice president and once vice president and treasurer of the local Anthropological Society.

Also surviving Dr. Hewitt is his sister, Miss Hattie E. Hewitt. He lived here at 1005 East Capitol street.

Dr. Hewitt will be buried in Rock Creek Cemetery. Dr. U. C. B. Pierce, rector of All Souls Church, will officiate. The services will be Masonic, under the direction of Lafayette Lodge, No. 19, F. A. A. M.

William Ricketts Burial Set Today

Funeral services for William B. Ricketts, 78, well-known farmer, who died Wednesday at his home in Unity, Md., will be held today at 11 a. m. at the home. Burial will be in Mount Carmel Cemetery near Sunshine, Md.

Mr. Ricketts was a native of Frederick County, Md., and had lived in Montgomery County since he was a young man. He was a member of the Aubrey Council Jr. O. U. A. M. of Damascus.

He is survived by two sons, Robert S. Ricketts, Laurel, Md., and William H. Ricketts, Sunshine, Md.; five daughters, Mrs. French Hobbs, of Unity; Mrs. Francis Veldenar, of Colesville, Md.; Mrs. Annie Johnson, Olney, Md.; Mrs. Harry Howard, Woodfield, Md., and Mrs. Edgar Johnson, Dayton, Md.; a brother, Charles Ricketts of Hagerstown, and a sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Oatis, of Frederick.

Belgrade to Set Up Army Dictatorship

Vienna, Oct. 15 (U.P.).—The Yugoslav National party has announced that a proclamation of opposition leaders criticizing the radical union government of Premier Milan Stoyadinovich showed that the time had arrived to establish a military dictatorship in Yugoslavia, the official Austrian agency reported in a semi-official announcement from Belgrade tonight.

The National party, headed by Gen. Pera Shivkovich, and other opposition parties for some time have been attempting to persuade Regent Prince Paul, who rules for the boy King Peter II, to remove Stoyadinovich as head of the government.

U. S. Plans to Cut Potato Surplus

Farm Administration officials announced plans yesterday to remove 25,000,000 bushels of this year's large potato crop from normal trade channels.

They said Federal funds will be used to encourage feeding of low grade potatoes to livestock, manufacture of potatoes into flour and starch, and distribution of these products and potatoes to persons on relief.

The triple diversion program will supplement Federal potato marketing programs.

Newest U. S. Submarine Arrives at Navy Yard

The Navy's newest submarine, the U. S. S. Perch, en route from New London, Conn., to Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, arrived at the Navy Yard yesterday.

Under command of Lieut. Comdr. G. C. Crawford, U. S. Navy, the undersea craft will leave Washington Tuesday for the Caribbean. Her other officers are Lieut. W. C. Latrobe; Lieut. (jg) M. S. Holmes; Lieut. (jg) M. H. Cassedy; and Lieut. (jg) A. F. Schade.

Dr. Albert Shaw Retires As Editor of the Digest

New York, Oct. 15 (AP).—Retirement of Dr. Albert Shaw as editor of the Digest was announced tonight, terminating one of the longest continuous editorships in the history of American magazine publishing.

At the same time the sale of the Digest by the Review of Reviews Corporation and the resumption of its former title, the Literary Digest, were announced through a syndicate headed by George F. Havell, the new owners.

Freight Rates Kept Up.

The Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday suspended until January 13 the operation of proposed reductions in truck freight rates on commodities shipped between points in the District of Columbia, Maryland, Delaware, North Carolina, Virginia and Pennsylvania.

Son Finds Woman Dead After Fall

Mrs. Mary C. Edwards, 66, 1431 Longfellow street northwest, was found dead at her home yesterday by her son, Eugene Edwards, 1229 Jefferson street, police reported.

They said that Mrs. Edwards, who lived alone, apparently had been dead since Thursday evening. She was found on the stairway, apparently after falling and striking her head.

Mrs. Edwards was the widow of Maj. C. Eugene Edwards. She is survived by her son.

Funeral services will be held Monday at 8:30 a. m., at her residence, and at the Church of the Nativity, where mass will be offered at 9 a. m. Burial will be in St. Mary's Cemetery.

Mrs. Mayhew Rites Planned Monday

The funeral of Mrs. Elizabeth A. Mayhew, 72, who died yesterday, will be conducted at 2 p. m. Monday from her home, 1811 Bay street southeast. Services will be held at Anacostia Baptist Church, of which Mrs. Mayhew had been a lifelong member. Interment is to be in Congressional Cemetery.

A native of Washington, Mrs. Mayhew was the widow of Alexander Mayhew. She is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Rosann Marie Mayhew Cookman, of Washington; a brother, Frank I. Smith, of New York; a twin sister, Miss Lucy E. Smith, of Washington, and four other sisters, Mrs. Theodore W. Fuller, Mrs. Fannie M. Kearns and Mrs. Clark W. Teates, of Washington, and Mrs. Mary D. Barry, of Baltimore.

Mrs. R. D. Mulcare Dies in Roanoke

Mrs. Rosa Dodd Mulcare, 70, Washington clubwoman and widow of James Mulcare, died yesterday in Roanoke, Va.

A native of Charlottesville, Va., Mrs. Mulcare had been a resident of Washington for more than 40 years. She died at the home of friends where she was visiting.

Mrs. Mulcare was former regent of the Sarah Franklin Chapter, D.A.R.; an honorary vice president of the Children of the American Revolution; a member of the Southern Relief Society; founder of the Hilary Herbert Chapter, Daughters of the Confederacy and a member of the Political Study Club and Women's Democratic Club.

She is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Rose Roberts, of this city, and a granddaughter.

Funeral service will be held today at 11 a.m. at St. Margaret's Church. The Rev. Herbert Scott Smith will officiate. Interment will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Kenyon and Mrs. C. P. Ryland.

Miss Mildred Brinker, of Richmond, violinist, and Miss Ruth Yanovsky, pianist, will play during the afternoon.

C. A. R. Unit In D. C. Gets Recognition

Societies Here Are Given Status of State Organizations.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

Boys and girls, their mothers and grandmothers, met at the Washington Club yesterday afternoon for the first annual State conference of the D. C. Society, Children of the American Revolution. The societies in the District were formally organized as a State group with Mrs. James Henry Harper as senior director and William Pennington, junior president. Mrs. William H. Pouch, national president, was here from New York for the occasion as guest of honor.

Both on the platform and in the audience there were heads with golden ringlets and pigtails tied with ribbon bows as well as the gray heads of the other members of the D. A. R. There was attentive interest throughout the program on the part of the young C. A. R.'s, and it increased to real enthusiasm as time approached for the reception and the ice cream and cake it included.

Music for the afternoon was provided by the Potomac Society C. A. R. Band, whose young drummer, aged 4 years, between selections, was almost as much interested in Mrs. Harper's gavel as in his own drumsticks. A silver spoon was presented to Stanley Mack Titus, jr., aged 3 years, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. Stanley Titus, jr., and grandnephew of Miss Helen Harman, past vice president general of the D. A. R., as the youngest member in the District.

Mrs. Pouch Commends S. A. R.'s Interest

Mrs. Pouch commended the interest being taken in the C. A. R. by members of the Sons of the American Revolution, which was represented on the program by the District president, Clifton P. Clark. She also urged the older boys and girls to form a club group for social meetings and suggested the publication of a monthly news sheet by the older members for their whole society.

Others on the program were Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig, State regent of the D. A. R., and Mrs. C. A. Swann Sinclair, past national president of the C. A. R., who spoke briefly; Leigh Nettleton, jr., who led the prayer; Jane Fadeley, who led the pledge of allegiance to the flag; Robert De Shazo, who recited the American's Creed; Miriam Dingley Leetch, who presented a piano solo; Rosemary Endicott, a vocal solo; Jenifer Williams, a recitation and a group from the Potomac Society, who presented a dance in costume.

Miss Byrd Mock, author of "Washington; My Washington" gave the C. A. R. an "Ode to the Constitution," handsomely inscribed on a parchment scroll.

One Grandmother Celebrates Birthday

Among the grandmothers present at the meeting were Mrs. William G. Carter, of Chevy Chase, grandmother of the junior president, and Mrs. Robert Graves, of Madison, Va., grandmother of Jane and Laura Belle Wyatt, the former a color guard and the latter, junior recording secretary. The affair served as a double celebration for Mrs. Graves who was observing her 79th birthday.

Other officers of the junior group include: Elizabeth Earll, vice president; John Morrison Karr, jr., chaplain; Elizabeth Ray, corresponding secretary; Alice Waldron, treasurer; Betty Purdy, historian; Mildred Sherman, registrar; Robert De Shazo and Billy Howard, color bearers, and Helen Hamblin, color guard.

The senior officers, in addition to Mrs. Harper are Mrs. Angus Lamond, jr., chaplain; Mrs. George R. Harrison, recording secretary; Miss Ramona J. Newman, corresponding secretary; Mrs. T. Hunton Leith, treasurer; Mrs. Carl H. Giroux, historian, and Mrs. G. L. Palmer, registrar.

Class Party Hit By Mrs. Sisson

We must safeguard our form of government, no matter what party is in power, Mrs. Vinton Earl Sisson, national chairman of National Defense Through Patriotic Education for the Daughters of the American Revolution, declared yesterday in an address before a large audience at the Mayflower Hotel.

As national chairman, she spoke from the standpoint of practical national defense and peace, which she defined as embracing not only the Government's plan for preparedness against war, but also an extensive study of the American system of government, deportation problems, subversive activities and their objectives, and the prevention of crime.

"We need two political parties for check and balance," she declared, "but for the first time a political party is being formed based on occupations and class distinctions. We will have a menace in a class party; it is not to help the workingman but to give control to the Communist Party. It is a result of ideas imported from foreign countries, which ave no place in America."

Of the Supreme Court, she said, "It has been packed before, but that didn't make it right. It is more dangerous now for we are no longer an integral people; we are permeated with aliens. The Hitler regime could not have been brought about in Germany had not the way been paved by tampering with the judiciary before Hitler took hold."

She said on armed defense: "We are a cross section of American womanhood; we are the churchwomen, the citizens, the mothers of boys who, in case of war, will be called upon to make the supreme sacrifice. We are willing to sink the last ship and fire the last soldier only when other countries show a real interest in peace."

Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig, State regent, spoke briefly, and Mrs. Tonnis J. Holzberg, State chairman of National Defense Through Patriotic Education, presided at the meeting.

G. O. P. Women Attend First Tea

Mme. Cantacuzene, president of the League of Republican Women, was hostess yesterday afternoon in the clubhouse at the first in a series of teas she is giving for members of the league. She was assisted in receiving by Mrs. James E. Barnes, and Mrs. Edward E. Gann, Mrs. Seth Richardson, Mrs. James M. Green and Mrs. William Morton Grinnell alternated at the tea table.

Among the guests were Mrs. Virginia White Speel, national committeewoman from the District; Mrs. Hamilton Fish, Mrs. Lincoln Hodgkins, who is an honorary vice president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution; Mrs. Henry Albers, Mrs. John Stalker, Mrs. William Theophilus, Mrs. William O. Gilbert, Miss Daisy Prentice, Miss Ruth Harlan, Mrs. H. D. Fry, Mrs. Samuel J. Prescott, Mrs. George F. Snyder, Mrs. R. C. Collison, Miss Jessie Collison, Mrs. M. Webster Dawley, Miss Harriet R. Kirby, of Hudson, Ohio, who is spending the winter in the Capital, Mrs. Ida B. Higley, Mrs. James W. Adams, Miss Prall and Miss Marie Obenauer.

Members of the league are preparing to sponsor their first large social event of the season, a card party at the Wardman Park Hotel Monday afternoon under the chairmanship of Miss Edna Patton.

Patronesses, in addition to Mme. Cantacuzene, and Mrs. Speel, includes Mrs. Frank W. Mondell, Mrs. Charles M. Lea, Mrs. Gann, Mrs. William R. Castle, Mrs. James R. Mann, Mrs. Clarence Hancock, Mrs. Chandler Hale, Mrs. Ralph Church, Mrs. Gilbert H. Grosvenor, Mrs. Grinnell, Mrs. Gilbert, Mrs. Henry Alvah Strong, Miss Mary Sheridan, Miss Prentice, Mrs. Green, Mrs. John H. Gibbons, Mrs. Charles R. Keefer, Mrs. Samuel J. Prescott, Mrs. Oscar Jarecki, Mrs. Wade H. Ellis, Mrs. George Burnham, Mrs. James Wentz, Mrs. J. Edson Briggs, Mrs. Hugh M. Southgate, Mrs. William E. Lewis, Mrs. William McNeir, Mrs. Horace R. Shaves, Mrs. Snyder, Mrs. Barnes and Mrs. Edward A. Keys.

Also among the patronesses are Judge Mary O'Toole, Mrs. Zardee Kibler, Miss Cora Kibler, Mrs. L. C. Kauffman, Mrs. Samuel S. Boyd, Mrs. James G. McKay, Mrs. James McFarquhar, Mrs. Millard F. West, Mrs. A. L. Hough, Mrs. G. Percy McGlue, Miss Mary Davenport, Mrs. Albers, Mrs. J. H. Branson, Mrs. W. M. Hannay, Mrs. F. S. Hendley, Mrs. Theophilus, Mrs. A. B. Stewart, Mrs. C. G. Worthington, Mrs. William W. Dudley, Mrs. William F. Soetsch, Mrs. Mary D. Phillips, Mrs. B. F. Fitzhugh, Mrs. Galen Fait, Mrs. D. E. Yarnell, Mrs. David J. Rumbaugh, Mrs. Charles H. Woodhull, Mrs. Hodgkins, Mrs. Albert W. Stahl, Mrs. Francis D. Culkin, Mrs. Edward S. Dyer, Mrs. Harry E. Hull, Mrs. P. M. Jones, Mrs. Mary Logan Tucker, Mrs. James A. Councilor, Mrs. Louis Weller, Mrs. Frisbey G. Elker, and Miss Patton.

Tea Is Planned Sunday By Phi Mu Sorority

The Washington Alumnae Association of Phi Mu Sorority will hold a tea next Sunday, from 4 to 6 o'clock, at the home of Miss Josephine Ayre, 5117 Connecticut avenue. All Phi Mus in Washington have been invited to attend.

The officers of the association for the years 1937 and 1938 are: President, Mrs. F. Eugene Houghton; vice president, Mrs. Joseph Roney; secretary, Mrs. Harold G. Stepler; treasurer, Myrta D. Williams; delegate to City Panhellenic, Mrs. Joseph Roney; alternate, Eva Moore Pope.

"REMEMBER THE MAINE" is an appropriate slogan for the benefit ball being sponsored the night of November 20 at the Hamilton Hotel by the Regular Veterans' Association, of which J. E. Nieman is national adjutant. The proceeds will go to widows of those loyal Americans who went down with the Maine. Just before the Spanish-American War was declared. Similar balls are being held all over the country on the same date.

The widows of men who were lost on the battleship receive a pension of only $12 a month, while those of men in the Spanish-American War receive from $35 up. The Nation-wide plan of raising funds to aid these dependents is not only to help them now but to call public attention to the discrimination in pensions, according to a recent statement by Mr. Nieman.

Schleys Obtain New Home Here

Army Chief of Engineers and Wife to Move From Fort Belvoir.

Maj. Gen. Julian L. Schley, recently appointed Army Chief of Engineers, who will come from his post at Fort Belvoir, Va., to take over his new command the first of next week, will have a new house waiting for him and Mrs. Schley at 1714 Hoban road in the Colony Hill section. Georgian in architecture and spaciously large, it gives every indication that the Schleys intend to do quite a little entertaining.

Gen. Schley, who is related to the famous Admiral Schley of Spanish-American war days, is hardly a stranger to Washington, for from 1912 to 1916 he served as assistant to the Engineer Commissioner of the District and also as Executive Officers of the Public Utilities Commission. For the past year he has been Commandant of the Engineering School at Fort Belvoir and before that was Governor of the Panama Canal Zone.

A graduate of the class of 1903, Gen. Schley, who came originally from Savannah, Ga., has been over the world from the Philippines to San Mihiel, where, during the World War, he was in command of the Fifth Engineering Corps. His work there and in the Meuse-Argonne offensive brought him a Distinguished Service Medal.

Ann Hendrickson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy F. Hendrickson, of Burnt Mills Hills, celebrated her fifth birthday yesterday at an afternoon party.

Among her guests were Robert Briggs, J. Cope, Martha Cope, Ruth Mary Ragsdale, Roland Davies, Elinor Ostermann, Theodore Bledsoe and Elaine Gerlach.

Harvest Ball Set Tonight in Fairfax

Tonight's the night of the harvest ball way down in Virginia at Fairfax. It takes place at Willard Hall, where the "big apple," of course, will be the topflight feature of the evening. A prize will be awarded to the couple voted the best in this number.

The event is being sponsored by Miss Neitah King, who will be assisted in the receiving line by Mrs. Frederick D. Richardson, Mrs. Edward Howrey, Mrs. Lenig Sweet, Mrs. Robert Graham and Mrs. Arthur Radford.

Belgian Team Member and Wife Arrive

Harris & Ewing.

Well, at last the Inter-American Horse Show is now a reality and not just a type-setters dream! Proof positive of that fact is this picture snapped at Union Station yesterday of Lieut. Ferdinand Poswick, member of the Belgian team, and Mme. Poswick as they hurried to headquarters at the Shoreham Hotel. Mme. Poswick is the only wife to accompany her husband on the trip. The Inter-American will be held at the Meadowbrook Show Grounds October 21 to 24.

Parties to See 'Amphitryon'

Dinner parties, theater parties, and later supper parties will make a gala social event of the opening of "Amphitryon 38" at the National on Monday evening. This play stars Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne and is the second of the subscription season of the Theater Guild and the American Theater Society.

It will be a brilliant opening because subscription list this year is the largest in the history of the Theater Guild here and many hostesses have been calling up and ordering extra seats for their dinner guests.

Last minute subscribers who will be present at various performances many of them bringing guests to "Amphitryon" will be Mrs. Francis Whitten, Miss Janet Fish, Mrs. Thomas Keane, Mrs. Frank Morrill, Mrs. Frank C. Letts, Mrs. Herman W. Schull, Col. Warren Dean, Capt. John D. Reybold, Dr. Francis R. Hagner, Floyd P. Waggaman, and Ricardo Siri, second secretary of the Argentine Embassy.

Betrothal Told Of Miss Wattles

Lieut. Col. William P. Wattles and Mrs. Wattles announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Cynthia Brewster Wattles, to Lieut. Neal R. Curtin, U. S. N., son of Mrs. T. A. Solberg and the late Lieut. Comdr. Roland I. Curtin.

No date has been set for the wedding.

About the Town

With Dudley Harmon

THERE ARE TOO MANY things going on today, and everywhere you hear much gnashing of teeth by people who want to be several places at once. There's the Mary Cowles-Willard Reed wedding at eleven o'clock this morning with a reception at the 1925 F street club afterwards, the marriage of Margaret Matheson to Edward Fairfax Randolph, which will be followed by a large party at Wellington, the home of the bride's parents, the Malcolm Mathesons; the first meet of the Fairfax Hunt on their newly acquired acres on Hunters Mill Road in Fairfax County, Va., and the Harvard-Navy game.

Many members of society are reluctantly passing up other invitations to go to the game, because it is so rarely that Harvard deigns to come to this part of the country to play Navy. Usually of course, this event of the gridiron takes place in the Stadium at Cambridge, Mass.

The Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Swanson, who go to football games in the autumn as regularly as they take week-end cruises on the Sequoia during the hot months, will be "among those present" in Baltimore this afternoon. They will be accompanied by the Secretary of War and pretty Mrs. Harry Woodring, and by Mr. Swanson's aide, Capt. "Jack" Beardall, and Mrs. Beardall.

Other football fans who will be yelling their heads off this afternoon include Rear Admiral and Mrs. Emory Land, who are getting an early start this morning; Laura Tuckerman, Elsie Ekengren and Betty Hardie, who is going with Bill Brewster, former New Dealer here who is now working in New York.

THE LEAGUE OF WOMEN SHOPPERS, which pickets factories and other places where workers are exploited, is holding its opening meeting of the year on Tuesday at 4:30 at the American Association of University Women Headquarters on I street. Mrs. Morgenthau, wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, is a sponsor of this group, and may say a few words at the gathering. Other prominent women interested in the organization include Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, Miss Josephine Roche, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, and Mrs. Huston Thompson.

The league has obtained no less a person than Leane Zugsmith to make the main address on Tuesday. Miss Zugsmith should know whereof she speaks, as her latest novel, "A Time to Remember," dealt entirely with a strike organized by underpaid workers in a New York department store. She is also a frequent contributor to periodicals. During her stay in Washington she will be the guest of Mrs. Robert Horton at her home in Georgetown.

President of the league is Mrs. Edwin Colman, the former Elizabeth Wheeler, daughter of Senator and Mrs. Burton K. Wheeler. Mr. and Mrs. Colman and their young daughter occupy a charming house near Alexandria.

THE COUNSELOR of the Netherlands Legation and Countess van Rechteren Limpurg have taken a house on Q street in Georgetown. Last year they lived at the Roosevelt . . . Mr. and Mrs. Harold Walker have arrived here from Webley, their place on the Eastern Shore, and are now settled in the home of Mrs. Albert Simms at 1224 Thirtieth street, which they leased for the winter. A beautiful house, it has a large garden stretching almost an entire block behind . . . Earlier in the week Mr. and Mrs. Reeve Hoover entertained at a party for Alice Tully, sister of the hostess. Miss Tully is a talented singer and will give a concert October 24 at the Town Hall in New York.

Sail From New York.

The Counselor of the Canadian Legation, Hume Wrong, with Mrs. Wrong and their son and daughter, Ennis Wrong and June Wrong, sail from New York today on the Cunard White Star liner Britannic for Switzerland, where they will be located at the Canadian Legation in that country.

Staunton Girl Wed.

The announcement of the marriage of Miss Mary Weade, daughter of Mr. Frank Weade, of Staunton, Va., to Boyd Griffith Switzer, son of the Rev. and Mrs. Boyd V. Switzer, also of Staunton, has been made. Both are well known in West Virginia and in Washington.

W. O. Rabbitt Married Here To Miss Saylor

Mother Gives Bride in Quiet Ceremony to Rockville Man.

At a quiet wedding yesterday afternoon, Miss Katherine Josephine Saylor, daughter of Mrs. Ethel M. Saylor, of this city, became the bride of William Owen Rabbitt, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Rabbitt, of Rockville, Md. The Rev. J. Maurice King, of St. Ann's Catholic Church, performed the ceremony before an improvised altar banked with white chrysanthemums and autumn leaves. Only members of the immediate families were present.

The bride, given in marriage by her mother, wore a white crepe jacket dress made on fitted lines, with a small flared train. She carried a bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. Her short tulle veil was fastened by a band of orange blossoms, and her only ornament was a set of seed pearl earrings and brooch, an heirloom which had been in the family for over 100 years, and a gift from the bride's cousin.

Her maid of honor and only attendant was Miss Virginia Ellis, who wore a velvet dress in a copper tone, shirred at the neck and waist and falling in a short train. She carried a bouquet of yellow and bronze chrysanthemums, tied with yellow ribbon.

The best man was the bridegroom's brother, Warren E. Rabbit.

The mother of the bride, wearing a black velvet dress with a corsage of white orchids, received the guests, assisted by Mrs. H. S. Coppage, sister of the bridegroom, who wore a dark blue afternoon dress with a corsage of Joanna Hill roses.

After the reception, the couple left for a motor trip to Canada. Upon their return they will be at home at 3446 Connecticut avenue.

The bride is a graduate of the College of the Sacred Heart, New York City, while the bridegroom is a graduate of the Rockville Academy, and is now with a local bank.

Mrs. Grosvenor Will Aid Chest

Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor will play an important role in the Tenth Anniversary campaign of the Community Chest this year. At the solicitation of Clarence Phelps Dodge, president of the Chest, Mrs. Grosvenor has agreed to head the highly important board members committee, designed to bring about a better understanding of the Chest among the more than 1,000 business, fraternal and civic organizations in the city.

Approximately 250 members of boards of organizations affiliated with the Chest have signed up for membership on this committee. A luncheon will be held at the Mayflower Hotel October 25, at which final details will be discussed and work allocated.

Mrs. Grosvenor and her committee have as their objective an information and good will program, to acquaint the presidents of all leading organizations in the city with the Chest and the work of its member agencies. These board members will not solicit funds.

The new chairman is thoroughly acquainted with the duties of board members, being president of the women's board of George Washington Hospital and on the boards of the Juvenile Protective Association, the Washington Heart Association and Garfield Hospital.

"I feel that this is a highly important work that the board members of the agencies will be doing," Mrs. Grosvenor said. "They will be doing a real service in carrying this message of information from the social agencies and the Chest in a sympathetic manner to these various organizations. I understand that 250 board members have signed for this service. I hope that all of them will be present at the luncheon meeting."

Mme. Babes Gives First Reception Since Her Arrival

Mme. Babes, wife of the Charge d'Affaires of the Rumanian Legation, entertained yesterday at her first reception since her arrival in Washington last spring. About 100 guests attended the party, which was held in her apartment at the Westchester.

The dining room table was attractively decorated with bowls of pink roses and vases of gladioli were in the living room. Mme. Babes was assisted during the afternoon by wives of members of the legation staff.

Sub-Debutante To See Navy Game

Miss Rosemary Newman, who will make her formal bow to society Wednesday, November 24, from 5 to 7 p. m., at a tea given by her parents, will motor to Baltimore today for the Harvard-Navy game.

Accompanying her will be her father, Col. Richard D. Newman, U. S. A.

Miss Newman spent Wednesday and Thursday of this week at Annapolis, where she went to the midshipmen reception Wednesday evening. While in Annapolis she was the guest of Capt. and Mrs. Forde Todd.

Wed in Rockville.

Mr. and Mrs. William J. Grimm, of Terra Alta, W. Va., yesterday announced the marriage of their daughter, Mrs. Margaret Grimm Hinebaugh, to William R. Nichols, of Washington.

The bride, a graduate of the Fairmont State Teachers' College, is employed in Washington, as is Mr. Nichols. The wedding took place Friday, October 1, at Rockville, Md., with the Rev. Floyd Black, officiating.

Dr. McClellan to Be Host Today As Fairfax Hunt Opens Season

Reed Thomas, Joint M. F. H. of Club, Will Help Entertain at Breakfast After Day's Riding of Virginia Group.

By Elizabeth Ford.

The Fairfax Hunt begins today at the club's shiny new 90-acre farm, but just where an account of it ought to begin is another matter, for there is so much going on in connection with the occasion that it would take a wise fox to know where to start.

Baying commences at 9 this morning and with everyone tooting his horn the first day's sport ends in a glow of pink coats at Burgundy Farm, the home of Dr. William McClellan, on the Franconia road, near Alexandria. There the hunt breakfast goes down at 3 o'clock this afternoon. Hosting with Dr. McClellan is Reed Thomas, joint master of the Fairfax Hounds.

With Lisle Smith, president of the Fairfax Hunt Club; Robert Whitelaw Wilson, secretary, and David Wickens, U. S. Randall, Jouett Shouse, George Benoit and Col. and Mrs. Hunt in charge of things, Mr. Reynard, of Virginia, will certainly have the run of his life.

The Dianas will include Miss Mary Cootes, Miss Tiny Ekengren, Miss Helen Davis, Miss Mary Burke and Mrs. John Mead.

And others . . . and others . . . for this bids fair to be the biggest season at the kennels within the memory of dog or man.

Officials of neighboring hunts who are expected to attend are Dr. Stanley Johnson, M. F. H., the Antietam Hunt, Hagertsown; Sterling Larrabee, M. F. H., Old Dominion Hounds, Crest Hill, Va.; Ehrman B. Mitchell, M. F. H., Beaufort Hunt, Harrisburg, Pa; Thomas T. Mott, M. F. H., Redland Hunt, Rockville, Md.; Dr. Archibald C. Randolph, M. F. H., Piedmont Fox Hounds, Upperville, Va.; H. H. Semmes, M. F. H., Riding and Hunt Club, Rockville, and Dr. Fred R. Sanderson, also of the latter club.

Next Saturday, the Fairfax Hunt will be whipping, cubbing and brushing, starting at David Wicken's place, Wicken's Joy. October 30 the mount will be at Lisle Smith's Rolling Hills Farm. Then, on November 6, the tallyho will resound at Bull Run Bridge on the Warrenton pike; on November 13, at Log Cabin Inn on the Leesburg pike at Seneca road; on November 20, at Rixey Smith's Gracelands; on November 27, at the Thomas estate, Winfal, on Hunters Mill road.

The Trinity Church horse show and pageant at Upperville today divides honors with the Fairfax Hunt. Prancing starts at 9 this morning and the pageant begins on the stroke of 2:30. From the Llangollen stables come a number of entries under the aegis-eye of Mrs. John Hay Whitney. Others who have entered are Mrs. G. P. Greenhalgh, E. L. Redman, Dr. Randolph, W. H. Lipscomb and Miss Charlotte H. Noland, headmistress of Foxcroft School.

Those who are now on the list as donors of silver prizes are Miss Charlotte H. Noland, Mrs. H. R. Dulany and Mrs. Joshua Fletcher, jr. The judges are Capt. Richard Kirkpatrick, of Warrenton, and Lodge Bowles, of Boyce.

And tomorrow—if you can still stand up at the sight of a saddle—the third annual Indian Springs Hunt Show will be in full fettle, with Marrian D. Curran as master of what goes on. The program includes 15 classes—four pony, one park riding, one junior horsemanship, one open jumping, seven hunter and one championship.

Off on Sea Voyage.

Harold Goldstein, of Washington, is sailing today from New York aboard the S. S. Munargo of the Munson Line, for a West Indies cruise. He plans to stop at Nassau, Miami and Havana, and will be gone about two weeks.

Miss Cecil Goes To Debut Dance

Accompanies Mr. and Mrs. Tuckerman and Daughter to Baltimore.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, their daughter, Miss Alice Noel Tuckerman, and Miss Caroline Cecil, debutante daughter of Col. and Mrs. Joseph Cecil, went to Baltimore last night for the dance given by Mrs. Tunstall Smith for her granddaughter, Miss Louise Tunstall Barroll, of Philadelphia. Also hosts at the party, which was at the Belvedere, were Mr. and Mrs. Louis Alston, who were presenting their daughter, Miss Mary Alston, to Baltimore society.

Miss Tuckerman and Miss Cecil were among the young people who dined at the Mount Vernon Club before going on to the dance.

Mrs. Smith is a sister of Mrs. Clarence Roberts, of Landover, Md., and of Lord Fairfax, of England.

F STREET AT FOURTEENTH

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Should She 'Wait' for Man Three Thousand Miles Away? He Said He Loved Her, but Never Writes.

DEAR MAY HAWORTH: Three years ago I met a man whom I dearly love. I am sure he loves me, too, for he admitted as much a few months ago. In order to arrive at a better understanding of our relationship, however, I must have your honest opinion. After I had been going with him for a few months, we had a misunderstanding. Not meaning a word of what I said, I blurted out the statement that I never had loved him and never would. We parted on that note and I felt very badly. We met off and on after that, but acted more like acquaintances than sweethearts.

• • • •

Finally, however, he couldn't stand this state of affairs any longer so he confessed his love for me. But shortly after declaring himself, his work took him 3,000 miles from here and he has not written me since. He asked me to wait for him, and I do have the utmost confidence in him, as he told me I was the only woman he ever loved. Now, the question is—should I wait for him? M. T.

• • • •

DEAR M. T.: In matters of the heart, actions carry more conviction than words. I doubt that a man who truly loved a woman with all his heart could let days, weeks and perhaps months slip by without getting in touch with her by mail, telephone or telegram. The average man, as a rule, is cheerfully willing to admit himself "one of the world's poorest letter writers" under ordinary circumstances, but just let him be struck by Cupid's dart and he becomes as prolific with the pen as any muse-drunk poet.

• • • •

Even the most unimaginative of men finds himself, under the spell of real or fancied love, thinking long, long thoughts about the lady in the case, and translating his groping thoughts into words which are communicated to her by whatever medium will bring the speediest reassuring response. If he doesn't "let go," "take his hair down," unbosom himself, give the lady black-and-white evidence of his devotion, as it were—when they are separated by thousands of miles of space—the supposition is in order either that he isn't sufficiently sure of his feeling to risk a downright commitment, or that he has switched his devotion to someone else nearer at hand. And when no word of any kind is forthcoming, not even a post card of the "having fine time, wish you were here variety," the latter supposition probably comes nearest to hitting the nail on the head.

• • • •

There's always the odd chance, however, that this or that man is a marked exception to the general rule. There might possibly be a man of such single-minded intensity of purpose, of such complete integrity of word and action, as to take it for granted that no more need be said once his devotion was declared. Such a man might find it very natural to go on non-committally loving one woman, ignoring all others, for months on end, making of his work itself a kind of poem in her honor. Your friend may be that type of man. I don't know. You'll have to figure that out for yourself on the basis of your three years' association with him.

* * *

But if he's a man who readily makes friendships with women, who admires them, seeks them out, and couldn't be long content without their society, I believe it would be a mistake to go on indefinitely "waiting" for him without a word of encouragement. If you know his address, why don't you write him a friendly note saying you had expected to hear from him before now and asking if he's been ill, overworked or worried? If you get no answer, or a brief, noncommittal sort of rejoinder, I believe you can assume that his confession of love was a mistaken, impetuous pronouncement that he prefers to forget. M. H.

She Likes Shy Boy.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I'm I'm a high school girl nearly 17 years old. I'm considered nice looking and neither prudish nor too giddy. I don't drink, smoke or pet, and I don't approve of girls swearing. Recently, in one of my classes, I met one of the nicest boys a girl could meet. He is very well mannered and artistically inclined. In the short time since I've known him I've grown to like him quite well. I had seen him around before, but my head had been turned by another boy I thought I loved. I don't care for him any longer, though; this boy appeals to me ever so much more.

• • • •

I asked this new boy to a Friday night party I was having, but he said—and he seemed disappointed—that he would be unable to come that evening. Now, the question is, how can I get better acquainted with him without giving the appearance of running after him? A girls' club I belong to is having a Halloween party and I should like to take him. How could I word the invitation? He is very, very shy. Everytime he is called on in class he blushes terribly. I am quite shy myself, but not quite that bad. I also understand he is much opposed to petting, and that suits me fine because I feel the same way myself.

* * *

Please help me. He is just the kind of boy I would love to go with. But I'm afraid it's going to be hard to make friends with him because of his shyness. He doesn't go with any girls at school, but always has a pleasant word for me. Do you think there's a chance? Sincerely,

HOPEFUL.

Reveal Your Interest.

DEAR HOPEFUL: If he's a painfully shy youth, and you're a girl who has been known to have other beaux, I think you can easily afford to take the initiative in promoting better acquaintanceship. It's the girl who doesn't have and never has had beaux who can ill afford to show openly her preference for any one boy. Nothing flatters a bashful boy more, however, than to have a girl who could have other beaux make it plain that she would like to have him for a friend. Your path of pursuit—if we may call it such—is made considerably smoother by virtue of the fact that you do give parties, and that you do belong to clubs and groups which go in for social entertaining.

• • • •

By all means ask the boy to the Halloween party. It would be nice if you could get on really talkative terms with him in class before voicing the invitation; but if you don't manage it without making yourself conspicuous and him too self-conscious, just maneuver him aside some day soon and say: "You turned me down once. Now don't do it again or I'll feel terribly. The So-and-So Club is having a Halloween party on such-and-such a night and I want to take you." If you know the names of other boys who are coming whom you believe he likes, or think he might like, you could add: "George and Bill will be there and so will Tom. I just know you'd have a good time." If he declines the invitation, you might ask quite frankly: "What's the matter? Don't you like me?" He'll probably protest such a supposition and offer some other vague excuse, and if it can't be beaten down, take your defeat gracefully and say: "Well, better luck next time. I'm not going to give up 'til I get you to a party." Then wait a few weeks or months and ask him again. M. H.

Monday's Problem

Wanting companionship and security in the years to come, 39-year-old divorcee finds it difficult to choose between two contenders for her hand in marriage. One man, long-time friend, is seven years her junior, but family responsibilities stand in the way of his marrying for years to come. The other can marry when she "says the word." Which to take? she asks. Her quandary will be considered here Monday.

Striped Velvet for Daytime

DASHING and very caballero is the daytime costume above. The gayly striped velvet blouse tops a simple straight line skirt, and is offset by a flattering Spanish sailor. The gloves by Aris are also velvet. Following the trend for antique-looking jewelry, the plaque of the silver-plated bracelet simulates an old coin. An ideal ensemble for tea, cocktails, or the matinee; equally smart and appropriate for "don't dress for dinner" occasions. A grand acquisition to the college girl's wardrobe, to wear to sorority teas and the like.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Tongue No Health Sign.

The tongue used to be considered a mirror of the system. Those of my generation will remember that as children the first thing you did when the doctor arrived was to stick out your tongue. This was gravely inspected, even before the pulse was counted or the temperature taken. It is difficult to say what deductions were drawn; whether it was coated or whether it was not coated, you got a dose of salts.

The practice spread in the household to the grownups. Any time you might hear—"Stick out your tongue. It's coated; you need some castor oil."

Not so much attention is paid to the tongue nowadays. The coated tongue does not mean anything in modern diagnostic procedure.

But there are a number of uncomfortable sensations that the tongue experiences, and about some of them we are getting a good deal of light lately.

Sore places on the tongue come, of course, most often from rough places on the teeth or poor fittings of dentures. These may vary from sore rough spots which come and go as the tongue incessantly explores the interior of its habitation. (Who was it that said, "As irresistible as a loose tooth?") One day, for some reason, it will find a sharp edge and plunge itself against it over and over again. Then, equally mysteriously, perhaps because it knows it has had enough, it leaves that region alone entirely and lays down to rest its wounds.

The canker sores that come in crops, and that everyone wants to know about, are possibly due to this mechanism, although no one really knows what causes them—possibly a digestive disturbance, possibly a nerve disturbance.

Snaggy teeth, an eroded filling, or crown, or a rough denture, are the cause of most cases of cancer of the tongue.

A smooth, red sore tongue in a middle-aged person makes the doctor think of anemia, so that he orders a blood count.

Painful tongue, or neuralgia of the tongue, occurs independently of any of these things, and in former days was a mystery. Buthin, in his great work on "Diseases of the Tongue," said "lingual neuralgia" was idiopathic in origin—which means that he did not know what in the world caused it.

But many of these cases of painful tongue have been found to be due to loss of the back teeth, or to to poorly fitting plates, so that the jaw overrides and the jaw joint presses on the nerves that supply the tongue. The same condition may cause neuralgia of the face, and disturbances of hearing, amounting to deafness, on account of pressure and partial closure of the Eustachian tube. This discovery is the work of a St. Louis physician, and has proved one of the most helpful contributions of our time to these heretofore puzzling conditions.

Sequin Trimming.

Paris (U.P.).—With sequins high style for the coming season, shop windows sparkle with accessories in the bright discs. Tiny Juliet caps are shown with dark-hued sequin wraps and scarfs for wear with evening gowns, and collar and cuff sets for tailored winter frocks are displayed in black, brown, wine and pale pink sequins.

Sartorial Gusto For Men Predicted By Style Experts

New York (U.P.).—Men's styles are "speeding up" and the day may come when pants legs will rise and fall every year the way skirts do.

The time when American men will wear innovations a few weeks after they appear abroad is probably a long way off, but symptoms of the trend in that direction are breaking out all around.

In a few days a "men's fashion seminar," a combination exhibition and style school, will be held here, with the "pupils" paying $50 each.

That's a conscious adaptation of the same sort of meetings that have been an institution in the women's field for several years.

It illustrates the leading symptom of the new trend—there is more attention being paid to men's clothes, more advertising of them, and more being written about them in newspapers and magazines than ever before.

Men are getting more interested in their clothes, too.

"Up to five years ago," says Hal Salzman, one of New York's leading style experts, "most of the shoppers in this country were women. Now men are returning to the market place for their own apparel."

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Oct. 15.

WITH THE Broadway theater having lost a goodish bit of its thrill and glamour to Hollywood and other whistle-stops, opening nights have lost much of their color, punch and breathless excitement.

ALICE HUGHES.

No longer than a decade ago, just prior to the headlong rush of the talkie, they still were great events, both in the audience and even on the stage itself. Today Broadway first nights are far fewer in number and much less powerful in emotional content. A show opens—all right, it opens. If it has elements of class, such habitual attendants as Libby Holman and Hope Hampton turn out. Then it probably closes again in a week, or three, having left hardly a faint ripple on the nocturnal history of New York.

Yet a few nights each season see plays opening surrounded by much of the historic charm, the rather stuffy dignity, of what our olders tell us were Those Good Old Days. Among these are the first nights of the Theater Guild, with its solid phalanx of original subscribers, usually dear little old ladies in crinkly black and wearing their best garnet gewgaws. Even the dramatic critics dress up to the extent of a dinner jacket for a Guild show, and it takes something to get them out of their business clothes!

• • • •

The first of faintly aromatic events, Ben Hecht's "To Quito and Back," has just transpired, with Miss Sylvia Sidney and Mr. Leslie Banks in the leads. Not too much of a show. But it was warming to the heart to see the old guard of New York first-nighters—what's left of it, bless its heart!

• • • •

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Guidepost to a slice of life here today. This is a headline over a story in a local paper: "Social Whirl Cheers Away Wall Street Tears." Reduced to English, this means that while the stock market goes to pot in a barouche, the cafe set is going like crazy to forget its daytime blues—spending, drinking, faking the rumba, falling down and getting up. It's all nice, decadent and pre-1929 here at present—a lot of Neroes fiddling away while their Rome heats up to burn! New York—fall of 1937 . . .

• • • •

I hear that Lily Pons, the trill darling of the opera, is going to do a spot of truckin' in her new film, now before the cameras. Films are funny—they hire great opera stars and are scared silly of anything that will hint of opera in the picture. Just as they signed Gypsy Rose Lee, greatest of strip-tease performers from burlesque—changed her name back to "Hovick" and kept all her clothes on. But that, of course, was an attack of censor-jitters.

• • • •

Jean Muir, the movie actress who has read a book and is now in our town hoping to do a play, has moved into the swanky Sutton Place sector, over on the East River, where the awful murders seem to happen lately. Watch out, Jeanie!

I noted our handsome Ambassador to England, Robert W. Bingham, in the lobby of the Waldorf the other day. He had just arrived from his Louisville home . . .

Winter Brings Exciting Hats, Irked Husbands

Exciting hats—hats with imagination and chic ideas of their own—hats that husbands won't like but will have to get used to—there stands the winter fashion edict of John Frederics, famous millinery designer.

"There are two important problems connected with hats," he says. "Creating the hat and wearing the hat."

Mr. Frederics believes that before a woman selects a hat she should study her type and make-up. Type is fundamental, he says; make-up is the accent that dramatizes it; and the hat, as the old cliche goes, is the frame for the picture. All three, he feels, to harmonize perfectly, should be keyed to the eyes, key feature of face and personality.

Height Stresses Youth.

"This year everything is created to expose the forehead," he says, "with height added at the back to give youth. An exposed throat and forehead always emphasizes youth. Accent on the eyes emphasizes personality. If a woman feel self-conscious in this type of hat—that problem is easily solved with a veil."

Dark shades with vivid colored accents—especially furnace red—will be almost the rule in hats this season—worked up in soft draped materials. With color and frou-frou, make-up must be perfectly harmonious or everything will go wrong with that new winter hat. The brown-eyed woman should use make-up especially created to flatter her types of coloring—warm red rouges and lipsticks, creamy powders, green mascara and eye-shadow.

Round Lines Preferred.

Equally distinctive are the make-up demands of blue, gray and hazel eyes. Women who seek this perfection find it made easy in the form a new make-up set with powder, rouge, lipstick and mascara all keyed to one of the four major eye types.

Once flatteringly made up, a woman can choose for herself. Perhaps she will want to start the season with a brimmed hat; she may prefer a tiny toque. Whatever she does, let her avoid exaggerated points and square lines, advises John Frederics. The natural lines of the face and features are round, and a successful hat must follow round lines.

Mr. Frederics gives one final word of cheer: "Nothing is hard to wear, providing you wear it discreetly and with good taste."

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

Famous Beauties Escape Weight Problem by Constant Vigilance.

By Ida Jean Kain.

IT'S MY observation that the famous beauties don't have weight problems. They set a strict limit on weight fluctuation and never permit the scales to vary more than the 3 to 5 pounds comprising this narrow margin.

You might think a 5-pound gain is not worth noticing, but women who value their figures take it as a warning. They know that a persistent gain, however slight, is a sign of unwise eating habits or too little exercise, and they act accordingly.

At this point, weight control is no trouble at all. Generally all that is necessary is to give up the between-meal tidbits and the rich desserts. A stronger measure is to go without the evening meal for a few days. You can enjoy a hearty breakfast and lunch and still lose 3 pounds in a week, simply by restricting yourself to these two meals.

With such firm treatment, a weight increase never grows up to be a problem. Anyone can lose 3 pounds, but 30 pounds is a large order. You can't do better than to set a limit on your weight gaining. When the scales begin acting frisky, keep an eye on them. The instant your margin has been exceeded, do something about your weight.

Women are inclined to be too broadminded about weight change. According to the law of averages, a 10-pound gain in 20 years is quite permissible. But for once the health and beauty authorities are in accord. If you are under 30, the doctors recommend that you be slightly overweight. If you are past 30, it is considered best to be slightly underweight.

Five pounds can change the fit of your tailored clothes.

For the woman with a beautiful figure, regular weighing is a habit, established by a definite program. Perhaps you are a housewife or a business woman who has had to solve so many, more pressing, problems that you have been able to devote scant attention to your exercise and diet. Don't feel that the damage is irreparable. It isn't! Your program won't be as easy as that of the person who watches her weight, but it is possible in a few months to make up for years of neglect. With your doctor's permission for a calorie cut you can lose 30 pounds in a year—perhaps a little more. By concentrating on the exercises you need, you can restore the slim, svelte lines of your figure.

Once you have worked this miracle with your figure, don't ever neglect it again. Any woman can have a beautiful figure, but the best assurance of keeping it beautiful is to allow less latitude for weight gain, and more for exercise.

Five-Pound Gain Is Signal to Start Control Measures.

Soup Reigns Supreme in Post Contest

Southern Vegetable Type Wins First Prize for Mrs. Adair.

Personality in Recipes of Washington's Housewives.

By Jean Green.

THE TRADITION that American housewives are not good soup makers has been challenged by The Post's favorite recipe contest this week. The theme of the contest was soup. The entries show that, in Washington at least, soup making has taken a subtle turn for the better.

JEAN GREEN.

Soups are not only more filling than in the past, but they have a definite personality.

Delicate flavors and unusual combinations are now a requirement. The soups which precede the dinner party have attractive garnishes. For luncheon there are wholesome soups that depend on herbs for their fragrant aroma. Thick cream of chestnut soups with an elusive touch of clove, clam and oyster chowders, bean soups with a garnish of lemon and egg, and cream of pea soups seasoned with chervil were only a few examples. More "homey" combinations were hamburger vegetable soups and quick turnip soups.

The recipe chosen for first prize, "Real Southern Vegetable Soup," was sent in by Mrs. L. D. Adair, 132 Alban Towers, 3700 Massachusetts avenue northwest. It is a filling soup that is a satisfying meal. The pods of red pepper give the soup a "hot" taste that resembles that of the old-fashioned pepper pot. This soup is inexpensive to prepare, and very practical.

The corn is added just before the soup is cooked to prevent sticking. Mrs. Adair suggests that if you have not cultivated the taste for the "hot" soups, keep the pods of red pepper whole during the cooking and remove before serving.

All of these recipes are tested.

Real Southern Vegetable Soup.

1 carefully selected soup bone
1 No. 2 can of tomatoes
2 cups cooked egg noodles
2 cups of diced Irish potatoes
1 or 2 pods of red pepper (according to taste)
Salt to taste
1 can of sweet corn

Select a three-pound choice leg soup bone with plenty of edible meat, and a piece of suet. Cook the soup bone and suet until the meat is thoroughly done. Strain broth to remove suet. Let the meat cool. Then cut off and dice in small bites. Add this to the broth.

Add 1 can of tomatoes which have been stewed for 15 minutes, the egg noodles which have been boiled in salty water 10 minutes and drained, the diced Irish potatoes and the whole pods of red pepper. Cook until the potatoes are almost done. Add the sweet corn and stir constantly to avoid sticking.

The second award was given Miss Margaret Smith, Dupont Circle Apartment. The delicate flavor of the chicken soup is emphasied by petite dumplings seasoned with sherry and crushed almonds.

Cream of Chicken Soup with Almond Dumplings.

Cut up an old chicken and break the bones. Put into a soup kettle with a medium sized onion, minced, and ½ cup of chopped celery. Cover with cold water and simmer until all are tender. Strain. Return broth to kettle, add 1 cup of cooked rice. Bring to a boil. Drop in the almond dumplings and cook for 5 minutes, covered. Remove the dumplings to a tureen, thicken the soup with 3 egg yolks beaten with 1 cup of milk, and serve hot.

Almond Dumplings.

Grind and pound 1½ dozen almonds to a powder or purchase ½ pint of sweet almond paste. Add 2 well-beaten eggs, pinch of salt, ¾ cups of flour sifted with 1 teaspoon of baking powder and 1 tablespoon of sherry. Mix well and mold into small balls.

A steaming tureen of black bean soup is certainly a perfect dish on crisp cold autumn days. It should be served with thin slices of lemon and hard cooked egg.

Miss Ruth Jenkins, 1516 Emerson street northwest, wins the third award with her recipe for it. Several recipes were entered. Some add to the soup a wineglass of cooking sherry. Others suggest cooking a small ham bone with the black beans. Both may be used in preparing this recipe. We like the flavor of it just as is.

Black Bean Soup.

1 pint of black beans
2 quarts of cold water
1 small onion
2 stalks of celery or ¼ teaspoon of celery salt
½ teaspoon of salt
⅛ teaspoon of pepper
¼ teaspoon of mustard
Few grains of cayenne
3 tablespoons of butter
1½ tablespoons flour

Soak the beans overnight; in the morning drain and add cold water. Slice the onion and cook five minutes with half the butter, adding to beans, with celery stalks broken in pieces. Simmer three or four hours, or until the beans are soft. Add more water as water boils away. Rub through a sieve, reheat to the boiling point, and add salt, pepper, mustard and cayenne well mixed. Bind with remaining butter and flour, cooked together.

Serve this soup with a garnish of thin slices of hard cooked egg and lemon and watch them pass back their bowls for seconds!

Mrs. A. D. Fulghum, 120 C street northwest, Apt. 204, wins the fourth award with a new recipe for crab gumbo.

Creole Gumbo.

1 can of crabmeat (or fresh crabmeat
1 piece of ham or ham bone
1 medium can of tomatoes
1 pound of fresh okra
1 tablespoon of shortening
1 onion chopped
Chopped celery leaves
1 green pepper chopped
Thyme
Bay leaf
Parsley
Salt
Few drops of tabasco or red pepper

Cut okra in slices. Fry the okra, onion, green pepper, celery and garlic in a tablespoon of shortening until tender.

Have the ham bone boiled almost done. Add two quarts of water, tomatoes and other seasonings. Cook slowly for an hour. Add the crabmeat 20 minutes before serving. Shrimp may be used instead of crab meat.

The fifth prize was awarded Mrs. Jay Lawlor, 1629 Thirty-fifth street, who sent in this recipe for quickly-prepared soup. It is a kitchenette special.

Company Soup.

Open 1 can of mushroom soup and 1 can of chicken soup. Combine in a double boiler with ½ teaspoon of salt and a few grains of pepper. Heat thoroughly and serve in cream soup cups.

Whip 1-3 cup of heavy cream until stiff and fold in 1 teaspoon of prepared horseradish and float a spoonful on each cup of soup. Sprinkle with paprika for color and flavor.

Short-Order Chowder.

Chowders may be made of canned soups to which leftover cooked meat, fish or fowl have been added. One cup of "filler" should be added for each cup of soup. Chicken blends with asparagus or celery soup; veal is excellent with tomato or beef boullion, while beef is especially suitable for old-fashioned bean or pea soup.

She Tries Out the Prize-Winning Soup

Miss Louise Mary Deto, 148 Philadelphia avenue, Takoma Park, Md., agrees with the judges and finds Mrs. L. D. Adair's prize-winning recipe for Real Southern Soup delicious. The soup has a high caloric content and may be used as a main dish for a satisfying luncheon.

Color Schemes For Decoration

SO YOUR living room isn't the charming spot you want it to be!

Then look at the four focal points: (A) the walls, (B) the rug, (C) the upholstery, (D) the curtains. See what a few inexpensive changes in color can do.

Mrs. M.'s living-room in the top sketch was a hodgepodge!

Walls, patterned in green and apricot.

Rug, floral pattern in sapphire, pink, green and gray.

Upholstery, old rose.

Curtains, blue and old rose.

So Mrs. M. made new curtains of emerald green which cleverly tied together the green of wallpaper and rug. She made a slip cover of the same color for her sofa, plain gray covers piped in green for the easy chairs.

"Dull," said Mrs. B. of her tan walls, her dark brown rug, rust upholstery and curtains. And dull they were until she made curtains and a sofa slip cover of cretonne, figured in mango red, cinnamon brown and gold. Slip covers of plain red, a group of flower prints, compete a warm, glowing color scheme.

Recipe Suggested For Chocolate Icing

If you like chocolate, then add chocolate and cinnamon to your next doughnut batter. Frost them with chocolate icing made this way:

Chocolate Icing.

2 egg whites
1½ teaspoons of corn syrup
1½ cups of sugar
1 teaspoon of vanilla
3 squares of chocolate

Melt the chocolate and cool. Blend the egg whites, sugar, water and corn syrup and cook in the double boiler on top of the stove. Beat with egg beater until thoroughly mixed. Place over rapidly boiling water and beat constantly for seven minutes. Add the cool melted chocolate and vanilla. Blend but do not beat. Spread over the doughnuts.

Eggs Featured, May Win Prizes In Recipe Contest

The egg provides the finest nourishment for rich, poor, well and sick. It has a versatile use, and since it is so rich in food value dishes made with eggs have an important place in the diet.

There are so many ways the egg can be used that we feel it deserves a special place on the culinary calendar and a special week devoted to its use in the favorite recipe contest. It has been wisely said cooking becomes a fine art when eggs are used.

Breakfast, lunch and dinner all find the egg a welcome addition to the menu. Egg beverages, desserts, custards, omelets, souffles, sandwiches and sauces all glorify the egg. Cakes gain a light texture through its use. Sponge and angel cakes are examples. Shirred eggs, soft scrambled eggs, deviled eggs, creamed eggs suggest a few of the many practical egg recipes.

For your favorite recipe, The Washington Post is offering five cash prizes, one of $3, one of 2, and three of $1 each.

Write out your recipe carefully, include clear directions for its preparation, and mail to Miss Jean Greeen, The Post Food Editor, before October 23.

Neglected Kohlrabi Can Do Double Duty

Kohlrabi belongs to that class of unusual vegetables which the average homemaker is always meaning to try, but seldom does. If you haven't become acquainted with this member of the cabbage family, you should now that it's making its annual appearance on the market again, for you are certain to like its distinctive flavor. Kohlrabi is a vegetable that does double duty—both the root and leaves (they make excellent greens) can be utilized. The simplest method of preparing the root is to cook and serve it in a cream sauce.

Halloween Party Fun for Children

Someone has said that every person should have at least one birthday party sometime in childhood. However, we think that if we were children again and could have our choice we'd ask if we might have a Halloween party instead. We'd just love surprising our friends with ghosts and things. There are so many different, mysterious ideas you can think up for Halloween entertainment. And you know how children love mysteries.

Here's a recipe for a surprise dessert for a children's party or a grown-ups' party too—individual apple butter refrigerator cakes with ghost faces. They're made with ginger cookies. Don't they sound spicy and cold and "Halloweeny?" They're a brand-new recipe, too, so they can't help but be a surprise.

Use your favorite ginger cookie recipe for the cookies. Bake them in the usual way.

Use a filling of cream cheese, apple butter and whipped cream for the cookies. Put five cookies together for each serving. Cover with the filling and decorate with raisin faces. Chill at least four hours in the refrigerator before serving.

Plain Soap Used to Clean Upholstered Furniture

Often household furnishings that seemed adequate enough in their accustomed setting look pathetically shabby and out of place after moving day. If upholstered pieces are too soiled to do justice to their new surroundings send them away to be cleaned or freshen them up at home. Unless they have been too long neglected they can be made to look like new if mild soap is applied in the form of soup jelly or a thick tepid lather, then removed with a clean, damp cloth and the surface mopped dry with more clean cloths before the moisture soaks through. Wooden pieces that look down at the heels can often be rejuvenated by a thorough soapy scrubbing and a coat of washable paint.

Cream Cheese Improves Old-Time Pumpkin Pie

Pumpkin tarts reflect the holiday spirit when decorated gayly with the pastry tube. Either thinned cream cheese or whipped cream can be used in decorating. These tarts have grinning pumpkin faces for a special buffet party.

Spicy Dish Can Be Varied Also With Whipped Cream or Crushed Pineapple; Tarts Delicious With Frozen Eggnog.

By Nancy Ellis.

COME FALL, there are many menu suggestions that simply can't be overlooked. One of these is pumpkin pie. Moist, spicy pie in a crisp crust is an old-time favorite. However, there are several ways that this old-time favorite can be improved for October menus. One of these is here illustrated. The spicy pumpkin filling is used in individual pies or tarts and served with a garnish of thinned cream cheese. The cheese is used to make a pumpkin face. A neat suggestion for your Halloween party!

There are other ways in which to glorify the traditional pumpkin pie. For example, a cup of drained, crushed pineapple can be stirred into the pumpkin mixture before it goes into the unbaked pie shell. This adds a new and different flavor. Instead of thinned cream cheese, whipped cream sweetened with honey can be used as a garnish. A scoop of vanilla custard ice cream or frozen eggnog goes well with it.

In baking the pumpkin in the shell, be sure to start the baking in a hot oven. This will prevent the filling from softening the crust. You probably already have in your files a favorite pumpkin pie recipe. If not, here is a suggestion. In this recipe brown sugar can be substituted for the white, if desired, to give a more caramel taste.

The recipe for the tarts is not difficult to follow. The decorating is done after the tarts come out of the oven.

Pumpkin Tartlets—Tart Shell.

3 cups bread or all-purpose flour
¾ teaspoon salt
2-3 cup shortening
Ice water

Mix and sift dry ingredients. Cut the shortening into the dry ingredients. Add just enough ice water to hold ingredients together. Toss on a lightly floured board. Do not knead. Roll the pastry to a thickness of ⅛ inch. Line the tart pan or muffin tins with pastry. Flute the edges of the pastry.

Filling.

2 cups pumpkin, either cooked and strained or canned
1 cup milk
2 eggs, well beaten
½ cup granulated sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon cloves
¼ teaspoon ginger
½ teaspoon nutmeg
½ teaspoon salt
1 package cream cheese

Combine the ingredients (except cream cheese) in the order listed and blend. Pour the mixture into the unbaked tart shells. Bake in a quick oven (400 degrees) for ten minutes. Reduce heat to hot oven (375 degrees) for remaining time, approximately 15 minutes. Allow tarts to cool thoroughly. Thin the cream cheese to a workable consistency with cream. Make the eyes, nose and mouth to resemble a pumpkin face with the cream cheese that is forced through the rose tube of the pastry tube. This recipe makes eight tarts.

Capital Favors Sunday Parties At Breakfast

By Margaret Wallace

SUNDAY morning breakfast parties have an important part in the social scheme of our National Capital. Good taste must be considered in arranging these parties. A "scrambled together" breakfast that lacks the refinement of a well-bred household is as much a social error as the too formal function at the breakfast hour. Washington, in keeping with many other social centers, has the habit of designating Sunday luncheon parties as breakfasts. This type of Sunday breakfast, of course, may be as formal as a luncheon. But the type of breakfast party that takes place at 9, 10, 11 or even an earlier hour on Sunday morning has its own particular place in the Sunday entertaining of Washington.

This type of breakfast is most successful when not too many guests are invited. The tactful hostess will select guests who are congenial. Since this is an informal function, it is proper to telephone the invitations. Often the breakfast table is so arranged so additional guests can be invited at the last moment. If the invitations are not telephoned they should be written on a little double calling card or in the form of a personal note.

Should Not Linger.

Washingtonians who attend these Sunday morning breakfast parties usually have engagements afterward or plan to go to church. Therefore, the hostess should expect her guests to leave immediately after breakfast. Some of the guests may linger to listen to the radio programs, or take part in any pastime the hostess may arrange.

For the real breakfast party that does not have the formality of a luncheon party, menu should include typical breakfast foods. Good hot coffee and plenty of it is an essential. The meal should begin with fresh fruit or a cereal and cream. Then scrambled eggs and bacon or some other breakfast dish shiuld be served. Since Washington is so near Maryland and Virginia the real Sunday morning breakfast of fried chicken and waffles or corn bread or spoon bread or some hot bread is very popular.

Pancakes Suitable.

Pancakes are always hailed with delight by the Sunday morning breakfaster. One Washington hostess likes to serve cream chipped beef and golden brown sausages, with golden brown toast for her Sunday morning entertaining. Another has won a reputation for her Sunday morning creamed eggs while another has taken a leaf from the book of rules of the Massachusetts hostesses and tempts her guests with baked beans and brown bread.

Doilies are usually used at the Sunday morning breakfast parties with napkins to match. Most hostesses like colorful breakfast tables and choose bright linens, colored glassware for their breakfast tables. While the buffet style of serving breakfast is proper, the wise hostess will provide places for her guests at long tables or small tables for part of the success of such parties is the opportunity afforded the guests to enjoy a leisurely meal. People who relish their breakfast do not like to have to balance a plate of food and hot coffee on their knees or to stand around and try to eat from a plate held in one hand and to prevent hot coffee from spilling at the same time.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Copyright 1937, for The Washington Post.

Over the drinks in a Bermuda bar a wealthy American was tearing his hair about American taxes, with two Englishmen in his audience. . . He was blaming it all on the President.

• • • •

"We think," he said, apparently nominating himself as spokesman for all American millionaires, a little presumptuously (I thought), "that he is demented—d-e-m-e-n-t-e-d! . . . He couldn't do this to us if he were in his right mind."

• • • •

The Englishmen looked surprised, and glanced toward me, doubtfully, as if for confirmation.

I tapped my forehead, glanced at the irate American significantly, and winked.

"That's just a mild form of dementia," I whispered to one of them, "that's currently prevalent among a few heavy American taxpayers. They think the President's crazy. Actually, he's driving them crazy."

"—President drives him crazy."

Incidentally, the rich American in question had just flown a party of four from New York to Bermuda on the Pan-American clipper plane for the week-end. The plane fare alone cost him $720, and he said it was worth it. The whole two-day week-end cost him over $1,000, but he didn't blame that on the President.

• • • •

A little later I ran into the Englishmen on the golf course.

"We pay heavier taxes than you American johnnies," said one of them, "but we don't run around saying King George is crazy."

• • • •

Apropos of the Duke of Windsor's visit to America, hosts and orchestra leaders might like to know that his favorite tune still was "There's a Small Hotel," at last reports . . .

President Roosevelt is fond of "Yellow Rose of Texas" . . .

And Corinne Griffith, who was the loveliest woman in Hollywood and is now married to Washington's ebullient George Marshall, owner of the pro football team, has two wistful favorites: "Remember Me?" and "That Old Feeling."

• • • •

Bermuda has the most musical frogs I ever heard. They're called singing frogs, and they got into Bermuda accidentally a few years ago, as stowaways in a shipment of ferns, little fellows half the size of your thumb . . . They sing all night as if their hearts would break. I'm not exaggerating when I say their night song is more musical than the song of a nightingale.

• • • •

I'd like to see a big shipment of these frogs imported into the States, with or without ferns, because their croaking is so much more musical than the croaking of such pessimistic Americans as my wealthy friend in the bar.

"—sweeter than nightingales."

By the way, sojourners at Bermuda have been taking flying week-end excursions to New York City, just for the week-end, via the Pan American clipper, over the 666-mile water hop, about as far as Chicago to New York. Some of the Britons eat breakfast in Bermuda, lunch on the plane, tea in New York, dinner in Washington. It's $100 for the round trip excursion, instead of the usual $180.

• • • •

It's still the gilded horse and buggy age in Bermuda . . . A ride that would cost a 20-cent taxi fare in Washington costs $1 on the blessed isle . . . But I kinda like the horse and buggy age; the scenery is worth it, and I haven't had my fender scraped nor been honked at in 36 hours.

• • • •

If I lived in Bermuda I'd be tempted to drive a rubber-tired sulky; it would be the fastest way of getting around this unmotorized island.

The Washington debs could learn a lesson in stamina from the Bermuda girls, who can stay up till 4 a. m. and be up bright and early—and I really mean bright—the next morning.

Congress Call May Put Off Supply Bill Hearing

Hearings on the 1939 District supply bill, tentatively scheduled to start November 15 before the District subcommittee of the House Appropriations Committee, may be delayed, Chairman Collins said yesterday on account of the convening of the special session of Congress on that date. He still hopes to have the measure ready to call up at the opening of the regular January session.

Stolen Property Guard Loses His Own to Thief

For 18 years Joseph Jackson, colored, 1014 Columbia road northwest, has been janitor in the stolen property storeroom, adjacent to Police Headquarters. Yesterday, after nearly two decades of caring for other people's missing property, he was looking for some of his own.

Someone entered his basement apartment by smashing the window, and made off with three suits, valued at $35.

Students Drink Water Toasts at G. W.'s Dry Night Club, First in East

There was music in the air in the new Blue and Buff Room at George Washington University last night. Edward Schnitman plays on a saw while Miss Eunice Kal sings.

Here's how in the good, old soft drinks! At this liquorless table are Emily Bayly, Josephine LaSalle, a student waiter; Jane Hernsberger, Samuel Walker and Bill Rochelle.

Post Staff Photos.

The George Washington students opened their night club by dancing the hours away. The melodies to which they tripped were typically American and of the student body.

The waltz in the student tavern no longer is solely the property of European capitals and college towns.

It had its New World counterpart last night at George Washington University, where, in a basement, beneath delicately shaded lamps, the first college "night club" on the Eastern Seaboard had a melodious beginning.

The club, planned, managed and made a reality by students, had almost 300 guests for its opening. The room in which the co-eds danced with their escorts from all schools on the campus, is known as the Buff and Blue Room.

No brimming tankards were upon the tables, and none of the traditional barmaids of Old Heidelburg or near-the-Sorbonne was present.

Dedicated to uniting undergraduates of the university as completely in recreation as in studies and athletics, the club is one of the few in the world where no alcoholic beverages are served.

As typically American music came from the student orchestra, under the direction of William McCallum, guests who were not dancing toasted each other's health in lemonade and water and ginger ale.

"Good luck and good fun," they said, and not once "Here's how," or "prosit" or "Sante."

Idea for the club originated with William Rochelle, president of the Student Union, a senior, and J. R. Flewharty, of the A Student Club, a graduate of the university's business course.

The experiment is typically American. It typifies the American undergraduate's idea of a good time as the George Washington students, back of the enterprise, see it.

In at least three universities in the West the idea has caught on. There are similar clubs at the University of Iowa, the University of Southern California and the University of Wisconsin.

Club directors are Jay Samuels and Vinny de Angelis. Jack Schulman designed the murals—buff and fantastic. Schulman painted enormous notes which might have been dropped from a giant's musical scale. He painted exaggerated crooners singing into huge microphones and couples dancing somewhere in a world of blue and white.

Entertainers are recruited from student talent. There were tap dancers last night, and musicians who played and sang American songs and ballads.

Among those who furnished music were Eunic Kal, who sang, and Edward Schnitman, who coaxed melodies from a saw.

The club is the aftermath of the riotous postwar '20's, its officials say. It forms a link between the '20's and the '40's to come.

It will, they believe, show the university and the community that persons can have a good time without intoxicants.

"And everything here will be typical of our university and ourselves," said Rochelle last night.

2 Capital Men With Byrd Get Special Medals

Secretary Swanson Makes Awards; Admiral Dubious of North Pole Flights.

Special Congressional medals yesterday were presented by Secretary of the Navy Swanson to Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, and Washington scientists, William C. Haines, meteorologist, and Dr. A. A. Lindsey, biologist.

The medals, awarded to members of the Second Antarctic Expedition "to express the very high admiration in which the Congress and the American people hold their heroic and undaunted accomplishments for science, unequaled in the history of polar exploration," will be transmitted to the other recipients by Admiral Byrd.

In accepting the medal Admiral Byrd said, "I thank you for my men as well as myself. They deserve the credit for this medal, and I will distribute medals to the others of my fine expedition."

Declaring that he doubted that regular flights between Russia and the United States via the route pioneered by Soviet airmen this summer would be practicable "for some years," he stated, following the presentation, that "the Russia-America route can be flown only half the year. Even under otherwise favorable conditions the problems of ice forming on the wings and the lack of bases are difficult."

"Sometime in the future," Byrd said, "I plan to give two more years to exploration," but added that he had not decided on the Antarctic.

Meanwhile, he intends to devote his time to furthering international co-operation, Admiral Byrd said, declaring that he was in complete agreement with the naval building program now being carried forward by the United States.

Congress authorized 57 persons to receive the medal, but two have died since the expedition disbanded. They were Dr. L. H. Potaka and I. A. Tinghof.

Other recipients of the medal are C. A. Abele, jr.; C. Bailey, R. D. Black, Q. A. Blackburn, E. H. Bramhall, V. Boyd, M. H. Bowlin, L. Clark, A. Carbone, S. Corey, E. F. Cox, F. S. Dane, E. J. Demas, F. G. Dustin, J. H. Dyer, A. Eliefsen, B. Fleming, G. Grimminger, J. Herrmann, J. Hill, jr.; O. Hutcheson, Capt. A. Innes-Taylor, R. A. J. English, H. I. June, W. P. Lewisohn, W. S. McCormick, L. T. Miller, E. L. Moody, Dr. C. G. Morgan, G. J. V. Murphy, O. C. Noville, D. Paine, S. D. Paine, J. A. Peiter, R. B. Perkins, G. O. Petersen, T. C. Poulter, K. L. Rawson, F. Renne, R. Boy, 6, Struck by Truck While Playing in Street

A 6-year-old boy was in a serious condition at Casualty Hospital last night, suffering from injuries received when he was struck by a truck while playing near Seventeenth and K streets northeast.

The boy, Wayne Adams, of 1016 Seventeenth place northeast, was being treated for a fractured skull and possible fractures of both legs. The driver of the truck, James F. McFarland, r., 18, of 101 E street southeast, was charged at the Ninth Precinct station with driving without a District permit.

Memorial Service Is Set For Spanish War Victim

Washington friends of Sidney Shosteck, local youth killed last month on the Spanish Loyalist front, will honor his memory at a service tomorrow at the Washington Hotel, at 3 p.m.

Bernard Ades, another Washington man, just returned from the Spanish battlefield, will relate incidents of the conflict.

Shosteck was in an American volunteer outfit. Phil Bard, executive secretary of the American volunteer group, will speak.

Unbuttered Bread Is a Luxury For This D.C. Family of Pupils

Opportunity House Head Visits a Home Luckier Than Some Because Her Organization Serves Lunch in the Neighborhood.

(In its effort to show the need behind the drive to raise a free lunch fund for the District's needy school children, The Post is presenting a series of actual hunger stories as they happen in the City of Washington. This is the fifth.)

Plain bread is a luxury in the home of a family visited Thursday afternoon by Miss Bessie Baker, superintendent of Opportunity House. But the mother does not even eat much of that.

"It fills me up when I get to worrying about the children, and I don't seem hungry any more," she told Miss Baker. (She was out trying to borrow food when the call was made, however.)

The father is an unemployed machinist, and there are four children. Luckily the children go to school in the Opportunity House neighborhood and get hot lunches served free to them there.

More than 5,000 other District school children do not live in neighborhoods where there is a settlement house to which they may go for lunch.

"This family lives in one large room, with bathroom privileges," Miss Barton said. "Part of the room is partitioned off into a makeshift kitchen—but the kitchen does not see much service these days.

"The landlady has been particularly kind to the family, letting their rent go and giving them gifts of food and money. The mother is an especially fine person and the children are as attractive as you could find anywhere, just the kind you want to—have big slices of bread with rich jam on it.

"To think that 7 cents will buy a nice big lunch for such as these is enough to make everyone willing to give to the lunch fund. The Citizens Emergency Committee is trying to raise only enough money to buy lunches five days a week. That is such a little to ask in a city like Washington."

Glover Park Body Hears Pepco Head

Melvin Sharpe, vice president of the Potomac Electric Power Co., addressed the Glover Park Citizens Association last night on the services of the utility in relation to the neighborhood.

The association's zoning committee reported the successful outcome of its fight to prevent a section of Thirty-seventh street from being changed from a residential to a commercial area.

Pavement repairs were announced by the highway committee, and a special committee reported that its efforts opposing the extension of a liquor license had been upheld by the District authorities.

Parley to Be Held Over City Airports

Dr. Fred D. Fagg, jr., director of the Bureau of Air Commerce, announced yesterday his agency intended to call a conference on providing adequate municipal airports. Airline operators, plane manufacturers, the various cities, the Post-office Department and the Department of Commerce, he said, should consider the subject.

"Until they can all sit down together the chaotic conditions of the present must continue," he told the Chicago convention of the American Municipal Association.

Fireman Is Injured Extinguishing Blaze

Fireman George C. Bowie, of No. 12 Truck Company, was taken to the fire board clinic yesterday after answering a one-alarm call at 4401 Davenport street northwest. Firemen said he cut his hand on a piece of tin while extinguishing a blaze in the one-story real estate office at that address. Bowie lives at 1436 Meridian street northwest.

Private Guy Long, 1359 Girard street northwest, was confined to his home yesterday after severely spraining his ankle while answering a false alarm at the Washington Auditorium Thursday night. He is attached to No. 23 Engine Company.

Youthful Couple Sought Here as Counterfeiters

A well-dressed young man and woman were sought by police last night on a charge of counterfeiting. United States Secret Service police, who asked Metropolitan officers to apprehend the pair, said they had been passing counterfeit 25-cent pieces in the city.

D. C. General's Son Commands Warship

The Navy Department announced yesterday that the 1,500-ton destroyer, Blue, recently completed at the Norfolk Navy Yard, will sail from Hampton Roads November 3 on its shakedown cruise, and will arrive at Guantanamo, Cuba, three days later.

Under command of Lieut. Comdr. Jerauld Wright, U. S. Navy, son of Maj. Gen. William M. Wright, U. S. Army, retired, who lives at 3028 Q street northwest, the Blue will visit San Juan, Puerto Rico, from November 15 until November 22, returning to Guantanamo the following day. After visiting Havana, Cuba, from December 4 to December 10, she will proceed to New Orleans.

The vessel, which was placed in commission in August, will sail from New Orleans, December 18, to return to Hampton Roads.

The 1,500-ton destroyer, Craven, recently completed at the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation's plant in Fore River, Mass., is en route to the Canal Zone on its shakedown cruise, the Navy Department also announced.

Rainbow Unit Veterans To Honor Gen. De Witt

Maj. Gen. John L. De Witt, commandant of the Army War College, will be the guest of honor at a dinner given by the District of Columbia Chapter, Rainbow Division Veterans, at 7 p. m., in Schneider's Restaurant.

In the World War, Gen. De Witt, then a lieutenant colonel, was quartermaster of the Rainbow Division, serving under Gen. Douglas MacArthur. He later became quartermaster general of the Army.

2 Held to Grand Jury On Dope Charge Here

Two men arrested Thursday by the narcotic squad at detective headquarters, were held to the grand jury after being arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage yesterday. Bond was set at $1,000 each.

The two are Howard Ferguson, 39, 1100 block of Fourth street northeast, and Russel Epps, 26, colored, 400 block of Ridge street. Ferguson was on the District police force for three weeks several years ago.

$10,000 'Gate' At School Lunch Fights Forecast

Ticket Sales Already at $6,200 for Benefit Boxing Show.

At least a $10,000 "gate" for the school lunch benefit boxing show at Griffith Stadium Monday night was forseen yesterday as ticket sales by firemen and policemen reached more than $6,200 early in the morning.

The show is the first city-wide benefit in the campaign of the citizens emergency committee to raise $67,500 to insure free lunches for the District's needy school children during the winter.

On the strength of money already raised and "faith in outcome to the drive," the lunch program will begin Monday, with the WPA providing labor and cost of operation.

A meeting will be held today with member of the committee and dairy representatives, to smooth out any distribution difficulties. The committee is asking dairies to distribute pamphlets explaining the lunch program, Mrs. John Boyles, jr., committee chairman, said.

Frank Buckley, chairman of the boxing committee, said arrangements are being made to admit free to the show all firemen appearing in uniform, in recognition of their services in the ticket selling campaign. Policemen in uniform are admitted free, anyway, he said.

"Actual cases" taken from hunger conditions among children of the District were presented over WOL last night by Buckley and Miss Bessie Baker of Opportunity House. The time was donated by Joe Cherner.

As their major contribution to the lunch campaign, members of the District of Columbia Parents and Teachers are sponsoring an illustrated lecture on the West Indies by Tommy Larkin, color motion-picture cameraman.

The performance will be at Central High School next Friday at 7 p. m., with a students' matinee at 3:45 p. m. on the same day, Mrs. Walter B. Fry, the president, announced.

257 More Join Y.M.C.A. In Membership Drive

The Young Men's Christian Association membership drive has won 257 new members since Monday, it was reported last night at a meeting of campaign workers at the Y's central building, 1736 G street northwest. The goal is 800 new members.

Earl Godwin, White House correspondent and news commentator, was the principal speaker at last night's meeting. He explained how a White House correspondent gathers news and told how Presidents in recent years had reacted to reporters.

McGuinness Appointed As Bishop of Raleigh

The apostolic delegation announced last night that the Right Rev. Eugene J. McGuinness, vice president of the Catholic Church Extension Society, has been appointed Bishop of the Diocese of Raleigh, N. C. Mgr. McGuinness, whose elevation was revealed in Rome, has been a priest in the Archdiocese of Philadelphia. He succeeds Bishop Hafey, who has been transferred to Scranton, Pa.

Mount St. Mary's Installs New Head With Solemn Rites

Emmitsburg, Md., Oct. 15 (AP)—Solemn ceremonies in an open-air amphitheater elevated the Rev. John Lawrence Sheridan to the presidency of Mount St. Mary's College today.

Archbishop Michael J. Curley, of Baltimore, presided at the ceremonies attended by 400 alumni, guests and friends of the college.

Church dignitaries from many parts of the Nation joined in the services. They included the Most Rev. William J. Hafey, Bishop of Raleigh, N. C.; the Most Rev. Bernard J. Mahoney, Bishop of Sioux Falls, S. Dak.; the Most Rev. George L. Leech, Bishop of Harrisburg, Pa., and the Most Rev. Peter L. Ireton, Coadjutor Bishop of Richmond, Va.

State and municipal officials present included Mayor Howard W. Jackson of Baltimore, Attorney General Herbert R. O'Conor, Maj. Elmer Munshower, of the State police; Fire Chief Howard W. Travers, of Baltimore, and George Evans, member of the Baltimore Board of Fire Commissioners.

$300 Is Stolen In New Series Of D.C. Holdups

Bandits Get $50 at Filling Station and $10 at Grocery Store.

A series of robberies, including two holdups, netted petty criminals more than $300 here yesterday.

A tall, slim bandit, about 21, held up William Norton, attendant at a filling station at Twenty-fourth and M streets northwest and escaped with $50.

A few minutes later a bandit entered a grocery store at 1369 C street northeast and in broken English asked Michael Starr, the proprietor, to give him the contents of the cash register. After he brandished a revolver, he escaped on foot with $10.

Ross Morton, of 1819 S street northwest, reported he was attacked by two men while walking in the 500 block of S street and robbed of $20.

Elsie M. Smith, Social Security Board employe, told police that cash and money orders totaling approximately $85 was stolen from the desk of her office in the National Theater Building. A similar theft was reported by Helen Slye, of 1419 Ames street northeast, who said that $50 in bills was taken from her office at 1627 K street northwest.

Alvin Clemens, employe of a plumbing supply company at 136 K street northeast, reported that $90 was stolen from his desk. Most of the money was in $10 bills, he said.

Father and Son Seized As Lottery Operators

A father and son were charged with operating a lottery last night after a raid on a lunchroom in the 1900 block of E street northwest, near Washington Auditorium.

The two arrested were Robert Jones, 28, and Harvey P. Jones, 64, both of 2423 Eighteenth street northwest. The raid was led by Capt. Arthur E. Miller of the Third Precinct and by Detective Roy E. Blick.

Board of Trade Urges 130 New D.C. Policemen

Traffic Committee Ideas Sent to Commissioners, Crawford Says.

Lawrence C. Crawford, chairman of the traffic committee of the Board of Trade, last night recommended to 1,500 members of the board an increase of 130 in the District police force as one step towards solution of the city's traffic problems.

Other measures advocated in the report include maintenance of a night traffic court, limitation of down-town parking to two hours and drastic tightening of control of double-parking and angle parking.

The report called for utilization of all land owned by the Federal Government, not now a part of the park system, as parking space.

Crawford said recommendations of the committee, "subject to the limitations of a $46,000,000 budget," had been submitted to the Commissioners.

Edgar Morris, chairman of the municipal committee, reported to the board that the efforts of his committee had brought about a decrease in the gross receipts tax from three-fifths to two-fifths of 1%. He declared that the tax, as finally drafted, would produce $2,000,000 more than a $46,000,000 budget required.

Referring to the present budget, he said, "We cannot allow this 'emergency' to continue indefinitely. The time to apply the brakes has come."

The board also heard appeals for support from the Red Cross, Y. M. C. A. and Civic Theater.

Peary's Daughter Sees Dedication

Mrs. Marie Stafford, of Washington, daughter of Rear-Adm. Robert E. Peary, discoverer of the North Pole, and her son, Perry Stafford, yesterday attended dedication of a monument to her father at Cresson, Pa. The life-sized stone statue was bought by school children of Cambria County, and stands near the Humber home in which the explorer was born.

Mrs. Stafford, born farthest north of any white child at that time, was known as the 'Snow Baby.' She made her debut here in 1914.

2,000 Pupils in Capital Receiving Dental Care

Approximately 3,500 of 5,000 elementary school children examined under the Health Department have received or are receiving dental care, it was announced yesterday as the results of the dental health demonstrations were made public.

According to Dr. A. Harry Ostrow, Health Department school dental supervisor, 2,000 of the children are havng their teeth looked after either by private dentists or by school clinics and social agencies. Aim of the department is to examine all 60,000 children in elementary classes.

Glenn Frank Assails Plans Of New Deal

Ex-Head of Wisconsin U. Attacks Control by 'Blue-Print.'

Applauded by 1,500 at Meeting of D. C. Trade Board.

Asserting his confidence in the economic system of free enterprise, Dr. Glenn Frank, former president of the University of Wisconsin, last night drew repeated rounds of applause from 1,500 members of the Washington Board of Trade as he assailed "blue-print planners" of an "economy of scarcity."

"If millions of Americans are ever to live the abundant life instead of listening to it," charged Dr. Frank, "we must have more goods at lower prices, not fewer goods at higher prices. A desirable emergency measure, such as crop control, must not be elevated to the dignity of a social gospel."

Wants "Traffic Rules."

"I am neither a New Dealer trying to stay in office nor an Old Dealer trying to get back in office," continued Dr. Frank, stating his belief in an "intelligently modernized capitalism, obeying decent economic traffic rules."

He condemned subsidies to the weak and inefficient, price-fixing which deprives the economic system of its normal flexibility, Government assumption of the normal risks of free enterprise and measures for prevenion of unfair competition which eventually stifle "competition of excellence."

Warns of Dictatorship.

Discussing self-government in America, the noted educator and publicist said, "I have an uneasy sense that some of our most valued institutions and traditions can no longer be taken for granted."

He described the regimes of Germany, Italy and Russia, and warned his audience against "a less spectacular form of dictatorship" disguised as "emergency leadership."

"The cardinal strength of democracy," he declared, "is that it broadens the base of judgment on which policy is built. The greater the complexities of an age, the broader should be the base of judgment. The cardinal weakness of dictatorship is that it narrows the base of judgment upon which policy is built."

Dinner Postponed By Coffee Festival

Owing to illness of one of the principal speakers scheduled for the banquet which was to close the coffee festival in Washington tomorrow evening, and to complications in reservations, Edward A. Pike, manager of the West River Yacht Club, which is sponsoring this festival, announced that the banquet will be postponed.

The banquet will be held later in the season.

The final showing tonight of the educational films relating to coffee and coffee-growing countries at Georgetown University will close the festival, which was opened Tuesday in the auditorium of the National Press Club.

Dean Executor Asks Estate Tax Revision

By the Associated Press.

John W. Crow, of this city, asked the Board of Tax Appeals yesterday to redetermine a $63,200 deficiency in estate taxes. The Bureau of Internal Revenue had assessed him as executor of the estate of Edward B. Dean, sr., who died November 18, 1935. Crow contended the bureau erroneously included in the gross estate some real estate located in Prince Georges County and Muirkirk, Md., and Princeton, N. J.

He contended the bureau erred also in its valuation of stock of Borden Industries, Inc., and in disallowing deductions for executors' commissions and attorneys' fees and for a $17,000 debt.

Colored Driver Held In Traffic Death Here

Oliver Ray, colored, 35, 300 block of M street southwest, was held for Police Court under the negligent homicide act after a coroner's inquest yesterday over the traffic death Wednesday of Mrs. Eliza Jefferson, 65, colored. She was injured Saturday at Fourth and L streets southwest.

A second inquest decided that the traffic death Wednesday of Mrs. Josephine Lohmeyer, 74, of 432 Emerson street northwest, was accidental. The driver was not held.

Man Held to Grand Jury.

Norman E. Langmaid, 21, 5800 block of Nevada avenue northwest, was held for the grand jury in bail of $1,100 on two charges of petty larceny and one of housebreaking and larceny yesterday.

Wheat Prices Advance With Export Trade

Buying Reported for Overseas Lifts Prices 2½c Per Bushel.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 15.—Brisk buying attributed to exporters brought about 2½ cents jump of the Chicago wheat market today, with the topmost prices reached prevailing at the last.

An outstanding feature was that the spread between Chicago and Liverpool wheat prices widened to the largest difference of the season. Trade leaders emphasized that United States wheat is on an export basis, notwithstanding high ocean freight rates and despite preferential duties abroad.

It was also stressed that from July to October the United States has exported 15,000,000 bushels of wheat as compared with imports of that amount a year ago. Much notice was taken of assertions current that the November delivery of wheat at Buenos Aires has been cornered, and that this is imparting strength to Argentina's new crop quotations.

Chicago wheat futures closed 1⅝@2½ above yesterday's finish, December, 1.00¼@1.00⅝; May, 1.00@1.01; July, 93¼@93⅞; Corn, ¼ to ⅜ advanced; December, 58¾@58⅞; May, 59⅞@60; July, 60⅝; Oats also ¼ to ⅜ up; December, 29¾, and rye showing 1⅞ to 2¼ bulge; December, 74½. In provisions, the outcome varied from 7 cents setback to 20 cents gain.

Boston Wool Market.

Boston, Oct. 15 (AP).—A little trading was done on fine Western grown wools in today's market. Prices, however, were irregular because of holders' varied ideas of values and extremely limited demand. Sales comprised mostly small clips, no sizable lines being reported in recent transactions.

Prices on fine territory clips were below 80 cents, scoured basis, in some cases but sales under this level were reported mostly on inferior wools or distress lots.

A few fine territory wools of fair combing length sold around 80 to 83 cents, scoured basis. Most houses wanted at least 85 for large lots of good French combing length. Some asked 90 cents.

Trade Buying Rallies Cotton

New York, Oct. 15 (AP).—Cotton recovered from opening declines today and rallied moderately on trade buying with offerings light.

December sold up from 8.13 to 8.32 and closed at 8.26, with final prices 1 to 10 points net higher.

Easier overseas markets and liquidation acounted for opening losses of 6 to 10 points. October was under pressure early as notices circulated on last trading day for that month. Except for an early accumulation of hedge selling, Southern offerings were light, while trade demand became a little more active with mill buying apparently encouraged by the better business in the cotton goods markets.

Exports today were 36.38, making a total of 1,188,603 for the season thus far. Port receipts 82,857; United States port stocks 2,973,939.

The Market

A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Close Lower in Active Trade; Wheat Higher, Government Bonds Up.

New York, Oct. 15.—Stocks moved irregularly lower through a mod- heartily shortly before noon, but they were taken with a better grace than has been the case recently. About a third day's turnover of 2,600,000 shares was handled in the first hour. United States bonds were steady. Commodities were mixed. December wheat rose 2⅝ cent to 100⅜ cents a bushel.

Whatever effect it may have had upon the authorities in Washington, the address made at Boston by Mr. Aldrich, of the Chase National Bank, on the diseases and dangers of Government interference in securities markets had a decidedly stimulating reception in Wall Street. It was hoped that the things which every one in the financial district has been saying for years might at last be listened to. That the head of the city's largest bank should have the courage to lead the attack was regarded as the most powerful single aid to recovery from the ills besetting finance. It is now confidently expected that other Wall Street leaders will speak and act in a manner that will compel attention even at Washington.

Arousing Opinion.

The immediate effect of Mr. Aldrich's remarks on some traders in stocks may not have been altogether bullish. By placing emphasis on the part played by the SEC and the Treasury in bringing about the decline in prices, as opposed to the influence of a business recession, Mr. Aldrich gave both hope and discouragement. On the one hand it was argued that if the cause lay in Washington, the markets scarcely could hope for any change, and that therefore it might well be the decline would go a great deal further.

On the other hand, by belittling the talk of a business recession, Mr. Aldrich encouraged to buy stocks many who undoubtedly have been selling or holding aloof because they feared a business depression, one induced by Government interference, indeed, but outside the stock market sphere. On balance the market probably will gain more than it will lose if the view rules that technical factors rather than fundamental unsoundness in trade (even though brought about by weird New Deal policy) are the cause of the decline in stocks.

Assumption of Power.

Whether trade recession is causing the market decline or whether the market decline is causing trade recession, there can be no doubt that the encroachments of bureaucracy in government are moving far along the road that leads to ruin of both business and market. This is a far better time to do something about that than it is to quibble over whether the cart or the horse is heading out west. Something can be done about the matter of unwarranted and unsound Government meddling in business and markets, a tendency which is growing daily and which feeds upon the exaggerated ideas of importance of bureaucrats, who take their cue from those higher up.

SEC Legality Test Needed.

It were much better for the Stock Exchange to go down after a good fight, if it must sink, than to settle gradually because of the lack of courage to pump out the hold and fire a good broadside at the pirate ships flying with questionable authority the national emblem. The Securities and Exchange Commission is merely one of numerous bureaus created by Congress and given broad, if vague, powers. The SEC has set to work under those powers and assumed authority to do about what it has pleased. Under blanket permission to regulate security trading it has made various rules which, if enacted into law by Congress itself, might well die from lack of constitutionality.

The Day's Movements In Leading Markets

Stocks.

	Fri.	Thur.
Advances	129	212
Declines	695	511
Unchanged	133	190
Total issues	957	913

Heavy selling wipes out substantial rally, with averages closing at new lows; volume, 10,064,350.

Bonds.

Rail issues lead decline; transfers, $10,064,350.

Curb.

Irregular; oil and mine shares firm; turnover, 532,000.

Commodities.

Wheat, cotton, sugar and coffee higher.

Exchange.

Steady; Great Britain, $4.96⅛; France, 3.36¾ cents.

That always is the tendency of governmental bureaus, namely, to exercise powers far exceeding the powers of the legislative body which created them. A constitutional test of the securities and exchange act is in order and the New York Stock Exchange is the natural body to make the test. If a good fight were started on that line the attention of the country would be focused upon what is really taking place in business and markets.

Some of the industrial leaders backed and filled without appreciable further loss, but many a salient was straightened in miscellaneous issues. American Can sold below 90 for the first time in four years on a loss of more than half a dozen points. American Telephone dropped below 150, after holding above that figure for more than a year and in the face of an earning report showing the regular dividend comfortably covered. Loose-Wiles, which took a dividend reduction and a tumble yesterday, opened 4 points lower.

A large number of comparatively inactive preferred stocks broke badly on light offerings. Cuban-American Sugar preferred fell 5 points on ten shares. United Stores preferred broke 18 points on one sale involving 100 shares of stock. Ward Baking preferred yielded 8 points to a level more than 54 points under the year's best price. Other weak preferreds were Republic, down 11; Detroit & Mackinac, off 6⅞ points; A. M. Byers, 7 points lower, and Guantanamo down 6 points.

The SEC.

Chairman Douglas of the SEC has at least one red ear. He told investment bankers here a few months ago that the underwriting fees on new securities offerings were too high for the risks involved. Today the Bethlehem Steel issue is tying knots in some investment houses who are trying to sell at 85-87 an issue which they had to buy as underwriters at 97. It requires a pretty hefty commission on a large number of new issues to make up for the losses involved in such a case, and the causes were wholly beyond the control of Wall street. On the contrary, the issue in the first place grew out of the unsound undistributed profits tax, in part, and for the rest its failure of placement at the original offering price was the result of current uncertainties stirred up by the New Deal's nemesis catching up with it.

Freight Traffic For Week Dips Under Year Ago

Total of 815,122 Loadings Is Decline of 5,448 From 1936 Week.

Loading of revenue freight for the week ended October 9 totaled 815,122 cars, the Association of American Railroads announced yesterday. This was a decrease of 5,448 cars or seven-tenths of 1 per cent below the corresponding week in 1936, but an increase of 80,968 cars or 11 per cent above the same week in 1935. It was, however, a decrease of 139,660 cars or 14.6 per cent below the same week in 1930. Loading of revenue freight for the week of October 9 was a decrease of 32,123 cars or 3.8 per cent below the preceding week.

Miscellaneous freight loading totaled 326,321 cars, a decrease of 12,984 cars below the preceding week, and 7,574 cars below the corresponding week in 1936.

Loading of merchandise less than carload lot freight totaled 173,634 cars, a decrease of 1,199 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 557 cars above the corresponding week in 1936.

Coal loading amounted to 156,948 cars, a decrease of 6,403 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 1,218 cars above the corresponding week in 1936.

Grain and grain products loading totaled 35,823 cars, a decrease of 981 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 5,769 cars above the corresponding week in 1936. In the Western districts alone, grain and grain products loading for the week of October 9 totaled 24,274 cars, a decrease of 930 cars below the preceding week but an increase of 557 cars above the corresponding week in 1936.

Livestock loading amounted to 20,572 cars, a decrease of 1,229 cars below the preceding week, and 1,339 cars below the corresponding week in 1936. In the Western districts alone, loading of livestock for the week of October 9 totaled 17,627 cars, a decrease of 732 cars below the preceding week, and 654 cars below the corresponding week in 1936.

Forest products loading totaled 34,001 cars, a decrease of 4,594 cars below the preceding week, and 812 cars below the corresponding week in 1936.

Ore loading amounted to 58,477 cars, a decrease of 3,712 cars below the preceding week, and 2,275 cars below the corresponding week in 1936.

Coke loading amounted to 9,326 cars, a decrease of 1,021 cars below the preceding week, and 992 cars below the corresponding week in 1936.

The Eastern, Allegheny, Pocahontas and Northwestern districts reported decreases while the Southern, Central Western and South Western districts reported increases in the number of cars loaded with revenue freight compared with the corresponding week in 1936. All districts, except the Pocahontas, reported decreases compared with the corresponding week in 1930.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, Oct. 15—The stock market closed with a mixed tone and trading was quiet and featureless. A fairly large number of accounts were closed out for over the week-end. Industrials had a strong early in the day, with tobacco, steel and shipping issues in good demand. The transatlantic section remained steady and a better tone was noted in the gilt-edged group. Home rails, oils and mining shares closed steady.

Paris—Government bonds and Bank of France shares closed lower, and international issues were mixed. Suez Canal was down 175 francs and Royal Dutch 37. Rentes finished unchanged to 20 centimes lower.

Liverpool—Wheat futures advanced and closed 1½d to 1¾d net higher on Spanish buying of North American wheat, decreasing stocks at Liverpool and the sharp advance in North American wheat markets today. Cotton futures gained 3 to 4 points, fair trade buying imparted steadiness but the market reacted in the absence of outside buying and easier prices at Bombay and Egypt.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

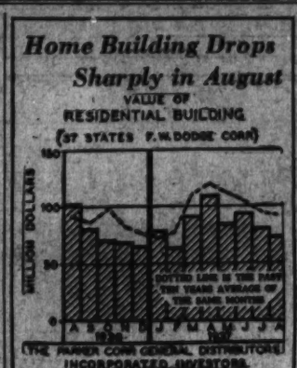
Leading currencies were either unchanged or fluctuated within a narrow range in foreign exchange markets yesterday.

With the French control fund selling sterling to support the franc, the latter was unchanged at 3.36¾ in early afternoon, after being under pressure. Sterling and the belga were unchanged at $4.96⅛ and 16.85 cents, respectively. The Swiss franc was down .00½ at 23.00½ and The Netherlands guilder gained .02 at 55.28 cents.

The dollar closed in London at 4.96⅛ to the pound, the same rate for sterling as overnight in New York. The dollar, in Paris, finished at the equivalent to 3.366 cents to the franc, compared with the New York overnight rate of 3.367 cents for francs.

Montreal Silver Futures.

Montreal, Oct. 15 (AP).—Silver futures closed steady, 5 to 10 higher. No sales. October, 44.50 bid; December, 44.50 bid; March, 44.00 bid.



Boston, Mass., Oct. 15.—Many believed we were in for a real spurt in residential building, but the August figures tempered hopes. The value of residential building in August dropped 28 per cent from a year ago and also declined more than the seasonal average from July building. The need today is for a readjustment of building costs.

Aluminum Up $3 on N. Y. Curb

New York, Oct. 15 (AP).—Prices on the curb exchange today were mixed, with some leading specialties, oil and mining shares showing substantial gains. Aluminum Company was up 3 points at 101½, Creole Oil gained a point at 23, Newmont Mining was up 1⅛ at 65 and Montgomery Ward "A" was up a point at 137.

Shares closing fractionally higher included Gulf Oil at 43, McWilliams Dredging 13¼, Sherwin-Williams 86⅞ and Columbia Oil and Gas 4¾.

Down fractions to a point or more were American Cyanamid "B" at 25⅝, American Gas & Electric 24¾, American Light & Traction 13½, Electric Bond & Share 8⅜, International Petroleum 25⅝, Lake Shore Mines 46½, Niagara Hudson Power 7⅛, Pittsburgh Plate Glass 93, St. Regis Paper 3⅝, Wright Hargrave 6⅜.

Volume was 532,000 shares against 398,000 yesterday.

Mrs. Meckley Defeats Marion Brown to Win Mid-Atlantic Crown

DETROIT ELEVEN HUMBLES CATHOLIC U. BY 30 TO 0

The Washington Post Sports

20 WASHINGTON: SATURDAY, OCTOBER 16, 1937 X*

This Morning

Dear Commish: Don't Adopt Rasslin'.

By Shirley Povich.

District Boxing Commissioners,
General Delivery,
Washington, D. C.

Hello Suckers:

I see by the papers as how you want to take over and regulate wrestling in the District like you do boxing and somebody ought to wise you up—at least give you an even break. Don't fool around with wrestling—you'll get hurt!

POVICH.

Did you ever try sticking your finger in an electric fan? Well, then, stay out of this wrestling racket. It can't be regulated, it can't be supervised and it can't exist as anything but a racket. You're asking for a constant headache when you're asking for control of wrestling.

• • • •

Since when have you gentlemen gotten so naive that you think anybody can make a well-ordered sport out of wrestling? Or maybe I'm wrong. Pehaps you people are men apart from the common herd—Twentieth Century Solomons who, in your infinite wisdom, can handle this thing. But don't say you weren't warned.

• • • •

I'm kinda curious about just whose idea this regulation of wrestling might be. If it originated with all of you or any one of you, or your zealous commission secretary, then you ought to be enlightened, because you're asking for a mess of grief.

• • • •

Certainly the demand for commission supervision of wrestling hasn't come from Promoter Joe Turner, who is doing very well thank you, without the commission messin' 'round in his wrestling affairs. And if the man on the street is asking for it, then he'd better lift his voice because nobody but you gentlemen have apparently heard him.

• • • •

Everybody, it seems, is very happy about the wrestling situation as is except you gentlemen of the Boxing Commission who might improve your idler moments by uplifting the boxing business which is not exactly booming here. Joe Turner is buying no yachts, but he is content. The fans have not regarded the commission's absence from the wrestling racket as any great aching void, and just what the commission's squawk in the matter is I am at a loss to understand.

• • • •

When, and if, you get a hold of this wrestling business, you'd better lay in a supply of aspirin, because you're coming out of it with hurt feelings, and a ruffled dignity. And if it doesn't make chumps out of you then you are, indeed, men apart, because every commission that has trifled with wrestling has collected only a mess of grief.

• • •

Sure, wrestling is plenty phoney as they stage it nowadays. But that's probably its chief charm—the grunts, the grimaces and the ham acts. Joe Turner doesn't round up his customers with a blackjack or shillalah. Thus far they've laid it on the line of their own free will and seem to like it.

• • • •

There ain't no call for commission interference in Turner's harmless little racket, but, if you insist, you're letting yourself in for it. There won't be a shred left of any dignity that the commission happens to have now, because wrestlers, as I was saying, can't be regulated, and any attempt to do that will make chumps of you gentlemen—I almost said youse guys.

• • • •

It can't be regulated because, for one thing, any attempt to regulate it would kill the racket. If they couldn't have their phoney matches, if they couldn't bang their heads against the ring posts, if they couldn't meet guys of their own choosing, with their own clowning referees in the ring, then they couldn't stage their shows.

• • • •

In short, you'd have on-the-level wrestling, which is adways to be feared. Straight wrestling, without the phoney stuff, is about as exciting as a telegraphic chess match and every bit as attractive from a customer viewpoint.

• • • •

I just thought I'd tip you off.

Yrs. in Sport, S. P.

There comes to hand from Lawrence (Red) Hardy, captain of the Georgetown University football team, a letter that this department is pleased to print:

"Dear Shirley—I know this letter is quite unexpected, but nevertheless I consider it my duty to write you concerning your article on October 13 which had to do with the Georgetown-Redskin scrimmage.

• • • •

"As a representative of the Georgetown team, I think the article was exaggerated, as many facts quite important were missing. For instance, we had three injuries—Bob Nolan with a broken leg, Tom Keating with a fractured rib, and Moulin with a wrenched ankle. Nolan's injury might have happened to any back, as his cleats caught in the ground and the contact with the Redskins' players caused the accident. Keating received a bruised rib in the Holy Cross game, and his injury was unknown to Coach Hagerty or anyone else. Moulin has been favoring a weak ankle for years.

• • • •

"The Redskins came out of the scrimmage with two injuries not mentioned in your column. Eddie Britt received a badly damaged

YoungManor Star Stages Great Fight

Marion Squares Match on Sixteenth Only to See Foe Win.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

By the slender margin of a perfectly executed stymie on the eighteenth and final green, Mrs. Betty Meckley yesterday regained her crown as queen of the Middle Atlantic golfers by repulsing the threat of Manor's young star, Miss Marion Brown, 1 up, over the victor's home Indian Spring course.

Apparently forced into extra holes by a trick of fate that left Miss Brown's 10-foot putt on the edge of the cup, the new champion calmly picked a niblick from her set of clubs and chipped over the ball blocking her path, and into the cup in as thrilling a finish as the gallery of several hundred persons has ever witnessed.

Favored from the start to regain a crown she held when making a grand slam of the Maryland, District and Mid-Atlantic tourneys in 1935, the host club representative came through in a style that marks her as one of the all-time links greats of the Mid-South section.

From the first hole, when she took a lead with a 1-over-par 5, the veteran player of the finalists was never down although three times the Manor Club champion came from behind to square the issue—on the second, seventh and sixteenth holes—th latter occasion after being 2 down and 4 to play.

Even on the tee of the short, par-3 semifinal hole, Miss Brown appeared to have an advantage after the drive, but lost the hole as Mrs. Meckley came through with a chipping and putting exhibition that is the secret of her links triumphs.

There was little choose as they surveyed their second shots on the finishing hole, the eventual winner 1 up, playing for a halve, her younger opponent 1 down, and needing a 4 or maybe a 3 to square the match.

They both played short of the green, with Miss Brown away. She approached within 10 feet of the hole, while Mrs. Meckley barely reached the green, and 25 feet from the pin. Her first putt was to the left and nearly 3 feet away.

By sinking the 10-foot putt, the blonde coed from the Manor Club could force the match into extra holes and possibly add the championship to her previously won medalist laurels. Carefully stroking the ball, it just caught the right-hand side of the cup and settled, a dead stymie, in front of Mrs. Meckley's 3-foot putt.

Undaunted by the change in events that may temporarily rob her of victory, Mrs. Meckley picked the niblick, surveyed the stymie, front and back, and then chipped, the shot carrying over her opponent's ball, bounding once on the soft turf and falling into thec up on a "one-in-a-million shot."

Both were out in 42, Mrs. Meckley winning the first hole, Marion the second, the host star the fifth and losing the seventh to a birdie. They turned all square.

After halving the tenth, Miss Brown caught a trap on eleven and after failing to get out with her first tee shot conceded the hole. She lost the next by three-putting but cut the margin to one with a nicely played birdie on thirteen.

Mrs. Meckley won the fourteenth with a 3, establishing a 2-and-4 margin, but lost the long holes to 5-6, as she was in trouble with her woods. That evened the match and set the stage for the thrilling wind-up.

The winner's medal score was 84, including the disastrous 6-7 on the long par 5 holes on the back nine.

Helen Dettweiler, Congressional, won the first flight consolation over a clubmate, Mrs. Roland MacKenzie, 3 and 2. Mrs. J. F. Dowdall took second honors over Mrs. Florence Godfrey, 5 and 4, while the consolation went to Mrs. F. D. Letts, Chevy Chase, 3 and 2, victor over Mrs. Hope Wilkinson, Indian Spring.

Gastanaga Whips John Henry Lewis

Olympia Stadium, Detroit, Oct. 15 (U.P.).—Isadoro Gastanaga, a lumbering heavyweight from Cuba, tonight won the decision over John Henry Lewis, light heavyweight champion of the world, in a nontitle 10-round contest.

The champion, unable to keep away from the lefts of Gastanaga, was knocked to the canvas three times. Twice in the first round he bounced up before Referee Elmer E. (Slim) McClelland could start the count, but in the third round Lewis took a nine count before he wobbled to his feet.

Joe Fraber Seriously Hurt As Roosevelt Wins, 13 to 0

Roosevelt High School suffered a severe jolt to interhigh title hopes yesterday when Joe Fraber, its star fullback, was carried from the field suffering a possibly fractured pelvis bone in the third period of a football game with St. Alban's. The Rough Riders won 13-0.

Approximately 1,000 fans in the Roosevelt stadium saw the husky Fraber fall victim to a freak accident. Carrying the ball on a line plunge, Fraber was hit about the knees with a flying block executed by Billy Adams, a St. Alban's substitute of little more than half his size. The big Roosevelt back was catapulted high into the air and fell heavily on his shoulders.

The Roosevelt trainer announced after a hurried examination that the extent of Fraber's injury could not be immediately determined but that it appeared to be a fracture of the right pelvis.

The Rough Riders scored their first touchdown in the initial period when Dick Metzler blocked a St. Alban's kick on the 10-yard line and recovered in the end zone. The second six-pointer was made possible in the third quarter by a 30-yard pass from Fred Mundy to Hal Marks which placed the ball on the St. Alban's 3.

After two unsuccessful line cracks, Marks carried the ball through center for the final points. After the first goal Joe Kolker place-kicked the extra point.

Marty Gallagher Wins Over Lenglet on a Foul

Washington Lad Ahead on Points When Bout's Halted.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 15.—Marty Gallagher, of Washington, D. C., was awarded the decision over Andre Lenglet, of Paris, tonight when the Frenchman was disqualified for a foul blow in the eighth round after repeated warnings against low punches.

Gallagher was substituting for Jorge Brescia, of Argentina, who was forced to withdraw because of a sudden case of grippe. The bout was scheduled for ten rounds as part of a double-windup heavyweight card.

Gallagher weighed 209½; Lenglet, 211½.

Referee Joe Vaccarelli warned the Frenchman repeatedly for his butting tactics before waving Lenglet to his corner after 2:04 of the eighth had elapsed. Previously Lenglet had been penalized two rounds for low punches.

Gallagher, a last-minute substitute for Jorge Brescia, Argentine heavyweight champion, who was stricken with influenza earlier in the day, was well ahead on points and was giving Lenglet a boxing lesson when the fight was halted.

Gunnar Barlund, Finnish heavyweight champion, stopped Eddie Coderre, of Providence, in the first round of their ten-rounder. Barlund weighed 202¼ and Coderre 181.

Before the fight was a minute old, the New Englander was covering his head with his hands as protection against Barlund's right-hand blasts and the crowd of 2,500 was yelling for Referee Jack Denning to stop it.

Denning intervened after Barlund had floored Coderre with a short right to the chin. The time was 2:16.

Navy Is Favorite Over Harvard Team

Hardwick Runs Team Through Final Drill, Perfecting Pass Defense; 45,000 Expected to See Colorful Contest in Baltimore.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 15.—The Navy football team finished today its training for a major test with Harvard and will enter the Baltimore Stadium tomorrow to make a determined bid for victory and a rating among the gridiron leaders of the country.

Lieut. Harry J. (Hank) Hardwick, Navy coach, directed the squad in the usual pre-game warmup drills consisting of passing, kicking and signals. He finished his hard training yesterday.

During the week the Navy has mastered a series of new plays, scrimmaged continually against Harvard plays and worked out defense against the Crimson forward passes and spinners.

Hardwick said the contest is a "crucial" one for the midshipmen, coming as it does before the games with Notre Dame, Pennsylvania, Columbia and Princeton. He will put a team on the field geared for a power attack and ready to keep the pressure on throughout the game. He said he expects to make few substitutions.

In the Navy preparation means of stopping the Harvard ground attack rated secondary to defense against passes. The hard charging Navy line is in good physical shape, but will face a forward wall only three pounds lighter in total weight from end to end. The Navy ends, Irwin Fike and Lucien Powell, are heavier than the Harvard ends.

While the team practiced the advance sale of seats exceeded 43,000 and Academy athletic authorities estimated an attendance of 45,000. Last fall 40,000 spectators saw the Navy-Yale game in the same stadium.

The 40 members of the Navy squad, headed by Comdr. Andrew C. McFall, graduate manager of athletics will leave the Academy by bus tomorrow at 11:30 a. m. going direct to the stadium. They will be escorted by State and Baltimore City police.

The regiment of midshipmen, 2,118 strong, will travel to Baltimore on four special trains. They will march on the stadium field at 1:15 p. m.

The "pep committee" of the regiment has worked out ten designs the midshipmen will make with cards between the halves.

Lazzeri Gets Release by Yanks' Club

Veteran Infielder Sought as Manager by an Unnamed Team.

By the United Press.

New York, Oct. 15.—The New York Yankees tonight announced the unconditional release of Tony Lazzeri, clearing the way for the veteran second baseman to negotiate for a major league manager's job.

LAZZERI.

Owner Jacob Ruppert granted the release when approached by representatives of another club, who assured him they were "not interested in Lazzeri as a player."

Lazzeri, hero of the last World Series, who has held the regular keystone corner position on the Yankees for the past 12 years, was en route to his home in Milbree, Calif., and did not know of the Yankees' action. The 33-year-old Italian threw his hat in the ring for a manager's job toward the end of the season, when he announced he probably would retire as an active player.

Name of the club seeking Tony was not divulged by the Yankee office. There are two major manager's jobs open at present. The Boston Bees are seeking a man to replace Bill McKechnie, who quit to manage the Reds, and the St. Louis Browns have not definitely decided to retain Jim Bottomley, who stepped in when Rogers Hornsby was fired.

Corr Eleven Open Season on Sunday

Corr Sport Store 135-pound eleven will practice today at 3:30 o'clock at Third and Douglas streets in preparation for its opening game tomorrow against Georgetown Boys Club in Ballston, Va.

The team will met on Sunday morning at 11:30 at Corr's Sport Shop, 812 Ninth street northwest, where uniforms will be issued.

Unbeaten Cardinals Easy Prey for Foe

Home Team Swept Off Its Feet Early by Fast Invaders in Griffith Stadium Contest; Farkas Leads Detroit to Victory.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Failing to match the power and finesse of Detroit's powerhouse by a mere 30 points, Catholic University's eleven toppled from the ranks of the unbeaten last night at Griffith Stadium in plain view of some 10,000 fans. The score was just 30 to 0.

You can blame it all on a wasp-waisted, thick-legged lad answering to the name of Andy Farkas, Titan halfback. Without him in there it might have been a fairly even ball game, for his three touchdown gallops not only accounted for a majority of Detroit's points, but drained all the starch out of Catholic's iron men.

Detroit gained 268 yards from scrimmage, of which approximately 230 can be credited to Farkas. He romped 79 yards for the game's first touchdown in the second period; took the opening kick-off of the second half and sprinted 94 yards through the entire Catholic eleven for another, and in the final quarter burst off tackle, reversed his field, and scampered 57 for still another. He was pretty much of a nuisance to the Bookland boys.

Johnny Shado and Ray Larson presented Detroit with its remaining points. Shado staked his mates to a 3-to-0 lead early in the first period with a neat 25-yard placement, while Larson took a pass from Palumbo and fell into the end zone for a touchdown midway in the third stanza.

For about three minutes the Cardinals offered what the trade refers to as stubborn resistance, threatening at one stage to chase Gus Dorais' gang right back into its dressing room. But that was before Mr. Farkas got the go signal. Big Leo Katalinas, Wayne Ambrose, Capt. Vic Sochon and Art Sabo played a whale of a game in the line, and ditto for Bud Munhall in the backfield.

But where Catholic had 11 regulars, Detroit had 22. Dorais substituted team for team and if there was any difference between the two it wasn't discernible last night. It was pass and run, run and pass, play after play. Give credit to the home team for keeping the score down as it did.

As a matter of fact, only a great defensive play by Munhall, who eluded three blockers and brought down Slovinsk on the 17-yard line in the second period, saved Catholic from another touchdown. And on still another occasion Jim Murphy, substitute Titan signal caller, was getting in the clear for a certain touchdown when one of his own men knocked him off balance.

Catholic made no genuine scoring threat, although it had the ball on Detroit's 27-yard line after recovering a fumble as early as the first play of the game. Again, late in the same period the Cards marched from their own 17 to Detroit's 23 only to be repulsed by the Titans' iron-clad defense. A well conceived pass play, Burke Vidnovic to Bud Munhall, thrown from kick formation, accounted for most of the ground gained.

GONZAGA WHIPS TECH; EASTERN SWAMPS WILSON

McKinley Helpless in 20-0 Defeat

Jim Ellis, Jim Shaw Lead Attck on Public High Champs.

By Jack Munhall.

Gonzaga Prep's powerful eleven took a step nearer the city championship yesterday when its fleet backs ran a heavier Tech team into the ground and buried it there beneath a 20-0 count.

More than 1,500 fans huddled together in the Tech Stadium and were first amused and then utterly surprised as Orrel Mitchell's invaders systematically took the public high school champions apart to record their third straight victory.

A couple of guys named Jim—Halfbacks Shaw and Ellis—were the chief conspirators in the plot that toppled McKinley. Ellis and Shaw, a fast and elusive pair of backs, ripped Tech's bulky line to shreds to romp to two touchdowns in the first and fourth quarters. Quarterback Eddie Shea tallied the second score in the second period.

Tech's Attack Stopped.

Tech's running attack was unable to move in face of the Gonzaga forward wall which twice halted threats within the 15-yard line. Jack Belote, Tech's triple-threat quarterback was a source of great annoyance to the Purple with his wide end sweeps between the Tech 30 and the Gonzaga 30, but was halted whenever Tech threatened the invaders' goal, uncrossed this season.

The blocking of Captain Joe McDonald, center, and Louis Difilippo, fullback, for Gonzaga stood out as they cleared the path for Ellis and Shaw. Henry Rassier, stocky fullback shared with Belote the little offensive Tech showed.

In the first quarter, after an exchange of punts, Gonzaga produced its first touchdown. Shea took Belote's kick on the Gonzaga 20 and returned it to the 25. Shaw and Ellis picked up a first down on the Tech 35 and another on the 46. Here, on the next play, Ellis swept through right guard behind perfect interference, skipped into the clear and raced 54 yards across the goal line. Belote gave chase but was outdistanced by the Gonzagan.

Fenwick's placement for point was wide.

In the second period, Shaw intercepted a pass from Belote on the Tech 41. When he was roughed after the catch, Tech was penalized 15 yards to its own 26. From there, Gonzaga immediately moved. A reverse, Shaw to Shea, produced a first down on the 12, and Ellis cracked right tackle to move the ball to the 8.

A reverse, Shaw to Shea, found the latter stepping for the score without a hand being placed on him. The point after touchdown was made from fake placement on a pass from Ellis to Heiberger in the end zone.

In the fourth quarter Shaw found a gaping hole at left guard and sped 17 yards to the third touchdown.

$5,000 Golf Event Lead To Revolta

Oklahoma City, Oct. 15.—Johnny Revolta, the Chicago golf artist whose temper flared when his opponents refused to concede a putt, bore down on the back nine today and led a crack field of 16 pros in the second round of Oklahoma City's $5,000 four-ball tournament with a par 71.

Visibly rifled, Revolta putted all the better on the last four greens, and his consistent work gave him and Partner Ray Mangrum, of Dayton, Ohio, a 1-up victory over Harry Cooper and Horton Smith, of Chicago.

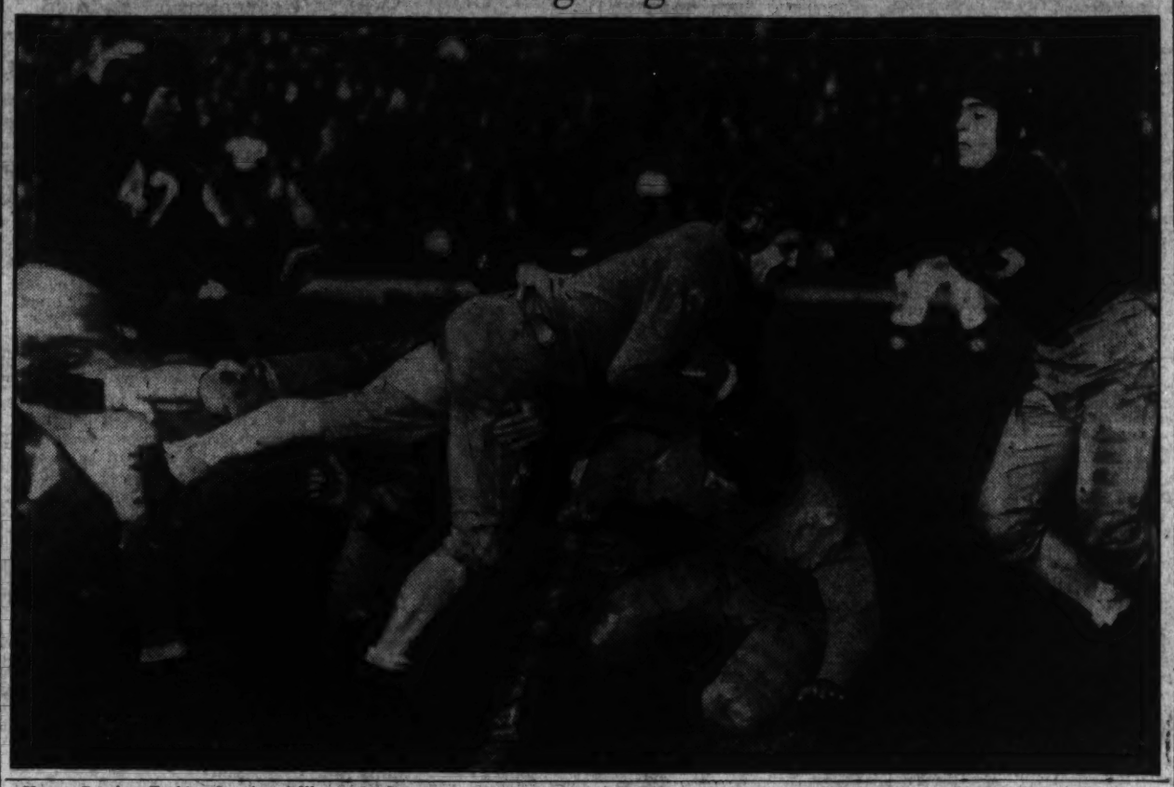
Cooper and Smith rounded the turn all-square with Revolta and Mangrum, but Revolta's game improved after his flare-up on the eighth hole, and only a birdie by Cooper on the eighteenth saved the Hooper-Smith due from a 2-point beating.

Ralph Guldahl, Chicago, National Open champion, and Billy Burke, White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., who led the field at the beginning of the second day's play, finished all-even with Tommy Armour, Chicago, and Jimmy Thomson, the long-distance clouter from Shawnee-on-the-Delaware.

Lawson Little, of Chicago, who carded a 72 for the second best score in the second round, and Paul Runyan, of New York, with a 79, scored a 2-up victory over Ky Laffoon and Dick Mets, of Chicago, who had as much difficulty getting the feel of the windswept course as they had the first day.

Ed Dudley, of Philadelphia, and Jimmy Hines, of New York, chalked up 2 plus points by defeating Zell Eaton and Francis Scheider, of Oklahoma City, 2-up.

Action Shots From Leading High School Football Games



Henry Rassier, Tech's plunging fullback, is shown nearing the end of a tackle smash which netted 2 yards in the third period of the Tech-Gonzaga game yesterday. Jim Shaw, Gonzaga halfback, has his hands pressed against Rassier's forehead as if he is trying to keep the runner from him.

As for the Georgetown boys not being equipped to be on the same field with the Redskins . . . I think we are quite capable of taking care of ourselves . . . Snyder, Cavadline, Stralka and Franks would be able to stay with any pro club . . . as for being in our teens, the average age of our team would hit 22 years.

Hilltop Freshmen Defeat Maryland Yearlings, 12 to 0

Scoring in the second and third periods, Georgetown University's freshmen eleven yesterday defeated Maryland's Frosh, 12-0, in a hard, well-played game at Griffith Stadium.

It was an evil omen for the Hoya varsity forces, presaging as it does its defeat in the annual classic with the Terps. It is fast becoming a tradition that the school winning the freshman game always loses in the big battle.

Friends School Beats Woodward Eleven, 7-0

Friends School defeated its old rival, Woodward, 7-0, yesterday in a football game played on the Friends' field. The score was made in the first quarter when Cliff Wannan plunged over from the 5-yard line after a sustained 45 yard march. The point after touchdown resulted from a pass John Fergus to Armand Newmyer.

St. John's Prep Holds Favored Washington-Lee to 6-to-6 Tie

Local Team Deprived 7-6 of Victory by Questionable Decision on Pass for Extra Point.

Arlington, Va., October 15.—For the second straight week Washington and Lee High School's highly-rated eleven was stalemated by a District of Columbia foe here this afternoon, when a stubborn St. John's team battled the Little Generals to a standstill and earned a 6-6 deadlock. The Johnnies scored their touchdown in the third quarter, after the hosts had tallied early in the game by virtue of Anderson's long jaunt with an intercepted pass.

A highly questionable ruling by the officials deprived St. John's of what appeared to be the deciding point on the attempted conversion, when Gallagher's pass to Cady was ruled incomplete on the grounds that the receiver dropped the ball as he fell to the ground on the catch. To close observers, this was not apparent, however, and the ruling was unknown to many of the spectators, who left the stadium under the impression that the Johnnies had won the game by a score of 7-6.

Washington & Lee scored its lone touchdown less than five minutes after the opening kickoff when, after an exchange of kicks, Anderson intercepted Rinaldi's aerial on his own 40-yard line, and dashed 60 yards to score. Anderson's attempted placement for the extra point was blocked by the entire Johnnies' forewall.

Through the remainder of the first half, the Little Generals outplayed the visitors by a wide margin, chalking up 6 first downs to 1, and several times approached to within scoring distance only to be checked by the scrappy St. John's line.

An inopportune lateral pass attempt by Halfback Arnud gave St. John's its score early in the third period. Backed up on his own goal line after an exchange of punts, he was tackled almost in his tracks, and as he went down, he attempted a lateral to Homer Sprinkle. But the ball bounded behind the W. & L. goal line, and Daly fell on it for the touchdown. It was at this point that the incomplete pass ruling dispelled the Johnnies' hopes for victory.

Daly, with two blocked punts to his credit, as well as the tying touchdown, was the individual star for St. John's while the backfield play of O'Connor, Cady and Gallagher was also outstanding. Tucker, big quarterback, stood out for the Little Generals.

Wilson Team 26-13 Loser To Eastern

Kidwell and Kemp Star for Lincoln Park; Losers Show Fight.

By Bob Garrison.

Escorted by "the Krashing Kids," Kidwell and Kemp, touchdown manufacturers extraordinary, Eastern High School's grid agents emerged on the profitable end of a hot business deal with Woodrow Wilson's football company yesterday on the Eastern field, and obtained undisputed possession of first place in the interhigh series by virtue of the 26-to-13 victory.

Although the well-coached, but substitute-shy, Wilson eleven scored twice and at times showed a well-prepared offensive, it was never in a position to take a commanding hand in the transaction as 2,000 school students watched Artie Boyd's lads grab the series lead from Roosevelt and Tech.

The Lincoln Parkers, who had been victims of their own strategy of starting reserves against St. John's in their last game, and had been embarrassed with a 0-0 tie as their reward, presented a strong starting team against the Presidents, only inserting the second team into the game at the opening of the second half, at which time they were in possession of a 19-0 lead.

700,000 Will See Great Grid Card

Cornell and Yale Are Given Edge Over Their Rivals, Syracuse and Army; Minnesota, Alabama, Northwestern Picked to Win.

Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, Oct. 16.—College football, shorn of all hampering competition from other sports, really goes to town today in nearly every town on the map.

There has been no deart hof customers at big games the past three Saturdays and the results have been enough to give the selectors headaches that won't be cured before Thanksgiving. On all counts today's program looks even more pleasant for the men who handle the gate receipts and worse for those who try to name the winners.

In the East and Midwest, especially, some of the season's biggest crowds are expected to watch a lot of games that look exceedingly close from any angle. With some 65,000 due to watch Michigan and Minnesota battle for the "little brown jug" at Ann Arbor, 57,000 looked for at the Pitt-Fordham encounter at New York and two gatherings of 50,000 predicted for the Yale-Army and Carnegie Tech-Notre Dame games, the total for the 20 top games this week falls just short of 700,000.

A few of the other estimated crowds for games that promise to give every fan his money's worth in action are: Navy-Harvard, 45,000; Northwestern-Purdue, 40,000; Colgate-Tulane, Holy Cross-Georgia, Columbia-Penn, Nebraska-Oklahoma, Wisconsin-Iowa and Southern California-Oregon, 30,000 to 35,000 each; and Tennessee-Georgia, Georgia Tech-Duke, Louisiana State-Mississippi, Texas Christian-Texas A. and M., and Southern Methodist-Vanderbilt in the 25 to 30,000 class.

At the risk of further damage to an already shopworn reputation, here's how the prospects for the major games look from this angle:

Pitt Game Is Tops.

Barring further upsets or competition from ivy-clad institutions, such as Cornell and Yale, the Fordham-Pitt game looks like this week's No. 1 contest in determining the Eastern "champion." They have played scoreless ties two years in succession, and it might be the safest bet to predict another. Since Pitt has been tested in more strenuous competition than the Rams, however, the Panthers get the call.

Cornell and Yale, the "Ivy League" candidates for sectional laurels, have the edge over tomorrow's rivals, Syracuse and Army, respectively, but by margins so small they are visible only under a microscope. The Harvard-Navy game could be picked either way without explanations, but from here it looks like the Midshipmen by a shade.

Syracuse is making a rapid comeback under Ossie Solem, but so far doesn't appear to have caught up to Cornell's fine team. Army's passing game, both on offense and defense, was none too good against Columbia, and since then the Cadets have lost Capt. Jim Isbell, star lineman. Yale looks like the team to take advantage of that kind of opportunity. The choice of Navy is solely on the assumption the Middies have faced stronger opposition, while both teams were looking very good.

Michigan Underdog.

Although the Gophers haven't looked like the all-conquering machine of the last couple of seasons, there seems to be no valid reason for not picking Minnesota over twice-beaten Michigan in the leading Midwestern encounter. Illinois, on the strength of its tie with Notre Dame and reports of an improving attack, is the choice over Indiana. Northwestern's showed against Michigan it can produce an attack, which is more than Purdue has done, so the Wildcats get the call.

Florida Is Chosen.

Rambling through the South the choices, dictated by logic or coin-flipping, are Florida over Sewanee, Mississippi State over Auburn, Kentucky over Washington and Lee, Centenary over Baylor, of the Southwest Conference; South Carolina over Davidson, Maryland over Virginia, and Tulsa over Rice.

G.W. High Swamps Training School

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Alexandria, Oct. 15.—Led by Dick Burrell, shifty halfback, who scored four touchdowns, George Washington High School's eleven walloped National Training School here tonight in the George Washington Stadium by the score of 72-0, largest ever made by a local team.

The winners scored heavily in each period, with the fourth, in which 27 points were tallied, being the most prolific. Burrell twice was shaken loose on 30-yard runs; scored once on a 15-yard jaunt, and the fourth on a short line buck.

Norfolk Division Defeats Gallaudet

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 14.—The Norfolk Division eleven defeated Gallaudet College of Washington, D. C., 55-12 here tonight. Fullback Halme led the winners' attack with three touchdowns.

Syd Cohen Sold To Orioles; Price Believed $5,000

Syd Cohen, swarthy left-hander of the Nats' pitching staff, yesterday was sold by Owner Clark Griffith to the Baltimore Orioles in an outright cash deal.

Griffith declined to divulge the sum paid by the Orioles for Cohen, but it was reliably reported at $5,000. Cohen came to the Nats from Chattanooga four years ago and has specialized in relief roles, earning a reputation as the particular nemesis of Lou Gehrig, who did not make a hit off him until the 1937 season.

Cohen is a brother of Andy Cohen, former star of the Giants. He was a first baseman in the minor leagues before blossoming as a pitcher with Chattanooga.

Georgetown Prep Routs Charlotte

Captain and Fullback Ed Cummings led Georgetown Prep's football forces to an impressive 28-0 victory over Charlotte Hall in its opening game yesterday on the Garrett Park field.

The Little Hoyas exhibited a strong line and a well-balanced attack which combined the plunging of Cummings and the accurate passing of Tom Graham, a halfback. Cummings scored a pair of touchdowns in the first and third quarters on off-tackle smashes while Graham accounted for the other two scores with passes.

Evergold Outraces 5 Youngsters to Win Annapolis Purse at Laurel

Alexandrine, Red Rain in A Dead Heat

Camera Fails to Show Any Advantage for Either Horse.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Laurel, Md., Oct. 15.—A length and a half in front of a dead heat for second money, Evergold, a holder of the local track record when he was winning stake races here in his youth, added another purse to his long string in the Annapolis Purse, today's feature race at this course. It was a case of age before beauty for the 8-year-old pointed his tail feathers at five youngsters throughout a mile and a sixteenth of competition.

Red Rain, in the colors of Gladys Whitney and Alexandrine, representing T. Lee Evans, shared second money when the judges, after a lengthy consultation over the picture, were unable to separate them.

Evergold, winner of a recent sprint here, was the Public's Meat today. His approximate odds juggled around even money throughout the wagering and the $4.30 mutuel was satisfactory to his backers.

R. C. Thatcher closed O'Muddy out of his previous race and watched him take the measure of a field of 11 sprinters in ... first race today.

Eran de Persse, a jumper which lost his rider twice before winning his last in New York, came through wit han easy victory in the steeplechase event. The gelding owned by Tommy Hitchcock, finished 12 lengths in front of G. H. Bostwick's Long Shot with Our Sailor third.

Jockey Joe O'Malley rode L. L. Westmoreland's Jadaan to victory in third race. The Hagerstown-Charles Town sprinter came home a length in advance of Sun Antioch with Night Watch third.

Pharolar, which defeated one horse on her last trip to the post, dropped down the class ladder and ran off with the sixth race to pay an $11.90 mutual.

Clever Girl won the seventh at a $9.30 mutuel while the day's finale went to Flagstone at $12.60.

WITH BILL BENNINGS

Selections at Laurel.

Dear Al:

Sabuesco, Argentine horse, owned jointly by Bing Crosby and T. C. Howard, was shipped in from New York to join his stablemates, Seabiscuit, Exhibit and Advocator. These horses will operate in Maryland for the remainder of the season. Heavy frost covered the plant this morning and had the appearance of snow. The horsemen hustled through their work due to the cold. Elmer Trueman, Washington trainer, will winter 22 yearlings for the Milladale Stable at Benning. The horses in training for that stable leave for California after Pimlico. Jimmy Neal reports that he has fired and turned out Dilwin. It looks as though the Bark Brothers are getting ready for their annual game of me today and you tomorrow. Count Alsoranski went into a huddle with himself last night and, after studying the stars for three hours, handed me a blank sheet of paper. He says everything points to nothing and don't play a horse for the remainder of the meeting. He wants all his followers to win a bet by sending $2 to the school lunch fund. Apprentice Jockey J. Vinas was suspended for five days for rough riding in today's third race. America First and Phlox were claimed out of the fourth race by Mrs. P. Da Lee Watts and Tranquility Farms, respectively.

BILL.

First Race—Red Raider was in trouble repeatedly in that last. With clear sailing, this one should take care of this field. Gold Spray finally ran back to good works and won last out. This one is going to be prominent in this field. Early Bloom has closing ability and the distance should help.

Second Race—Marvel Play turned in a good effort last out and gets in light here, thanks to the apprentice allowance. I'm going to string along. Zembla is better than that last when she lost ground. Baby Witt has been kidding and could awake here.

Third Race — Log gets in with feather weight. Comes from a good stable that doesn't run unfit horses and I'm going to take this one despite the long layoff. Rainland and Grand Slam to hold the others safe.

Fourth Race—Unless there's one in here which has been hiding, I believe Rehearsal will take the Futurity. Toddle On looks like a promising youngster and should be a factor. The Hockley-Bruce entry of Botro and Nansemond for the show.

Fifth race—I'm going out on the limb in the big race and will take Fair Knightess. She goes postward with 113 pounds and a mile suits her purpose. I believe she will stick it out. Seabiscuit is due respect but I believe he needs a longer route. Clingendaal has the speed but his ability to stay is questionable. Aneroid, the District hope, may surprise.

Sixth Race—I'm still trying to make Sickelbill beat Sun Asia and I believe the difference in weights will do it. Fore may awake to run a good race.

Seventh Race—Wild Count, recent winner, should come right back in this company. Fredalve and Hit and Run are possibilities. Clocker Mike says Sun Sweep may surprise.

Best Bet—Red Raider.

Terps Meet Cavaliers on Grid Today

Virginians Are Hoping to Avenge 21-to-0 Loss Last Year.

By Bob Garrison.

In what has long been considered one of the Southland's most closely contested rivalries, the University of Maryland's football representatives and the University of Virginia's modernistic gridmen will clash today for the 14th time on the Cavaliers' home field at Charlottesville.

After three weeks of actual campaigning with his first Virginia football team, Frank Murray is said to be pointing for the game and has been timing his offensive weapons this week for the particular purpose of registering his first victory over a major club. Maryland was the winner last year, 21-0.

And from all indications, the toss of the coin that will determine which club will defend which goal and which club will receive the kick-off might just as well decide which will emerge victorious following four periods of blocking and tackling. Virginia, even in the days when it was producing clubs not capable of defeating a first rate prep school club, could always keep the Old Liners on their toes and afford them a busy afternoon of football.

But the followers of the Old Dominion's pride and joy are not basing their hopes of victory on the psychological aspect alone this year. Although the Virginians bowed in straight weeks to Princeton and Navy by one-sided scores, they showed a brilliant defense against the Midshipmen last Saturday, and at times a formidable passing attack, which clicked twice for goals.

Maryland may enter the game today without the services of Jarring Jim Meade, its star running back. In that event its stock will drop several points, and Virginia should be regarded as a slight favorite, boasting really outstanding tackles in Cocaptain Billy Weeks and Billy Hoback, and clever backs in Jim Gillette, Ted Sharretts and Bus Male.

The sudden death of Meade's mother forced his absence from practice during most of the past week, but he reported to Coach Frank Dobson Thursday and worked out with the squad. Dobson said, however, that the insertion of Meade into the game today would depend entirely upon the decision of the star himself.

In the event that he does not choose to play, Maryland will offer a club that will be well balanced, though not heavy or too experienced. Charlie Weldinger, a passing quarterback; Blair Smith, end, who snags passes with the greatest of ease; Mike Surgent, guard; Bob Walton, diminutive center, and Pershing Mondorff, soph ball carrier, should make their presence extremely noticeable to the Cavaliers.

The line-ups:

Maryland.	Position.	Virginia.
Smith	L.E.	George
Albarano	L.T.	Weeks
Wolfe	L.G.	Schmidt
Walton	Center	Berkeley
Surgent	R.G.	Acree
Brown	R.T.	Hoback
Bryant	R.E.	Sargeant
Waldinger	Q.B.	Male
Hewitt	L.H.	Gillette
Mondorff	R.H.	Sharretts
Borda	F.B.	McClausherty

Eagles Face Mounts With Weak Team

Three Regulars Out of Line-up Because of Injuries.

A crippled American University eleven faces its toughest test thus far this season when it travels to Emmitsburg, Md., today to do battle with the formidable Mount St. Mary's College team.

Without the services of three of its regulars, the Eagle eleven will be patched up with substitutes and men playing new positions to face a squad of Mountaineers who are in top form for the battle.

Two of the American absentees will be backs—the promising freshman, Johnny Jablonski, and Sam Hickey. A badly pulled ligament in his leg has forced the sideline recline of Jablonski, while Hickey is nursing a rib injury.

George Brown, first-string end, is also giving way to an injured leg, and his absence, coupled with the shift of Bugs Hanawalt, guard, to the backfield, has caused Coach Gus Welch to revamp the entire forward wall.

The loss of Bob Hall, center, for the rest of the season is being offset by the insertion of Sam Maize, who held down the spot last year before he was shifted to guard. But, when Welch was forced to move Hanawalt from guard to fullback to fill in for Jablonski, he weakened the right side of the line, albeit he was making a clever switch from the backfield viewpoint.

As it now stacks up, Welch will send this lineup against the Marylanders, who held Canisius to a one-touchdown victory:

Don Davido and Pet Sitnik, ends; Kimber Shoop and Jim Nelson, tacvkles; Maize, center; Hal Toner, quarterback; Emerson Bartlett and Mervin Harris, halfs, and Hanawalt, fullback.

All members of the Saints' squad have been reporting to practice this week in fine fettle and the squad has been strengthened by the return of Frank Shemonsky, veteran blocking back, who has been out for the last two weeks with a knee ailment.

Although weakened by the insertion of Lavido, sub end, and Nelson, sub-tackle, Welch is counting on the services of Bartlett, who showed creditably against St. John's last week to carry him through to victory. The combination of Toner and Bartlett give him experience while Harris and Hanawalt are expected to add vim and ambition to the backfield.

Mounties' Soccer Team Plays Today

Mount Rainier High School's soccer ball team travels to Bladensburg today in an effort to win their second straight over the Peace Crossers. The first tilt, played at Mount Rainier, was won by the Mounts, 2-0.

The game, which gets under way at 3:30 p. m., will be watched with unusual interest by fans of Prince Georges County. Bladensburg tied Maryland Park in their first encounter and went on to win from Hyattsville.

Coach Edward Arnold has on hand the entire squad that lowered the colors of Bladensburg over a week ago. They are: Newell, goalie; O'Connor and Rolfes, full backs; Iager, Landolt, and Hysan, halfbacks; R. Riddle, J. Miller, Catalina, Taylor, Klopfer, D. Riddle, and Green, linesmen. Redman and Yeatman, capable subs, will also be ready to lend a helping hand.

Scribes Continue Selections In Hope of Raising Average

Here they come again—

There's something about a sports writer, he never knows when he's had enough. After the embarrassing setbacks suffered by several members of the staff when their selections were compared with the actual scores of last Saturday's games and their averages of correct choices compiled, they come right back for more this week.

After Arthur "Dutch" Bergman, Catholic University football coach, showed the boys a thing or two about picking scores, by compiling a higher average than any member of the staff, members finally pocketed their pride and mustered enough courage to request another coach, this time Perry Wilkinson, athletic director at Mount Rainer High School, to continue the "guest" selector's average.

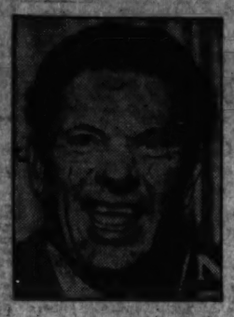
Bob Burns Says—



There ain't no question in my mind but what the ingenuity of the American people is the cause of this bein' the wonderful country it is today; back home we still have'ta figger a lot'ta things out for ourselves.

One of the best examples of this is our old country doctor—old Doc Hocks. These new-fangled diseases are comin' out faster than he can keep up with 'em and once in a while he has'ta fall back on his ingenuity. Not long ago he was called in on one of those new-fangled cases and it had him puzzled for a long time. Finally he asked the man's wife for a glass of water. He says, "I want'ta give him some medicine."

The man's wife says, "Oh, you've found out what's ailin' him!" Doc Hocks says, "No, but this medicine will throw him into a chill and there ain't nobody in the world can beat me curin' a chill!"

'Slap America,' Chinese Told In Propaganda

Tientsin Workers Urged to Boycott U. S. Goods and Support Japan.

By the United Press.

Shanghai (Saturday), Oct. 16.—The United Press today obtained copies of anti-American chain letters, circulating in Tientsin among Chinese employes of foreign companies, urging boycott of American goods and proposing Chinese-Japanese co-operation against foreigners throughout the Pacific. The letters were signed "Chinese KKK."

"Slap the Americans' faces if they bluff you," the letters said. "They'll respect you then."

"American-sponsored education killed all the good Chinese teachings and substituted American cowboy conduct, worshiping money above everything, disregarding chivalry and character.

"American vices were imported, including Hollywood pictures and American magazines filled with advertisements leading Chinese boys and girls to act funny like the actors in the cinema . . .

"What is worse, Americans sowed in the hearts of the Chinese generation the seeds of anti-Nipponism.

"Do not fool yourselves about American help against Japan . . . They will let their own parents down if selfish interests are involved. Japan has been for 1,000 years under one emperor's family, and certainly has better traditions than America which is only 150 years old and started as an exile.

"Let us co-operate with the Japanese because the service rendered the occidentals is unappreciated and they only stick up their noses while the Japanese would be most grateful. . .

"The Yellow Sea must be made the 'Yellow Ocean' by immediate action of the Japanese army and navy and Chinese resources before completion of world-trade rearmament in 1942.

"While the Italians are struggling to control the Mediterranean, we must own the Pacific and control Hawaii, Luzon and other Islands.

Tientsin was seized by Japanese troops early in July when the war began in North China and is now dominated by the Japanese.

Fast Police Work Returns Clothes Of 'Judas' Victim

Because he had trusted a chance acquaintance on a bus trip to Washington early this week, Edward Sharretts, 24, of Johnstown, Pa., hobbled into police headquarters yesterday morning, bedecked in a borrowed sweater and pants, and his landlady's slippers.

But, after making his complaint to Lieut. Warren Embrey, Sharretts waited only 15 minutes before the wheels of justice had ground out a phone call to Conowingo, stopped a bus, and Baltimore police arrested the suspect. With him, it was reported, were Sharretts' missing clothes.

Sharretts told police that he had met his former roommate on a bus, that they had decided to room together at 913 E street northwest. Yesterday morning he awoke early to find his roommate, money, clothes and a ticket to Johnstown, Pa., all missing.

Boyd Leaves Million.

Philadelphia, Oct. 15 (AP).—The will of William Boyd, former vice president and advertising director of the Curtis Publishing Co., probated today, showed he left an estate of $1,050,000. The entire estate will go to three daughters and a son except for two annuities of $2,000 and small gifts.

Parley Set to End Steamfitter Strike

A conference expected to end at once the strike of 400 steamfitters on the Capitol air-conditioning project will be held today or tomorrow, J. M. Botts, representative of the strikers, said yesterday. Meeting in the office of Architect Lynn, representatives of the Steamfitters and Helpers Union failed to agree on a proposal set forth by the architect.

Lynn then took under consideration a proposal offered by the the Pagenhardt firm, steam header and boiler contractors on the job, to employ only union workers, Botts said. "Should Pagenhardt refuse," he added, "we will ask the architect to give the contract to the next lowest bidder on the job."

Court Upholds Term Over Contraceptive

Salem, Mass., Oct. 15 (U.P.).—Conviction of four women, one a physician, on charges of selling, exhibiting and keeping contraceptives was upheld by Superior Judge Wilford D. Gray today.

In upholding a lower court decision, Judge Gray reimposed the original fines of $100 each, but suspended payment pending appeal to the State Supreme Court.

Series Will Continue At Albright Memorial

The series of sermons on the general subject "Things That Cannot Be Shaken" will be continued at Albright Memorial Evangelical Church Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. The Rev. Charles Schnabel's theme Sunday will be "God's Book Among Many Books."

Dr. Clinton Howard will be the guest preacher tomorrow night. He will address a community mass meeting on the Constitution.

Son Keeps Fireman Busy.

Oakland, Calif., Oct. 15 (AP).—Harry S. Hoxworth, city fireman, learned today who's been responsible for much of his hard work lately. His son, Alfred, 34, pleaded guilty to turning in false alarms.

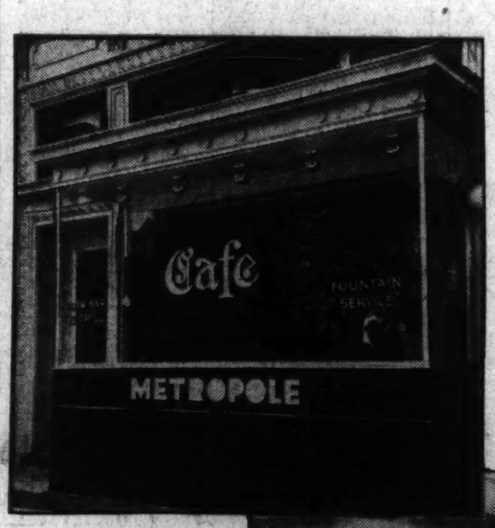
Formal OPENING WEEK

of the

METROPOLE Raw Bar and Grill

1018 14th Street N. W.



Washington's Newest and Most Modern Restaurant

The Metropole has opened with the idea in mind to provide Washingtonians with the finest foods that can be bought . . . to prepare them tastefully . . . to serve them courteously, whether you order a sandwich or a full course dinner . . . and to price our food to a minimum. To have you with us regularly is the ideal toward which the Metropole is dedicated. Won't you come in for breakfast, lunch or dinner.

At the Metropole, Washington's newest and most modern restaurant, you may order a sandwich or a complete dinner with the assurance that everything will be done to insure your satisfaction. Here, quality foods at reasonable prices will rule. Here, you may eat quickly or unhurriedly. Here, you may meet your friends and feel at home, for the atmosphere will always be friendly and homelike. Make a date to eat at The Metropole for food that is better.
